The greatest idol in America, if not in the world—the superb home-run hitter who has broken the record and established one of his won which may stand for decades—the King of Swat, Babe Ruth, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Headin' Home," his first feature picture. The idol makes his debut as a motion picture actor in a story based upon the theme of "making good." And he scores as easily, as surely, as when he poles a home-run over the grandstand of the Polo Grounds. Written and directed by R. A. Walsh, "Headin' Home," is certain of carrying interest. Don't miss this opportunity to see Big Babe.

SKYWAYMAN, THE (FOX) LIEUT. LOCKLEAR..... SEPT. 11
"Slight story is excuse for average 'plane stunts."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Box office returns big on opening days. Too early to get entertainment angle." "Business fell down after the opening and on Saturday Tom Mix in "The Untamed" replaced it. Killing of aviator at State Fair is believed to have affected business."

"Normand in kind of role which made her famous."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just a fair picture to average business for three days." "A good picture to excellent business for one week." "This one was only a fair picture and a fair box-office attraction." "Great picture. Went big." "Good picture. The crowds apparently agree, for they certainly made the box office thermometer mount."

"THE HOUSE OF WHISPERS"
(Brunton-Hodkinson)

Kerrigan Has Another Interesting Mystery Story

THERE is no doubt about J. Warren Kerrigan's latest picture, "The House of Whispers," putting the spectator upon his mettle. For some time past the star's offerings have unlimbered one's powers of deduction since they have been founded upon crime and mystery. His present release may be said to equal the others in ingenuity of plot and the manner in which it holds the attention. The author has taken advantage of an apartment house in which to weave his mysterious threads. Certain tenants are convinced that they hear strange whispers and the eerie feeling which they express is caught in some degree by the spectator.

But Ernest Warde, the director, places his cards upon the table too early. It transpires that the guilty are established by the simple process of planting them firmly as crooks. And when they glide about in mysterious channels one is certain that this apartment house is built with secret staircases. This deduction is correct when the third reel is disclosed. The ending is sort of abrupt and the climax doesn't reveal the anticipation of something big. The owner of the apartment has constructed the secret staircases and panels for the sake of robbing his tenants. His assistant seems superfluous except for the mystery that accompanies his movements.

Where this picture differs from its forerunners is in the characterization. One knows that Kerrigan is above suspicion, even though the detectives are hoodwinked. But he solves the mystery by simply tapping a panel and finding it hollow. The secret staircase is revealed and the culprits are caught. There is not so much whispering among the guilty. A good ear would detect footsteps more often. The picture builds with plenty of suspense, the movements of the innocent being quite as mysterious as those who glide about unseen. The romantic element is neglected, naturally, and its introduction is unnecessary. The owner's accomplice figures in this part of the story without offering much logic over his conduct. The only flaw discernible is found in the restless attitude of the hero. It strikes us that if he had stayed in his room for any length of time he would have caught the culprit. The latter must have visited a great deal since he left plenty of written threats. Despite the punctures in the plot, the picture is entertaining. Suspense is striven for and achieved. —Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A mystery story entitled "The House of Whispers," by William Johnston, is the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— with the popular J. Warren Kerrigan as the star. This type of picture is always certain in its appeal through its placing the spectator in a suspensive state of mind. Nearly every one likes to solve mysteries—to unlimber his or her power of deduction. "The House of Whispers" comes to the ———— well fortified with its dominant ingredient-mystery. Mr. Kerrigan reveals himself as a party eager and willing to solve the mystery of the whispers that emanate through the chambers of the tenants and which are frightening them.

He finds written threats and robberies not only in his uncle's apartment but in those of other tenants. But an idea comes to him to tap the wall. Thus the mystery is solved. To reveal any more of this story would be taking away the element of anticipation from the picturegoer. The star gives a good account of himself and his support, containing well known players, is praiseworthy. Ernest C. Warde has directed the offering skilfully. Jack Cunningham attended to the adaptation.

PROGRAM READER

Do you enjoy a good mystery picture? Do you like to unlimber your deductive powers and solve a baffling crime? Then come to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— and see the popular J. Warren Kerrigan in "The House of Whispers." Take our word for it, this picture offers a story which is certain to keep you on the anxious seat. It is crammed with action and suspense. It is mystery with a capital M. The tenants of the apartment house were constantly hearing whispers. What was the solution? Were they crazy? Or were the strange noises the result of criminal efforts? We guarantee sixty minutes of tense excitement.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill this as an exciting picture based upon mystery. Bring out with emphasis that it defies solution. Treat it as a melodrama which offers Kerrigan, Joseph Dowling, Herbert Prior, Claire Du Brey, and Fritzi Brunette. Use the title through the medium of catch lines, teasers, and throw-aways. Bring out that Ernest C. Warde is the director. Treat your copy with plenty of mystery. Don't by any means give away the plot. Tell that your patrons are certain to see a picture which carries tense excitement—a picture which is a model in keeping one mystified. Have your musicians play eerie music. Get your crowd in spirit with the picture.

CATCH LINES

What caused these strange whispers? The queer noises were driving the tenants into a fearful state of mind. What was the solution? See "The House of Whispers."

He hadn't stirred from the room, yet when he went to the safe the jewels were gone! Who took them? Where did the crook hide himself? See Warren Kerrigan in "The House of Whispers."

"THE PRICE OF REDEMPTION"
(Metro)

Lytell Has Hectic Melodrama and Acting Opportunity Here

IT is a colorful melodrama that Bert Lytell has in "The Price of Redemption," even though it is quite beyond the realm of probability. A story of British army life is certain to be crammed with action and this necessary ingredient runs rampant here. Adapted from I. A. R. Wylie's story, "The Temple of Dawn," the plot is founded upon a man's redemption after he has tasted the dregs. The theme in cold print is simplicity itself, but dressed up with incident and climax it becomes genuinely complicated. So much so that one must accept it as adventurous fiction or not at all. After introducing a colorful line of action with the star enacting a brave officer rescuing the garrison from Indian rebels, the plot jumps to London and loses a vitality which is never regained despite the fact that subsequent scenes take the characters back to India.

It is never brought out clearly why the officer should absent himself from home unless through sheer ennui over civil life. The episode of his father-in-law being murdered looks like a "plant" and dragging a girl in as responsible for the crime because he was a tyrant in a factory does much to destroy what logic appeared. The husband becomes a derelict in an Indian city. He has sacrificed his self respect for some reason not established. And his course would not reconcile him with his wife. Coincidence enters when his brother officer marries her and takes her to India. He is as brutal as her erstwhile husband was kind. The derelict recognizes his offspring and through this medium and the influence of the rajah, he is on the road to redemption. A reconciliation follows when the brother officer is dispatched because of a sin against Indian honor.

The picture covers too much ground to hold the attention entirely. The fact that the theme which should have been genuine smacks of the theatre in this instance, robs it of a spiritual note that was present in Lytell's other redemption picture, "Blackie's Redemption." The star is not always at his best in his impersonation. As the derelict he has been allowed too much expression. The scenes are held too long and a variety of close-ups spoil the illusion. He appears more genuine in the military scenes. The story is not a new version of the Sepoy rebellion. The production is rather colorful as to exteriors. In all the picture offers an adventurous hour.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The feature attraction at the ———— theatre beginning ———— is "The Price of Redemption," and adaptation of I. A. R. Wylie's story, "The Temple of Dawn," with Bert Lytell as the star. The picture carries for its central idea the redemption of a man after he has sacrificed his honor and self-respect in order that his wife might find happiness. He is an English army officer who after the Indian campaign returns to London where life becomes exceedingly tiresome. He longs to be back in the army. And when his father-in-law is murdered, he runs away and becomes a derelict in an Indian city.

His wife, meanwhile, has married a brother officer and the action pilots them to India. This man has been marked for death. The erstwhile husband is brought to redemption when he sees his child and with the aid of the girl who forced him to sacrifice his self-respect, his place in society is restored. A reunion with his wife occurs when the brother officer is killed. The picture carries a deal of action and unfolds a story of charming sentiment as well as elements of intrigue, jealousy, hate and adventure. June Mathis adapted the story, while Dallas Fitzgerald directed.

PROGRAM READER

Bert Lytell, the popular Metro star, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "The Price of Redemption," a picture of intrigue, adventure and romance, with the action laid in London and India. It is a story of a British army officer's life and depicts, most vividly, the degeneration and redemption. Mr. Lytell impersonates the character with true dramatic instinct and his company is entirely efficient. The picture unfolds a series of melodramatic situations and climaxes and moves with a vigor which will not be denied. It is an adaptation of I. A. R. Wylie's novel, "The Temple of Dawn." Dallas Fitzgerald directed.

SUGGESTIONS

This is a story of a British officer's' degeneration and redemption and naturally permits the star a wide latitude to express his talent. Play up his name. Play up the fact that the picture offers a deal of colorful action and has for its ingredients, the notes of mystery, adventure, intrigue, hate, jealousy, and romance. Treat it as an adventure story—one rich in vigor and vitality. Tell that Seena Owen and Cleo Madison appear in the cast. Bring out that the author is well known to picture patrons and mention the names of the scenarist and director. The title is a good one and should attract favorable notice.

CATCH LINES

"THE STEALERS"
(Robertson-Cole)

Exceptional from Both Directional and Technical Angles

IN "The Stealers," William Christy Cabanne has given us a unique set of characters, considerable of an idea, one that can be epitomized in a single word, "Faith," and a very considerable basic plot. There is much that is exceptional in "The Stealers" from a directorial and technical angle. Mr. Cabanne's scene where the house is struck by lightning is perfect. The subsequent fire is just as faultless. His big sets, both exterior and interior, are a credit to him or any other director. His rain and wind storm is fully up to the standard of the numberless others we have seen this season. His atmosphere, scenic shots and details in staging the county fair sequences are extraordinary.

It must be confessed that Mr. Cabanne's story—he is author as well as director—resorts often to the convenient, to far fetched coincidence. He has chosen to shoot at a high mark—a theme of "Miracle Man" calibre—and has scored strongly from a production standpoint, missing only in the strength and originality of the dramatic incident counted upon to carry over that great message of faith and the wonders it works. Viewed as a picture intended for the entertainment of audiences, without attempting comparisons, the direction, the acting, which is excellent throughout, and the atmosphere of the offering should get it over.

Acting honors go to William H. Tooker as the "Missioner" and Ruth Dwyer as "Mary," perhaps because they are provided greater opportunities, while Walter Miller makes much of a comedy role. The cast, however, is all star and the selection of types for the rather large roster has been given extra attention. The camera and laboratory work are both deserving of great praise. Some of the tinting and tones on the print we saw has never been excelled.—Length, 8 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Stealers," heralded to be a second "Miracle Man," in theme and point of excellence of production is the feature photoplay booked for the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

Founded on faith—faith in love, in life, in death, in human kind and in God, a big message is contained in this picture written and directed by William Christy Cabanne and produced for Robertson-Cole.

The cast enacting "The Stealers" is all star, every member being selected with great care as to types and particular ability to deliver.

William H. Tooker is the "Missioner," while such other well known players as Norma Shearer, Ruth Dwyer, Jack Crosby, Jack O'Brien, Walter Miller and Mathew L. Betz have important roles.

"The Stealers" is the story of a gang of crooks headed by back-slidden preacher, who work country town fairs using a "mission meeting" in a tent as a cloak for their operations. How they are all converted to a faith in God and humanity forms the basis of an interesting drama that has been faultlessly filmed and enacted amid some most wonderful scenic settings.

There are thrills too in this super production. A most realistic storm scene with its wind and lightning is staged with an attendant fire when a house is struck by a lightning bolt.

PROGRAM READER

Do you remember "The Miracle Man," that masterpiece of the films that thrilled and gripped and left you impressed with its lesson of faith and the wonders it will work? Of course you do.

The ———— theatre has another "Miracle Man" scheduled for showing beginning ———— in "The Stealers," a Robertson-Cole super-production written and directed by William Christy Cabanne and having just such another unique and interesting story founded on the same great theme.

"The Stealers" tells the story of a gang of crooks headed by a man who was formerly a preacher, but who renounced God through domestic trouble and is touring the country fairs with his band of pickpockets and confidence men, using revival meetings as a cloak for his operations.

How the former preacher regains his faith and the manner in which the members of his gang reform make one of the most vital and absorbing screen productions of the year.

In the cast are such well known players as William Tooker, Ruth Dwyer, Jack Crosby, Walter Miller and others of acknowledged reputations and ability.

From the technical angle "The Stealers" is one of the greatest pictures ever filmed. Mr. Cabanne's direction is masterly and his attention to detail and atmosphere is deserving of the highest praise. "The Stealers" is a super-picture in every meaning of the word. We consider it a privilege to present it to the ———— patrons.

SUGGESTIONS

Attention is directed to a special service section on this picture published in this issue in which the exploitation possibilities of the feature are given detailed attention.

"SUNDOWN SLIM"
(Universal)

Carey in Unattractive Role in Complex Story

MOST pictures are made on the assumption that the audience likes to see the hero, no matter how weak he may be in the opening reels, at least show a burst of courage at the end and conquer the villain. But in "Sundown Slim" Harry Carey is a hero who never strikes back. The expected reformation does not come, and after being maltreated for five reels, there is little action even in the climax. He does, however, shoot the villain, whom he has covered with his gun, but this shows no great heroism.

The story itself is involved and hard to follow. Possibly this is because of the too-similar appearance of several characters, more than the continuity, although the latter is not smooth. The picture makes Carey a tramp, who passes the time concocting nonsensical verses. He finds an old pal in a small town and takes the blame for his robbery. Then a feud theme between cattle and sheep owners is brought in and left rather hopelessly again. The action continues with Carey defending the father of the girl against the sheriff. The father is murdered, and the girl falls in love with Carey's pal, so the star is left without any romance. He has acquired a little home, however, and seems content to live there alone.

The role is along the lines of the Will Rogers or Frank Keenan characterizations, and had the story more meat to it, Harry Carey might have been very effective. For the story is not involved because of too much plot, but rather because of its development. One would come away with not a very clear idea of what it was all about. Another thing the picture lacks is physical action. The romance is also very thin. The best spots in it are some good exterior scenes. The cast does not stand out.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Harry Carey, the popular Universal star, will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. "Sundown Slim," his latest production is a simple story laid in the great West. Carey is given the part of a tramp—in itinerant poet who finds the lure of the open road too great for him to resist.

"Sundown Slim" is the name they give him. Out of the dirty box car he tumbles into the town of Antelope, a man's town in a man's country. They like him at Antelope, for he is a likeable, harmless sort of man. In the town he discovers an old pal, who has come back to his home a drunken ruin. In an effort to obtain more money his old pal steals and Sundown unselfishly takes the blame for the crime. It is only when his pal confesses, that Sundown is released and at last has a home for himself. It is then he falls in love, but, as Fate would have it, his pal is in love with the same girl.

The picture affords Carey an unique characterization and one that is bound to increase his popularity. "Sundown Slim" will be shown at the ———— for ———— days.

PROGRAM READER

"Sundown Slim," which will be the feature picture at this theatre on ————, stars the popular Harry Carey. It is an unique story and one that is bound to win favor by its very originality. Carey is cast in the role of a wandering tramp, poetically inclined. But poetry does not always provide for the inner man, so "Sundown Slim," as he is known, tumbles out of his box car into the town of Antelope in New Mexico in search of food. The adventures that befall him in this western town, form the body of the photoplay. It is a perfect role for Carey to play and gives him every opportunity to display his unusual talents. It was directed by Val Paul and was adapted for the screen from the story by H. H. Knibbs. A large and adequate cast support the star, and all of his followers, and they are legion, are promised a rare treat when they see "Sundown Slim." It will be shown at this theatre for ———— days.

SUGGESTIONS

You can probably do best by appealing almost exclusively to the Harry Carey following in this picture. Offer it also as a piece of unusual characterization on the part of the star. Play up the wanderingg poet idea. You may also give small awards for the bbest bit of rhyme on Harry Carey a week or so before the showing. You can flash these on the screen on the opening night of the run. Boost it also as a story laid in the picturesque West, and one that revolves around a feud between cattle men and sheep men.

CATCH LINES

"LITTLE MISS REBELLION"
(New Art-Paramount)

Dorothy Gish Scores in Story Filled With Hokum

DOROTHY GISH'S keen sense of burlesque has not been made the most of in her latest picture, "Little Miss Rebellion," by Harry Carr. Up to a certain point there is revealed as fine a line of comedy as one would want to see. Then the hokum is applied, the spark of satire glimmers out, and the spectator is forced to accept it seriously. The author has placed this inimitable actress in a regulation role, but through her own efforts and Director Fawcett's generosity in permitting her to go the limit, she succeeds in investing the part with considerable zest, humor, and originality. She is a Grand Duchess in one of those mythical kingdoms—a petted child who is unhappy over the conventions which hold her in her place. She wants a good time and finds it with American doughboys who are billeted near the palace grounds.

It is strange that soldiers should find quarters on neutral territory or mythical for that matter. However, this little flaw does not take away the fine measure of comedy and romance which are developed. For the purposes of conflict the Bolsheviki are shown plotting in the very cellars of the palace. And a successful revolution is staged with the result that Marie Louise flees to America and bobs up as a pan-cake tosser in the window of a cheap restaurant. And the Bolsheviki are lugged along too. Here is where the picture loses its sparkle. It seems as if it could have had a dozen developments other than showing the blood-lust of the Reds who are determined to capture and kill their former ruler and steal the crown jewels.

The action becomes real hectic. Coincidence, planted with an exceedingly long and arbitrary arm, shows her falling in their power and her ultimate rescue by the erstwhile doughboy, who, noticing her absence from the hash-house, has gone to her furnished room to investigate. A good pummeling, a quick embrace and it is over. The picture is interesting simply through the efforts of Miss Gish. A person so talented, so well endowed with the spirit of play, should be given material befitting her personality. By applying her original mannerisms, her quaint gestures, she succeeds in making "Little Miss Rebellion" a pleasing entertainment. It is always interesting when she is on the scene despite the Bolsheviki hodge-podge. Ralph Graves makes a likable doughboy and George Seigman a hissable villain.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Dorothy Gish, the inimitable comedienne, will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— in her latest photoplay, a comedy entitled "Little Miss Rebellion," by Harry Carr. The star gets a lot of wholesome fun out of her role of a little grand duchess with a long list of titles. She plays hooky from the palace, has an encounter with a balky mule, mingles with Yankee doughboys in a ball game, and attends a jazz dance with a good looking sergeant. And so the romance is developed between them. Then comes the revolution and sweeps the grand duchess and her faithful servitor, a grenadier, to the East Side of New York.

And it is a far cry from being a hash slinger in a cheap restaurant to receiving the acclaims of the multitude as a duchess. Miss Gish takes full advantage of the possibilities of her role. She extracts every ounce of humor. Ralph Graves again appears as the star's leading man and contributes a good performance. George Seigman, Riley Hatch and Marie Burke are also in the cast. George Fawcett, the veteran actor, is the director. "Little Miss Rebellion" is said to be chock full of laughs and thoroughly enjoyable entertainment.

PROGRAM READER

Coming to the ———— theatre next ———— is Dorothy Gish, the inimitable comedienne of Paramount pictures, in what is considered her richest comedy, "Little Miss Rebellion." The part of the grand duchess is ideal for her and she again demonstrates why she is called the most original actress on the screen. Her gestures and mannerisms are always a delight to watch. As the grand duchess she experiences various trials but her sense of humor comes to the rescue and saves her from despair. The picture is a rare comedy and is thoroughly enjoyable Miss Gish is supported by the capable Ralph Graves, George Seigman, and Riley Hatch. George Fawcett, the veteran actor, is the director. See "Little Miss Rebellion" and chase away the blues.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up the star here. She is your best bet. Tell that she has gained a wide following through her unique comedy talent. Bring out the names of her previous pictures, telling that "Little Miss Rebellion" is a worthy successor to them. Play up the fact that Harry Carr is the author here, that George Fawcett, the veteran actor, is the director, and tell that Ralph Graves appears again as the star's leading man. Treat the picture in a humorous fashion and bring out that it is one of the most enjoyable comedies that ever appeared in your theatre. Bring out that it revolves around a grand duchess who is blessed with a great sense of humor and which saves her from despair when the revolution comes. Use catch lines. But play up the star.

CATCH LINES

See Dorothy Gish, the most original actress on the screen, in "Little Miss Rebellion," a picture of a grand duchess who became a waitress.

"HELP WANTED—MALE"
(Hampton-Pathe)

Too Light and Vapid for a Five Reeler

A DESIRE to place Blanche Sweet in a light comedy part must have been the only motive in translating this magazine story for the screen. In the days of two reelers this subject would have proven an entertaining picture, but in giving it feature footage the sponsor is like a host who offers a healthy guest a dish of ice cream when his appetite craves good, red meat. The title is a winner and the star has an established following. And picturegoers will certainly be tempted in looking the feature over. They will doubtless register disappointment at the end of the hour. For the story comes from nowhere and finishes the same way.

That Henry King has been able to make a fair production is due to his directorial ability. Certainly the plot doesn't warrant it. Even he falters with the comedy relief since it is of a cut and dried pattern. Perhaps the best way to define the subject would be to call it a romantic comedy, although the humor is constantly missing the mark. The plot reveals the age-old game of hearts. A telephone operator inherits a thousand dollars and uses it to catch a husband. She will pose at a seaside resort as a young widow with a mysterious "past." There you have it in a nutshell. A series of groupings and entrances and exits on the part of the nondescript characters take up the action.

Pretty words, pretty clothes, pretty backgrounds—these form the backbone of this fluffy story. Of course it is padded. By extending it with detail the director has done the only thing possible. One finds more interest in his seashore shots and the gowns worn by Miss Sweet than in the plot. The role doesn't put the star on her mettle. All that she has to do is to look pretty, poutful, and well dressed. And she succeeds. But if she wants to be a comedienne she should find a story with some sort of idea or vitality—something with a spark in it. The mild and pleasant action develops to a foregone conclusion. The heroine bags her wealthy husband according to Hoyle and summer fiction. Mr. King returns to the screen as leading man and his poise and repression are delightful to watch. He should grace it with his presence more often because he knows how to carry himself. The exhibitors who play the feature will find in the title a good subject for exploitation.—Length, 5 reels. —Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Blanche Sweet is the star at the ———— theatre beginning ———— in "Help Wanted—Male," with Henry King, the director, featured in the leading male role. This picture is an adaptation of Edwina Levin's magazine story, "Leona Goes A Hunting," and affords the pretty Pathe star a fine comedy role as well as an opportunity to wear many beautiful and modish gowns. As Leona Stafford, a telephone operator, she receives a legacy which enables her to invade the haunts of the wealthy in pursuit of a millionaire for a husband.

The $1,000 legacy, Leona knows, is not enough to retire on. So she buys some lavish clothes, goes to a seaside hotel, poses as a widow and drops hints about a mysterious "past." Her masquerade is going on smoothly until she meets a man who once confronted her at the telephone switchboard. She deliberately sets about to capture him and succeeds. Her efforts get her into no end of difficulties, but her determination to ensnare a man finds its reward. "She gets what she goes after." Miss Sweet plays her part with the charm and talent which are hers on the screen. Henry King returns to the silversheet for this part and his acting is on the same par as his direction. Geo. H. Plympton adapted the story.

PROGRAM READER

She was a telephone operator and one day it happened that she inherited a $1,000 legacy. It looked like a fortune, but she soon discovered it wouldn't keep her a year in clothes. Hence she was determined to catch a husband by posing as a mysterious widow with a "past." Now men are always attracted by the mysterious. There is nothing which fascinates them quite like young and pretty widows. Did the telephone girl succeed in her game of deception? This will be answered for you when you come to the ———— theatre next ———— and see Blanche Sweet in the delightful comedy, "Help Wanted—Male." The old game of falling in love—the ancient pastime of ensnaring a member of the opposite sex is given wonderful expression here. Don't miss it.

SUGGESTIONS

What about this title? You can work up a lot of curiosity and enthusiasm by inserting want ads in the paper or working out your copy after the style of the "help wanted" page in the dailies. Tell that it is a delightful comedy based upon the oldest game in the world—the game of hearts. The heroine is determined to catch a husband—a rich husband and succeeds by posing as the type for which they "fall." Bring out that Miss Sweet is equally at home in comedy as she is in straight drama. Play up the fact that the director, Henry King, has returned to the screen as leading man in this picture. Bring out that it introduces clever scenes of adventure and romance.

CATCH LINES

She was left $1,000. What would she do with it? She decided to use it to catch a rich husband. Did she succeed? See Blanche Sweet in "Help Wanted—Male."

"A SPLENDID HAZARD"
(Dwan-First National)

Good Production and Acting Save This One

THE fact that Allan Dwan has given this adaptation of Harold MacGrath's story a good production and that Henry B. Walthall comes forward with an artistic portrayal—this combination provides compensation for a picture which is burdened with plot shortcomings. The author has covered so much ground in the novel that the director has had a task in presenting it with compact sequences. His work is flawless with the exception of a jumpy continuity which makes the action difficult to follow. It leaps from one thought to another so quickly that the average spectator is somewhat bewildered.

The plot is quite fantastic and has for its central figure a Bavarian who discovers that the blood of Napoleon is in his veins. With such a dominant figure the picture may be called a study in characterization. Naturally, Henry B. Walthall comes into his own with such a heroic role. And he reveals his emotional capabilities to the highest degree, giving a performance marked for its forcefulness and realism. If he dominates the other players this is because he has greater opportunities. It may be that the patrons will find it difficult to reconcile themselves to the conduct of such a figure as the star represents, since his scenes are not closely related. The action pilots him from France to America and eventually to the Island of Corsica, the birthplace of Napoleon. And forced excitement and much mystery accompanies the development.

The hero is crazed with the desire to become Emperor. One is more interested in watching Walthall's expressions than in the plot. A hidden treasure, a map, and a search, help in providing the fantastic touch. The romance is quite neglected in order to make the plot elaborate with action. But it misses fire through the director's obvious effort to cram it full of adventure. A tragic note is felt at the climax since the central figure dies. Yet sympathy is not his reward. There may be some box-office value in the offering through such a combination of names as McGrath, Dwan and Walthall. The picture is technically perfect—the backgrounds, the tinting and lighting eliminating certain plot shortcomings. One flaw will be noticed. What became of the treasure after it is found?—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

Directed by Allan Dwan.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Henry B. Walthall, who is considered by many the most talented actor on the screen, is coming to the ———— theatre beginning ———— in an adaptation of Harold MacGrath's novel, "A Splendid Hazard." Many of the ———— patrons will remember the book and the delightful note of adventure it contained. The author has drawn his hero as a modern super-man, who, born a Bavarian, discovers that he has the blood of Napoleon in his veins. He is a character obsessed with the idea of becoming emperor. The action pilots the several characters from France to America and after various episodes of mystery and intrigue takes them to the island of Corsica, where Napoleon was born.

The picture is marked by splendid photography, the backgrounds generating an atmosphere in perfect keeping with the action. Allan Dwan, who directed the feature, has given it a production which is artistic in every particular. The continuity of scenes is arranged so that suspense is the dominant factor. As for the acting, Mr. Walthall flashes one of his realistic portrayals in the part of the dreamer. He is always convincing. Others who contribute good work are Ann Forrest, Hardee Kirkland, Philo McCullough, Rosemary Theby, Norman Kerry and Thomas Jefferson.

PROGRAM READER

Henry B. Walthall, the Little Colonel of "The Birth of a Nation," and who is considered by many the screen's finest actor, will appear at the ———— very shortly in "A Splendid Hazard," adapted from Harold MacGrath's novel of the same name. This picture offers a real histrionic test since it carries every known dramatic ingredient, but suffice to say that Mr. Walthall is talented enough to portray one of his forceful and realistic performances. We will not go into detail concerning this picture. Doubtless many of you have read the book. For the benefit of those unfamiliar with it let us say that it is a stirring story of mystery, adventure and intrigue. A picture well worth seeing. Allan Dwan is the director—sufficient guarantee of its excellence.

SUGGESTIONS

The names of Henry B. Walthall, Allan Dwan, and Harold MacGrath should be brought out in the exploitation of this picture. It is a combination of names hard to beat. And don't be afraid of letting your patrons know it. Tell that the picture is an adaptation of MacGrath's book of the same name. Emphasize that it brings Walthall back to the screen—the screen which cannot do without him. Tell of his past successes. Dwan's name is familiar to your steady picturegoers. His name is always reconciled with good pictures. The title is a winner. You can state that the picture is a stirring drama of mystery and intrigue. Inasmuch as the hero discovers himself to be a descendant of Napoleon, you might exploit copy in that direction. Feature the players.

CATCH LINES

He discovered that the blood of Napoleon flowed in his veins. And his life was crammed with action. See Henry B. Walthall in "A Splendid Hazard."

Talky Picture Made From Stage Satire

IT is problematical whether the sponsors of this picture could have turned out a more entertaining offering considering the subject matter of the original. The theme has been done on the screen so often that it has outlived its usefulness and the director here has followed first principles by playing safe. It appears as if a keen, satirical comedy might have been made from it—something in harmony with the original. Instead the action presents a deal of moralizing subtitles concerning clothes and the fact that women are apt to become mercenary in their desire to own them. Indeed, it resolves itself into a woman's mental struggle whether her love of finery is greater than her sentiment. After much talk, much posing, much society strutting, she learns that clothes do not make the woman any more than they do the man.

The picture becomes quite tedious because it never gets away from its groove. The heroine has been living, unbeknown to herself, on the bounty of a moral leper. Her one thought is clothes. Comes into the scene a rich westerner who is to be intrigued into matrimony since she learns that her income is vanishing. The big moment arrives when her guardian threatens her with poverty unless she accedes to his demands. It is the only dramatic scene in the picture and the director hasn't made the most of it. He builds it up quite clumsily without a thread of suspense. The hero, standing behind portieres, has heard everything. And absolves her from all blame. The body of the drunken guardian, who is accidentally killed, falling down stairs, is hidden under a rug and the society folk are none the wiser. Thus she learns her lesson.

The central figures are stereotyped when they could have been revealed with personality. The heroine could have been shown in character development or degeneration. Society functions, elaborate backgrounds could have given the picture a tone which is lacking here. One or two sets are employed which have "studio" written all over them. And the characters who people them are relegated to the background so that the heroine may bask in the spotlight. Olive Tell makes an attractive figure as the mercenary heroine and displays a wardrobe certain to rouse any woman's envy or admiration. Little acting opportunity is offered her. Without dialogue, the picture suffers from lack of incident.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Olivia Sherwood ..... Olive Tell
Richard Burbank ..... Crauford Kent
Arnold West ..... Cyril Chadwick
Mrs. Cathcart ..... Zeffie Tillbury
Mrs. Watling ..... Rae Allen
Horace Watling ..... Frank Currier
Miss Mazie ..... Mary Beaton

By Avery Hopwood and Channing Pollock.
Scenario by Arthur Zellner.
Directed by Fred Sittenham.
Photographed by Arthur Caldwell.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Clothes," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ————, is a drama that carries for its central idea the love of finery and display which every normal woman possesses. It depicts the mercenary attitude of a woman who places wealth and what money will buy above sentimental feeling and soars to a climax, which shows that such an attitude is unnatural. Written by Avery Hopwood and Channing Pollock, it scored a decided hit upon the stage some seasons ago, with Grace George as the star. It comes to the screen with a good adaptation by Arthur Zellner and featuring the beautiful and talented Olive Tell.

The heroine is swept by impulses to pose as the best dressed woman of her environment. When she thinks of romance she immediately measures it as to how much wealth it may bring. But by being brought into contact with men who are equally as mercenary she realizes that her whims and fancies are extremely shallow. She learns that finery and display do not bring happiness. Miss Tell's company is adequate. The picture is well staged and carries the correct atmosphere. The gowns featured by the star are certain to arouse admiration with feminine audiences. Fred Sittenham directed.

PROGRAM READER

"Clothes," the latest Metro picture to appear at the ———— theatre, presents that beautiful star, Olive Tell, as a heroine whose sole ambition in life is to dress better than her neighbor. As a play it scored a decided hit, with Grace George in the part interpreted by Miss Tell. It comes to the screen with its charm, logic, and sentiment and offers the star something new in characterization. Olivia Sherwood dreams clothes, thinks clothes until she loses her sense of balance. She will only marry a man for his money, so that he might provide her with a rich wardrobe. Does she learn that her impulses are unnatural? Come to the ———— next ————and see a fascinating star in an equally fascinating picture.

SUGGESTIONS

This picture carries a title which should be valuable to an exhibitor. He can stage a prologue in the shape of a fashion show. He can exploit the fact that it once served as a play for Grace George, and that it was written by two most successful playwrights, Avery Hopwood and Channing Pollock. He can tell that it treats of a theme which is dear to feminine hearts. A natural, normal woman loves to dress well and some sell their souls to present a good appearance. He can advertise the feature as a keen dramatic document of a woman who places clothes first and romance and sentiment afterward. He can advertise the star and announce that she is one of the most beautiful actresses on stage and screen. He can point out the artistic production.

CATCH LINES

She would marry for money because wealth supplied her with a rich wardrobe.

"OCCASIONALLY YOURS"
(Gasnier-Robertson-Cole)

Male Vampire in a Mere Succession of Society Scenes

FOLLOWING out Lew Cody's type of characterization—a male vampire pursued throughout five reels by beautiful women and left in the end still the heart-breaking bachelor—"Occasionally Yours" has an almost negligible masculine appeal. And it is highly probable that even the most romantic flapper will find an excess of the dainty art of making love. Such exaggeration as is made of his personal charms (he need only look at a girl and she is his) is a severe test for anyone's tolerance.

Perhaps its greatest fault from the audience's standpoint, even greater than the slight story, is the fact that the star is made nothing else than a cad. He casts off his first sweetheart and proceeds to break the heart of a second unsophisticated girl. True, he is willing to marry her to make amends, but she learns that he is not sincere, and our hero goes back to his bachelor apartments to start on another conquest and we have a flash of the broken hearted girl and her deceived father weeping upon each other's shoulder.

The story is woefully slow in getting started. The opening reels are entirely unnecessary to the story and the star dilly-dallies about his studio with some artist's models and a trained dog. When the story starts in the third reel Elinore Fair, Barney Sherry, and Lloyd Hamilton, of slapstick fame, make their appearance and afford a welcome relief from close-ups of Cody playing with his dog. Hamilton plays a "boob" and is as good in comedy drama as in rough and tumble comedy.

There are some artistic sets and the photography on the whole is good, except one shot of Cody standing on a balcony in the moonlight. It makes him anything but attractive. While there appears to be room for the type that Cody has created, "Occasionally Yours" overdoes it so much, and has a story that gets started only after wearying the spectator, that it will hardly take with the average audience. Betty Blythe is attractive as the former sweetheart. James W. Horne directed.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

With Lew Cody, the greatest love-maker of the screen, "Occasionally Yours," which will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————, promises to be one of the most popular photoplays offered in ———— in many a day. The screen favorite is here given a role that allows him every opportunity to impress his followers with his mastery of the art of love-making.

The star portrays the role of a Bohemian artist who finds time hanging heavily on his hands despite the fact that he has surrounded himself in his studio by several beautiful models. So he spends the week end at a friends house, and, as usual, all the girls at the party fall in love with him. Beautiful settings in the picture help to bring out the society atmosphere.

The story is a satire. Cody plays the wealthy heart breaker who promises to marry his latest love because he believes her to be dying and wishes to make her happy. Then when she recovers it appears as if this "beloved rogue" has at last been caught in the meshes of matrimony. But the ending of the picture finds him still the happy bachelor, satisfied with the company of his faithful butler and faithful dog.

"Occasionally Yours" will be shown at the ———— theatre for ———— days.

PROGRAM READER

"Occasionally Yours," the Lew Cody feature production which will be the attraction at this theatre on ———— is the greatest opportunity that the bashful swains have had in many a day to really learn the art of love-making. For it is an art, and Lew Cody is an artist. And in this picture he plays a Bohemian painter who surrounds himself with beautiful models to help drive away ennui. But the girls give him little chance to be lonely. They pursue him always and with the inevitable result—their hearts are broken.

"Occasionally Yours" will be shown for ———— days beginning————. Supporting the star are the popular players Elinor Faire, Betty Blythe, Alec Francis, Lloyd Hamilton and Barney Sherry.

SUGGESTIONS

From the title, a post card stunt suggests itself which can be used with any number of variations. It can be used on your mailing list, either as a straight ad, or as a teaser. Boost the star considerably with the aid of lobby photographs. The cast has many well known players. Do not neglect Lloyd Hamilton, and state that he is a member of the old "Ham and Bud" team.

CATCH LINES

"FROM NOW ON"
(Fox)

Entertaining Crook Story, With George Walsh, Well Directed

IT is surprising how Director R. A. Walsh manages to keep up suspense up to the pitch he does in the seven reels of this crook story of New York's underworld. The picture could easily end at the sixth reel, but the ambitious producers have annexed further action after a good climax and manage to hold the interest in doing so, although the early reels contain the best spots in the picture. George Walsh has made one of his best features in "From Now On," partly because there are plenty of villains to fight, but largely because the story contains some real drama and is more than an excuse for Walsh's slugging.

The star plays Dave Henderson, "a boy who has gone wrong." He steals a sum of money which rightfully belongs to him, but is sentenced to a five year term in prison. He manages to hide the money, however, swearing that he will never return it to the men who tricked him. When he is released both the police and the gang declare war upon him "from now on" unless he returns the money. Dave is attacked by thugs and there is more swift action with some torture scenes which are too realistic to be pleasant. Dave's money has been taken from its hiding place by an old prison pal, who returns it to him at their appointed meeting place, urging him, however, to give it back and start life afresh. Then comes the added action of the pursuing villain, another robbery, and final death of the heavy. A romance is injected, the girl being played by Regina Quinn in a thoroughly satisfactory manner.

There is action that looks like the real thing with a vengeance. Walsh fights his way down a flight of stairs against five thugs. The scenes showing the brutalities of prison life seem untrue, but are effective and well directed. A death bed scene of a young girl is especially touching. We consider it on the whole, good for almost any audience, and the star, fighting to win back by any means what has been stolen from him, has one of the most appealing roles of his career.—Length, 7 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

George Walsh, the popular Fox star, in one of his best productions, will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. "From Now On" is the title and never since the days of "The Honor System" has such a stirring photoplay of prison life found its way to the screen. The picture was directed by R. A. Walsh, a brother of the star, and one of the master directors in filmdom today.

The story was written by Frank L. Packard, who wrote the story of the now famous "Miracle Man." It is a picture of New York's underworld with its gangsters and master minds of crime. Walsh plays Dave Henderson, a young man who falls into bad ocmpany and is tricked out of his inheritance by two unscrupulous bookmakers. When he learns that there is no chance of their paying back the money they have stolen from him, he decides to steal himself, so he robs them of the same amount of money that they have taken from him. But the court of justice refuses to believe his story and he is sentenced to serve five years in prison.

It is in this part of the picture that some of the most thrilling scenes are seen. After his release, he is hounded by both the police and the gang, who threaten war upon him "from now on" unless he reveal where he has hidden the money. The picture has a happy ending, and a pretty romance is woven in as well. Walsh, the ideal American sportsman and athlete, is given opportunity to impress by his wonderful physique, and the feature is going to please the men as well as their hero-loving wives and sweethearts.

PROGRAM READER

An ever-popular type of story—the crook story—will be the attraction at this theatre on ————, when George Walsh will be seen in "From Now On," his latest feature production. Unlike many stories of the underworld, however, "From Now On" has a real interesting, true-to-life story and contains excellent heart interest as well as a stirring drama. Also it is a perfect vehicle for Walsh, giving him every chance to show his wonderful athletic ability and prowess with his fists that won him fame even when he played on his college football team. The feature was directed by the star's brother R. A. Walsh, who stands today as one of the masters of screen technique. The story was written by Frank Packard, who is the author of the great screen success, "The Miracle Man." "From Now On" will remain at the ———— theatre for ———— days.

SUGGESTIONS

You can boost this as another "The Honor System;" promise them action from beginning to end; and appeal to the large George Walsh following by program and lobby photos. You can get a teaser campaign out of the title by using "'From Now On'—I Expect to See You!" Do not neglect Director R. A. Walsh, and, if you have played it, that he directed "The Deep Purple." You can pull some street stunts from the prison scenes in the picture, or you can dress up your doorman in striped clothing. Such an advertisement as "All ex-convicts admitted free!" in the daily press will cause a lot of amusement and discussion.

"THE LAW OF THE YUKON"
(Realart)

This Picture Proves a Disappointment

THERE is nothing of Robert W. Service in this feature except the title. While the poem itself tells no story beyond the conflict of nature in the reaches of the Yukon, it seems to us as if those in charge might have concocted something else than an uninspired, regulation melodrama which carries all the familiar stilted figures and the same time-worn sequences. It is apparent that the picture was made with considerable footage and when it came to the process of cutting, it proved a task to knit the scenes with any degree of continuity.

The poem is based upon that inexorable law of nature that only the fit survive. And around this theme is constructed a plot which has for its hero a mild-mannered chap who wins over his "rough-necked" opponents every time they engage in a tussle—despite the fact they outweigh him by thirty pounds and have grown strong wrestling with the elements while he has wrestled with ideas for his newspaper. Such heroics are not convincing. The dance hall denizens, the owner of the place, and his daughter, who is compromised with the hero, the villains and the adventuress—they all belong in this orthodox story. Their actions are firmly planted, so when they execute their plans the obviousness destroys the suspense. A sequence will be shown and the following scene will be something else, with the result the picture is quite confusing to follow.

The outstanding highlight is the comedy interest furnished by the character, Barney McCool. The story proper depicts the struggle of an Easterner to establish a paper in the Yukon. The villains are made to order. They haven't become villainous through any toss of fate, but simply for the sake of contrast. The time has gone by when an Alaskan story can be woven around such types and be called a virile, rugged, document of the North. The director might have furnished more effective backgrounds, the snow stuff suggesting very little atmosphere. And the poor lighting almost makes the picture look like a sample print. One might say it is a miscast, too. The rough types and extras look genuine, but June Elvidge looks out of place with her Fifth Avenue wardrobe. And Edward Earle is hardly the right choice for the hero, even though he struggles bravely with his role. The scenes in which he appears are cut so badly that one almost loses sight of him.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Law of the Yukon," a Realart picture based upon the stirring poem of the same name by the poet of the Northwest, Robert W. Service, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— with a cast headed by Edward Earle, June Elvidge, Joseph Smiley and Nancy Deever. Charles Miller, who directed the feature, has taken the thought out of the poem and translated it into terms of tense action and suspense. The background of mountains and snow, huts, and trees form a perfect setting for this tale of Alaska. Only the fit survive is truly emphasized here.

It is a picture of primitive men and women, of love and sentiment, of hate and jealousy, and told in those regions where the will to live tests a man's strength to the utmost. The characters are far from civilization and gentle influences, and are thrown back on primeval nature to wrest a very living from the very earth itself. A crime is committed against what little society there is in the Yukon. The hero must keep silent to spare his sweetheart. The detection of this crime and the ultimate happiness of the lovers forms a fitting climax to a story which moves with vigor and vitality. The picture is interpreted by players of proved ability.

PROGRAM READER

"The Law of the Yukon," a Realart picture based upon Robert W. Service's poem of that name, will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre very shortly. Most everyone is familiar with Service. Most everyone knows that his poems of the Yukon are vital and vivid. And it is fitting that one of them should be the inspiration for this picture. Primitive men and women, fierce huskies, the relentless snow, the mountains—these are the ingredients of "The Law of the Yukon," a picture which crackles with tense action and suspense. It is a story of the will to live, only the most fit shall survive. Charles Miller is responsible for the production. The cast is an adequate one. Watch for further announcements.

SUGGESTIONS

This picture based upon Robert W. Service's poem should be exploited on that fact. Tell that he is recognized as the Canadian Kipling. Use copies of the particular poem in your local paper and distribute leaflets containing it. Bill the picture as a tense melodrama of Alaska. Tell that it is a tale of primitive men and women, fierce huskies, the search for gold, the right of the strong to live. You can stage a prologue with the necessary atmosphere. A reader garbed in the Alaskan style might be used to recite the poem. Tell that Charles Miller directed and that the cast includes Edward Earle and June Elvidge. Play up the backgrounds. Your lobby can be dressed in the correct atmosphere.

Has Plenty of Action and Should Please

BILL HART has gone back to his old Kay-Bee days for style of construction in "The Cradle of Courage," and the result is a picture of the kind that made him famous—oodles of action, a fist fight with Tom Santschi that measures with that never to be forgotten battle of "The Spoilers," and plenty of good incident that makes you forget that the story is rather improbable.

"The Cradle of Courage" gets away to a rousing start, showing the return of a division of Uncle Sam's San Francisco soldiers, with Hart as "Square Kelly," a 'Frisco burglar and stickup man who had turned soldier under duress only to find himself converted to a desire to stay straight when he gets back from France. This fine idea isn't given any too logical a development in some sequences, but Hart and a great supporting cast make it seem real and the picture should please all those who prefer action to acting in a Hart production.

Tom Santschi and Gertrude Claire both deserve equal praise with the star for many of the interesting moments, while Ann Little is adequate in a role that does not present exceptional opportunities.

Hart looks the part in khaki and police uniform quite as much as when attired in his familiar western duds. The picture relegates romance to second place and will probably find greater favor with men than with the feminine sex. Direction, camera work and tempo are all up to present day standards. A different sort of a Hart picture with all the dramatic virtues of his usual western stuff retained.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

In "The Cradle of Courage," which comes to the ———— theatre beginning ————, William S. Hart, the virile Paramount star, appears as a policeman —a role which is certainly something new in characterization. It is a complete departure for the popular star and establishes him as extremely versatile.

He plays the part of "Square" Kelly, a criminal of Frisco, who has reformed after two years' service with the A. E. F. And he takes up the profession of aiding the law—the law which he formerly violated. Love comes to him when he meets the daughter of his gang leader, and it is she who really inspires him to go straight. So he wages a relentless fight against crime.

It is certainly a novelty to see the popular Hart in a policeman's uniform. The picture abounds with crackling action, one of the scenes presenting a thrilling fist fight as the policeman battles with and vanquishes a gang leader, played by the reliable Thomas Santschi. The feature was adapted from a story by Frederick Bradbury, Lambert Hillyer acting as the scenarioist and director. In addition to Mr. Santschi, the cast includes Ann Little, Gertrude Claire, Francis Thorwald and George Williams.

PROGRAM READER

Bill Hart as a cop. The favorite star of Western's certainly has drawn a new assignment in "The Cradle of Courage," a picture which takes him away from his customary environment, although his characterization is none the less effective. Bill is a crook who reforms and upholds the law as willingly as he was eager to break it. The offering is packed with crackling dramatic action and gives the star an opportunity to display his versatile talent. How he gives up his crooked life because of a girl's faith in him—how he becomes a minion of the law and punishes its violators is told in terms of absorbing drama. "The Cradle of Courage" comes next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is Bill Hart in a new type of role, and you should make the most of it in your exploitation. Get all the paper obtainable showing him as a policeman. Tell that he is a reformed crook who is as eager to uphold the law as he was in breaking it. Play up the fact that Lambert Hillyer is again the author and director —the same Hillyer who has been responsible for many fine Hart features. If you can get hold of a street traffic sign, you can work up a good ballyhoo by having some figure dressed as a cop and directing traffic to your theatre. But be sure to keep him moving. Exploit the feature as an absorbing melodrama which presents the star in a vigorous role.

Witness the enthusiasm which greeted its premiere in New York, when it touched the heart of even cynical Broadway. It is a screen masterpiece, produced by a master hand.

"Over the Hill to the Poor-House" is dedicated to mothers the world over. It contains a simple story of plain, everyday folk, adapted from the poem by Will Carleton. It proves that the motion picture is an art. It proves that there is pathos and comedy; tears and laughter, in the workaday life of a small New England town. It will make you cry, but your neighbor will be crying with you. It will make you laugh. It will make you shout aloud as the hypocrite is shamed. It will make you agree that it is "a screen masterpice, produced by a master hand."

CATCH LINES

Heart-throbs and shouts of joy—all in this wonder production of mother love and mother understanding.

The story of a gentle mother left alone in the world. Directed by a new master of screencraft—Harry Millarde.

Dear Mr. Rothacker:

Dramatic critics from all parts of these United States have been lavish in their praise of the beauty of the water scenes in my Annette Kellerman production.

When I witnessed "What Women Love" I understood why. Please allow me to pay your organization the highest compliments on the wonderful effects you have obtained in this production. I can assure you that the difference in the tints and atmospheric effects between this print and the one I labored over before delivering to you the negative was a revelation to me.

It is clear to me that this is one of the reasons why exhibitors are ever ready to book First National productions; for they are assured of the utmost perfection in the art of development.

Sincerely yours,

The Toledo Critics Said:

Earl Aiken in The News-Bee:

"Seldom is it that Toledo movie audiences actually and positively cheer during the screening of a photoplay, but they did that very thing when Cold Molasses won the 'hawss' race at 'The County Fair.'"

Corbin of The Blade:

"The screen needs more films like 'The County Fair.' The human appeal makes it a classic. It doubtless will prove one of the year's strongest attractions."

Ruth Peiter, Movie Editor of the Times:

"The fact that the audience repeatedly applauded, and that the excitement of the race extended itself to the spectators proved the extent to which the picture 'got over.'"

ANOTHER dramatic knockout to Hart's credit has been scored in "The Cradle of Courage." After its New York opening all the critics united in pronouncing it one of the best things he has yet done.

"One of the really big pictures of the season," said the N. Y. Call. "The best thing Hart has done in many a moon."

"Hart does some of his best work in this picture."—Morning Telegraph.

"The big fight scene, and Hart's scene with his mother, are two of the best things he has ever done."—Evening Telegram.

"The Cradle of Courage" is bigger and stronger than "Sand!" and "The Toll Gate" and it will pack them into any theatre.

The Enemy"

More Thrilling than the Stage Version!

NO more enthusiastic praise could be given "Held by the Enemy," than to say it is more thrilling than the stage version. For the famous play is universally admitted to be the greatest thriller ever staged.

So here's what the Evening Telegram said:

"Thrilling as were the stage presentations of this famous play, they are eclipsed by the screen version. The play has been made into a veritable epic."

ECKELS GOES WEST TO COMPLETE DEAL ON NEW STAR SERIES

Eddy Eckels, general manager of the Independent Films Association of Chicago, left last week for Los Angeles, accompanied by O. W. Moore, general manager of Calumet Productions, Inc.

N. A. Woody, treasurer of Independent, is leaving Chicago this week for the Coast, and will join Mr. Eckels in Los Angeles.

During his stay in California, Eckels expects to consummate a deal on which he has been working for several months, by which the Independent Films Association will take over the exclusive distribution of a series of five-reel productions featuring a young woman who is already well known to the screen as a star of established and rapidly increasing drawing power, and who is widely regarded throughout the industry as a "comer" of marvellous box office possibilities.

Until the names are on the dotted lines of various contracts and legal documents, no hint of the identity of Eckels' new star can be given.

Behind the Comedy Scenes.

O. W. Moore will remain in California to supervise the making of the Pinnacle Comedies, exclusively distributed by Independent. Through Moore, Eckels will be taken "behind the scenes," and afforded a chance to observe Leo White, Blanche White and Al Martin in action under the direction of John West. White and Martin are featured in Pinnacle Comedies as "the Damfool Twins," and Blanche White heads a riotous cast of feminine loveliness calculated to regale the tired business men who patronize the theaters showing those two-reel mirth-makers.

HEAVY BOOKINGS ARE GOING TO INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES

It is certain that Eckels and Woody will return from the Coast with plenty of good news for the exchange men holding Association franchises. The state of the independent market at the present time is such that the theaters are giving to the independent exchanges in every part of the country just as many bookings as the exchanges can take care of. Nearly all of the independents realize that all they need is more merchandise to sell to increase their business. In other words, if the average exhibitor can book from the independent exchange pictures of quality and drawing power comparable with those he can get from the program exchange, he will do business with the independent exchange as a pure matter of preference.

EXCHANGES BENEFIT FROM ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN OF I. F. A.

Production for the independent market is right now enjoying a very remarkable boom, and Eddy Eckels' idea in forming the Independent Films Association was to provide a great clearing house for the distrlbuton of first-class film productions to the independent exchanges, and to give such productions a degree of exploitation nationally and regionally that would surpass even the well known Home Office advertising and direct campaigning of the program companies.

The idea has been carried out with unprecedented success in the case of the Neal Hart series of 5-reel special pictures. These are being booked to the biggest first-run theaters in the country, and in each territory the independent exchange handling the Harts and participating in the clean-up publicity of the Association, has forged ahead of all competition.

With added units, these exchanges will become still more powerful, and far-sighted ones can foresee a new and important evolution of the industry resulting in the exhibitors being able to do business with the "boss"—the man whose own money is in his exchange—instead of a hired manager who holds his job on his ability to "get prices regardless of conditions."

"A PUNCH FROM HELL'S OASIS"

The above cut, though not listed in the press book on "Hell's Oasis," is available for advertising purposes, and may be ordered tthrough the Master Advertisers at 109 Dearborn Street, Chicago. The price is 60 cents. The cut is taken from one of the 11x14 lobby photos on this Neal Hart picture.

WATCH FOR "DAMFOOL TWINS" IN PINNACLE COMEDIES NO. 15th

The Damfool Twins will make their screen debut in Pinnacle Comedies Nov. 15 and will appear regularly every two weeks thereafter in rapid-fire two-reel subjects.

Leo White, the perfect fool and Al Martin, the poor fish, are the Damfool Twins. They will have ample material to work on in turning out something new twice a month in comedy action.

"Cedarbrook Farm," seething with extraordinary funny situations and dealing with old man Hoakum, parent of the twins, and the great alcohol race, with Jerry playing Mercury and Tom formulating the wild Sararitan, will be released first and from advance indications, it should set a new laugh mark.

There will be lots of pretty girls, headed by the widely-nown Blanche White, the perfect 36, in fascinating and bewitching poses.

Prohibition has handed out a lot of laughs (and some frowns, too) and "Cedarbrook Farm" will exemplify the dangers of toping up-to-date There is no moral attached especially, but plenty of room for humorous speculation.

The Damfool Twins—Nov. 15—get set for the big laugh.

COMEDY FRANCHISES ARE GOING FAST

Franchises have been awarded on Pinnacle Comedies for the following territories:

Nebraska, Iowa, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

Squidgelums

L. W. Foster, manager of the Fine Arts Film Exchange, Cincinnati, O., before he got a print, lined up a first run for all of the eight Neal Hart special productions throughout his territory—Southern Ohio.

HATSOFFTOLOU

The increasing popularity of Neal Hart and Pinnacle Productions is forcefully shown in the great number of inquiries from exhibitors received daily by the Independent Films Association. These inquiries come from all parts of the country and are turned over to the various exchanges handling distribution of the Independent. There is no doubt whatever but that Pinnacle Productions will have a record number of runs throughout the country. Exhibitors everywhere concede the outdoor honors to Neal.

EXHIBITORSCANTWAIT

Phil Selznick, associate of Dave Warner, the Cleveland electric spark, was a visitor at the Chicago office of Independent Films Association recently. Phil is a great little ad writer and publicity phenom. He said the chief reason why he dashed from his Ohio metropolis to Chi. was "just to see where we got our pep."

ST. LOUIS LIVE WIRE SECURES FRANCHISE FOR ENTIRE OUTPUT

Roy B. Dickson Closes for Lone Hand, Neal Harts and Comedies

Roy Dickson, probably one of the most widely known film exchange men in St. Louis, whose Dad was the dean of all the screen sires in the Eastern Missouri-Southern Illinois territory, will flaunt the Independent banner in the St. Louis territory for the Neal Hart series of special productions, Pinnacle's "Damfool Twins" comedies, Roy Stewart's "Lone Hand," and any other product that the Independent Films Association of Chicago releases for that region.

Secures Big First Run.

Dickson came to Chicago during the week ending September 18 and closed all details for the distribution of Pinnacle Productions in the St. Louis territory. Roy stated that he had virtually all St. Louis already sold on the Neal Hart pictures, and that one man, controlling eight houses, one a big first run, had been signed for a month.

Dickson's outfit is a brand new one and will be known as the St. Louis Film Exchange. Temporarily, headquarters will be at 3628 Olive street, but in the near future larger quarters will be opened.

Comedies Needed There.

Before leaving Chicago for St. Louis, Dickson said that he had virtually closed for a first run in St. Louis for "Hell's Oasis," the first Neal Hart picture, released October 1. Roy said there was plenty of room for Pinnacle Comedies, "or any comedies that are real comedies." The first Pinnacle comedy, "eCdarbrook Farm," will be released November 15.

Dickson formerly was associated with the Independent Producers Film Corporation, distributors in the St. Louis territory for Hallmark and Special Pictures. He is one of the most active exchange men in the country.

FOSTER ADDS MORE FIRST RUNS TO LIST

Announcement is made by L. W. Foster, manager of the Fine Arts Film Exchange, Cincinnati, that the following firms runs have been signed up for Neal Hart: Bob Wood of Wood and Law's Exhibit Theatre, Portsmouth, Ohio; Messrs. Gregory and Kretzer, of the Liberty and Colonial Theaters, Springfield, Ohio; John Schwalm, of the Jewel Theater, Hamilton; Harry W. Kress, of the May's Opera House, Piqua; G. W. Warner, of the Opera House, Greenville, Ohio, and S. Chakiris, of the Grand Theater, Middletown. All the foregoing exhibitors signed up for the entire series of eight Neal Hart productions and report in a receptive mood for Pinnacle Comedies.

SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION
LONGACRE BUILDING ~ 1476 BROADWAY

Here's the Sherman Plan

TO the Independent Exchanges of America:

In announcing to the Motion Picture Industry the formation of SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION, I do not hesitate to assert that I am presenting a plan of operation between producer and distributor absolutely unprecedented and unique in the opportunities and advantages it will afford franchise holders.

These advantages are so obvious that upon first examination it may seem as if I had left my own interests entirely out of consideration. If I have done so it is with my eyes wide open and with the assurance that I shall be fully protected, because my interests and the interests of all concerned will be identical.

Upon the success of SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION and the principle which underlies its operation, I will stake my reputation as a showman and a marketer of big attraction motion pictures. There is no chance of a fall down.

I make this statement unreservedly and only after devoting months to perfecting my plan of operation down to the smallest detail. That is why I have no hesitancy in putting all the facts before you.

SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION has been organized to supply pictures of assured attraction value to its franchise holders at actual cost, prorated according to territory.

There will be absolutely no cash investment or advance made to SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION by a franchise holder prior to the actual, physical delivery of the completed positive prints.

All costs of production will be paid by the company up to the point where the picture is completed and positive prints delivered.

Lithographs, lobby displays and all accessories will be supplied at cost and an extensive advertising campaign carried on in the trade papers continuously, the expense of which will be borne entirely by the producing company.

I have divided the country into twenty-five territorial areas and will select in each territory the most alive and the most responsible independent exchange.

Nearly forty per cent of this territory has already been satisfactorily allotted and in all cases franchises will be granted for a period of five years with a guarantee of twelve pictures annually, production to be increased as the franchise holders may require it.

Read Every Word of It

SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION'S participation in the profits shall consist of twenty per cent of the gross business done by the franchise holders in their respective territories.

It will also control and sell the foreign rights and the revenue thus derived shall be divided on a basis of fifty per cent to the franchise holders — divided pro-rata — and fifty per cent to SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION.

I have opened offices in the Longacre Building, New York City, and out of my percentage all the operating expenses of this office, including the salaries of the executive staff, will be paid.

I have two productions already completed and a third nearing completion. For attraction and money-making values I will match these two productions against any program features in the market today, without qualification or exception.

Definite announcement is made on the succeeding page concerning the release of the first picture.

As treasurer of SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION I shall appoint a man selected by the franchise holders. They will deposit in a bank also selected by them, the sum of $100,000.00, pro-rated according to territory. This sum shall be held in escrow during the period of the franchise and each franchise holder's proportion shall only be released upon his failure to fulfill his obligations.

IN other words SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION will make all pictures with its own capital and will receive no monies whatever until the actual delivery of the goods.

I am frank to say that I believe this to be the most important, most practical, and the most satisfactory plan ever offered to the independent exchanges of America.

I have devoted months to the perfecting of this plan. I have two pictures, which fully satisfy the high standard which I set for myself at the outset and I am now ready to proceed to active operation.

SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION already represents an investment to me, personally, of more than $100,000.00 and I have not asked for a dollar's backing from any exchange, anywhere. Moreover I am prepared to go as much further production-wise as may be necessary to insure its success.

Let me know what YOU think about it.

I will be glad to hear promptly from my friends throughout the United States and Canada and provide them with more detailed information about this new departure in linking up the making and marketing of big motion picture attractions.

Wire me today, Longacre Building, New York.

PICTURES

IT is but a short time since Robertson-Cole entered the field of motion pictures, without entangling alliances, founded on an honesty of purpose from which it has not and will not swerve, and a desire to succeed only on a basis of merit and fair dealing with exhibitor and producer alike.

How well Robertson-Cole has succeeded is for those it is serving and being served by to judge.

Each step forward has been, quietly and unheralded, the logical sequence of a carefully planned administration by means of which there could be offered to the exhibitor a service which it is his right to expect.

Robertson-Cole has entered now upon its first new season as a distributing company, and a measure of its progress and the success it has attained is evidenced by the fact that it will offer during this year only super-special attractions which have met the standard of excellence upon which that progress is founded.

Except as human judgment may err, Robertson-Cole will not release any subject which it feels will not help the exhibitor toward the success to which he is entitled.

First—That the distributor shall deliver to the exhibitor for showing at his theatre, as nearly as possible on one of the five groups of playing dates specified below, one print each of the following special feature productions:

Second—That the exhibitor shall exhibit each of these special feature productions in his theatre for.....days;

Third—That promptly after the completion of each day's exhibition the exhibitor shall pay as rental to the Realart Pictures Corporation the amount of money to which he considers the distributor to be honestly and fairly entitled.

Fourth—That the exhibitor will pay transportation charges both ways on each print, will also pay to the distributor a sum equal to five per cent. (5%) of the amount paid as rental for the film (this being the tax imposed by Section 906 of the Revenue Act of 1918), and will further pay, cash on delivery, for all lithographs, cuts, matrices, lobby display, and advertising accessories ordered by him, the same to be provided, if available, at the rates regularly charged by the distributor.

Fifth—The exhibitor will fully protect the prints and other property of the distributor while in his possession, returning or forwarding prints immediately after use in the same condition as when they were received, reasonable wear and tear due to the proper use thereof excepted.

Sixth—It is further expressly agreed, in consideration of the waiving of advance payments, and of other valuable concessions granted herein by the distributor, that the exhibitor shall make unusual efforts, through advertising and publicity, to induce the public to come to his theatre on the days when he is exhibiting the special feature productions herein named.

Seventh— It is also agreed, in part consideration hereof, that the exhibitor shall give as early playing dates as possible, preferably in the months of September and October, but in no event later than November 30th, 1920, and that the distributor shall not be obligated to provide the service heretofore specified if it shall develop that a satisfactory agreement cannot be reached promptly regarding such playing dates.

ANNETTE KELLERMAN

(Herself)

IN SLOW MOTION

PRODUCED BY WESTERN PICTURES EXPLOITATION CO.

THIS woman has regularly drawn a salary that has set a new mark in the vaudeville world

Her name in the electric lights of a theatre is recognized as the one strongest audience-attracting magnet that can be displayed.

As "the Modern Venus" she has had more free advertising from the magazines and newspapers of the country than any woman who ever lived.

Every woman will be curious to see on the screen the person whom they have come to know as the exemplar of the human form divine. Her charms will appeal to every man with a power that no "girl show" can equal.

They want to see Annette Kellerman herself. No picture shows her as this does. No eye can record what the camera has preserved.

THE ART OF DIVING

Exemplified By The MODERN VENUS

MADE BY THE CINAL PROCESS

SLOW motion photography scores a triumph in this single reel—it literally explains the secrets of the grace and skill of a woman with whom none have been able to compete.

With this picture you can actually promise your public more than they could ever gain from seeing Annette Kellerman in the flesh, for the ultra rapid camera has done what the eye cannot do.

ROTHAPFEL PICKS IT FOR CAPITOL ANNIVERSARY

ONE A MONTH CHESTER

RECORDS everywhere have been smashed with the first three of these comedies—"Four Times Foiled," "An Overall Hero" and "The Big Show."

They distinctly STARTLE every patron to whom they are shown—they are distinctly different from anything that your screen has mirrored.

THEY keep the current of thrills carrying the laughs along to greater enjoyment. There's no danger of a pleased patron sending another to the wrong theatre when he sees a Chester Comedy at yours. He'll have something to remember.

DIRECTED BY WM. S. CAMPBELL

COMEDIES IN TWO REELS

"THAT'S the cleverest thing that I've seen in a long time." With this quotation from hundreds of patrons at the Randolph theatre, Mae Tinee, the celebrated motion picture critic of the Chicago Tribune, thus starts the most unusual notice on "Four Times Foiled" a two reel comedy ever received.

"IT HAS A REGULAR PLOT," she says. She describes its THRILLS, she tells of its HEART APPEAL, recounts the scores of LAUGHS.

MAE TINEE gives the comedy a half of column of space because it was DIFFERENT. This is just the first of the Chesters. Every one of them is literally a screen sensation, each one drawing larger and larger crowds to theatres everywhere.

ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN

A GREAT UNIVERSAL-JEWEL PRODUCTION DE LUXE
Directed by
ALLEN HOLUBAR

With your own eyes, you can see that here is touching heart-appeal. With your own eyes, you can see that here is really a tremendous scene. And with your own box-office records before you as you look at these two pictures—the records of "PAID IN ADVANCE"—"THE HEART OF HUMANITY"—and "THE RIGHT TO HAPPINESS"—you can estimate for yourself the business you will do on the biggest photodrama that Allen Holubar and Dorothy Phillips ever made—a drama of Woman's ambitions that will reach the heart of every woman in the country, big city or small town. Book it today for the picture of her dreams.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS

WHY "The Devil's Passkey" is the one great dramatic achievement of 1920

THE scene is the Green Room of the famous Theâtre Français in Paris. Captain Rex Strong, Mrs. Goodwright and the Countess de Treville. The beautiful Countess once knew Captain Rex intimately—fully as intimately, says Paris, as Mrs. Goodwright now knows him. A few feet away, before the footlights—they can even hear his voice—stands Warren Goodwright, innocently thanking Paris for its appreciation of his play. He does not yet know that the story of his play is the story of Captain Strong and his wife—but very soon he will know it—and those two, sitting there in silent agony, know that he will know it. And then what? How can the guilty pair possibly escape the righteous vengeance which Goodwright will surely exact? Suspense! Many a time you've heard the word—but not till you've seen "The Devil's Passkey" will you know its true meaning.

The DEVIL'S PASSKEY

FEATURED!

WE always knew the day would come—and here it is! The day when the shrewd showman realizes that a big news event means just as much to his patron as a big feature—when he can advertise it right out in front on his electric sign and know that the dollars are going to come rolling in just as they roll in for a popular star and a great production—only—with a far bigger net to him. Get this thought. All you want to do is to please your people and make money—and if you can do both with a News Reel you're just that much better off than if you had to pay a huge price for a feature production. In Issues 61 and 62 of International News we give you——

"The MIRACLE MAN of the screen"

"THE KENTUCKY COLONEL"

A great picture made from Opie Read's greatest Novel

SIX REELS OF ACTION!

From the moment that Boyd Savely, leader of the feudists, rides through the gates of the peaceful old plantation, his carbine at his side, until, in the last reel, he slinks away, a broken, beaten man, your interest never lags for a single second, for the picture builds to one great climax after another.

"Capably enacted," says "The Motion Picture News". "Southern honor, Southern chivalry and Southern feuds fly thick and fast", says the "Sunday Telegraph", and "The atmosphere is genuine", says "The Moving Picture World".

It's a marvelous picture to exploit, Mr. Exhibitor, and you have a singularly strong selling point in Joseph J. Dowling, than whom there is no better loved man on the screen today. He's the man who made "The Miracle Man" famous.

The Man Who Makes His Pictures LIVE!

What Irvin V. Willat has achieved in "Down Home" is not only a triumph for himself but it marks the dawn of a new era in motion picture making as well.

No massive production this, depending upon elaborate sets and the employing of hundreds of "extras" to "get over". Just a simple, sweet story, transformed by the genius of one man into a picture that will twine itself about the heart and live forever enshrined in the memory of everyone.

"Behind The Door",—"Below The Surface",—both were the work of Mr. Willat's brain, and you, Mr. Exhibitor, and the world at large sealed them with the seal of your approval, for they were truly great. They were real,—they were vital, —they were human.

And here, in "Down Home", you have a picture possessed of these qualities—plus!

The HOUSE OF WHISPERS

By William Johnston

Directed By Ernest C. Warde

KERRIGAN SCORES AGAIN

Motion Picture News: There is no doubt about J. Warren Kerrigan's latest picture, "The House of Whispers," putting the spectator upon his mettle. Suspense is striven for and achieved.

Moving Picture World: A swiftly moving amateur detective and mystery story. The suspense is well sustained up to the final climax. The picture is sure to please Morning Telegraph: Of the motion pictures which this reviewer has seen featuring J. Warren Kerrigan — and there have been a great many — "The House of Whispers" is by far the best. It will be a valuable addition to the program of any exhibitor.

Exhibitor Trade Review: "The House of Whispers" constitutes one of the most entertaining as well as perplexing mystery pictures thrown on the screen. It is a truly mystery picture minus, however, the impossibilities and improbabilities that have marred many other such cinema attempts.

Wid's: A first rate mystery drama with the suspense well maintained and the interest kept increasing until the end.

The dazzling light of public favor has fallen upon Betty Compson, whose work in George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man" was greeted as the screen's greatest individual performance.
"Prisoners Of Love" throws into sharp relief her consummate skill as an actress and that quality of powerful, alluring magnetism that lends to her beauty an extraordinary and irresistible enchantment.
It is a story of fiery passion and ennobling love, lifted above common levels by extreme delicacy of treatment and acting that is absolutely flawless.

The SPORT PICTORIAL

Edited by
GRANTLAND RICE

Most unusual single reel series ever produced—

Depicts Sports from a lasting magazine angle. As humorous as the best single-reel comedies. More action than scenic. Not educational, but with a virile masculine, feminine and juvenile appeal that reaches the masses.

Edited by the greatest sporting writer in the world—

Most widely read writer of sports in America. His columns appear daily in 53 big newspapers. Irvin Cobb says: "He is the only man who has made literature of the sporting page."

Sports, recreation, travel, scenic humor—all in one—

Sports lure is eternal—no picture star would outdraw the horse "Man o' War" or Babe Ruth—sports—golf—fishing—baseball—all are attracting more millions than ever before.

The Sport Pictorial is issued twice monthly—

And you buy twelve at a time—See three or four at your exchange and then buy—no contracts for fifty-two weeks or a year—just for twelve hits—that will keep your batting average up with your box office receipts. If you like them—then buy twelve more.

No railroad wrecks, oil fires, parades, fashion shows or Presidential Candidates on the front stoop—no yards of mountains and waterfalls, and we don't tell how rice is cultivated in China or cane sugar cut in Cuba. We have "Action."

Superior camera work; humorous titles; skillful cutting—

Slow motion material and Ackeley work—trick photography and good photography. Mr. Rice's titles are both clever and funny. The pictures are cut and edited with proper use of close-ups, with action and "pep" as the slogan.

A vigorous advertising and publicity campaign—

The sporting page of the daily newspaper is the most widely read next to the front page. We plan to tie up the first-run houses in 53 cities with 53 big newspapers, that have thousands of daily readers of "Rice's Sport Light" columns. Clever stills—sport one-sheets are yours. In forthcoming issues we will have "regular fellows" like Rex Beach, George Ade, Ring Lardner, Bob Davis, Rube Goldberg, Ty Cobb, and others, give their angle on their favorite pastimes. This reel is to be a fast seller—with your patrons becoming "Fans" for something new in picture entertainment.

Gentlemen:

THIS company has been given to understand that by reason of the policy adopted by you you have refused to enter into negotiations for any contracts for film service for the season 1920-1921 in the Pennsylvania territory consisting of the State of Pennsylvania and adjoining States, except with such companies controlled, owned, booked or managed by you.

In recent years investigation reveals that you have gradually built up an organization of film distribution which consists of a combination of distributing and booking companies which are either owned, controlled or managed by your company or in conjunction with certain film producing and rental companies with whom you have made booking and releasing combinations, and also by means of exacting a booking fee from theatres for all film service furnished to such theatres regardless of whether or not you were instrumental in furnishing the service, and your operations have been carried on with the idea of dominating the distribution and booking of motion pictures in the Pennsylvania territory so as to practically boycott the product of any other distributor or booker except those in your organization or combination. We now discover that up to the present you have used the product of this company so long as you deemed it advisable to help build up your monopolistic organization, and now that you feel that it has served its purpose you are prepared to discard it and to refuse to deal further with us or to distribute or exhibit our pictures in that territory, and to exert unlawful influence to exclude our product from that territory.

It has never been the policy or the desire of this company to assist in the formation of monopolies; on the contrary, our policy has always been a free field for all, free and open competition, and unrestricted trading. That is the only policy that can make for a healthy upbuilding of this industry and the freedom of the exhibitor to book, exhibit and present to audiences the best product in the market regardless by whom produced, exploited, distributed or booked. Under your policy the exhibitors in the Pennsylvania territory are practically compelled to limit themselves to the exhibition of only such product as you agree to give them and are intimidated into subjecting themselves to your arbitrary conduct by fear of being boycotted and driven out of business. In other words, it is the choice of either taking such films as you will book them, or being deprived of any booking whatever.

The statement has been made by your representatives to our representatives that you will be unable to deal with us because you have so much material on hand that you will not be prepared to make any arrangements for films until after January, 1921. It is clear to us that this statement is not made in good faith, but is merely a subterfuge that is being used by you for the purpose of keeping our product out of that territory. There are certain outstanding open contracts between our company and yours for a number of engagements for pictures to be played. These contracts will be fully performed by us; we will, however, not consent to further any monopoly controlled or projected by you, or anybody else.

We wish to make our position quite clear. Inasmuch as you refuse to deal with this company, we intend to enter the market in the Pennsylvania territory and will deal with every exhibitor in that territory directly, in a fair, open, honest manner, and to compete fairly with the

POLICY OF FOX FILM CORPORATION WI

"National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, of Distributors' Division,

"1520 Broadway, New York City.

"Gentlemen:

"HEREWITH I tender the policy of Fox Film Corporation with reference to group booking with all booking agencies in America, as requested in your letter of July 20th.

"Booking agencies formed and operated for the purpose of making group bookings on behalf of exhibitors are bound in a short time to develop into a monopoly of a most destructive character. Exhibitors are invited into the plan on the pretext of lower rentals and of booking protection for their theatres. But that is only the ingenious, sugar-coated, sweet and innocent invitation to join the booking agency at the beginning.

"Facts and conditions of the past prove that very shortly after the exhibitor places himself and his theatre in the hands of a booking agency he loses control of the management of his house, and by cut-throat, blackjack and monopolistic methods the exhibitor very soon is compelled to give up fifty per cent or more of his theatre or be driven out of the motion picture exhibition line.

"Exhibitors will remember in 1908 and succeeding years my tremendous effort and the long, up-hill legal battle against the General Film Company and the Motion Picture Patents Company to keep the business open and free to competition.

"The then growing success and popularity of the motion picture was the result of the splendid competitive opportunities afforded to any person or set of persons in the production of pictures that would entertain and educate. In the regular course of events this condition permitted the exhibitor to make a handsome profit and to build up a substantial business. The exhibitor was his own boss.

"Twelve years ago a combination of men attempted to strangle the industry and to create an all-powerful monopoly. Fortunately for the public and the exhibitor, and I feel free to state largely due to my effort, this attempt resulted in disaster. The group of men who by every means endeavored to take possession of the motion picture product which you or anybody else intends to release in that territory, and we shall expect you to respect our rights to deal in this manner and to refrain from in any manner influencing any exhibitors in that territory not to deal with us, either directly or indirectly, and we shall likewise respect your legal rights and your right to free, honest, open competition.

In this connection we wish to give you warning that if you indulge in tactics of notifying, directly or indirectly, any theatres or places of amusement owned, operated, conducted or booked by you, or in which you may in any manner be interested, that they are not to have any business relations with us, or if, by any conduct on your part directly or indirectly, you cause a boycott of our product in that territory by refusing to serve exhibitors with the films you control or release or are interested in if such exhibitors deal with the product of this company, or if you directly or indirectly cause any owners of theatres or exhibitors not controlled by you to refuse to deal with this company and refuse to use our film service through fear of refusal on your part to furnish them with films which you control or book, or if you exact or attempt to exact a booking fee from any exhibitors for film service which we supply directly to exhibitors without the aid of your association or combination, or if you in any other manner restrain lawful trade and competition in the exploitation, distribution and exhibition of motion picture film, we shall most assuredly avail ourselves of every legal right and every legal remedy at our disposal to maintain a free and open market and free, healthy, open competition.

Very truly yours,

By S. E. ROGERS,
General Counsel.

Fox Film Corporation,
West 55th Street,
New York City.

Attention of Saul E. Rogers, Esq.

Gentlemen:

YOUR letter of September 20th addressed to Stanley Company of America has been handed to us for answer. The letter contains certain statements of facts and certain declarations of intention on your part.

The statements of fact, we are informed, are incorrect. The Stanley Company has not refused to negotiate for contracts for film service except with companies controlled, owned, booked or managed by it.

It has done what we suppose every exhibitor does, namely, picked out from the very large supply of pictures those which were best suited to its houses and which it could obtain on the most advantageous terms. In the present state of the industry no one can use all the pictures which are offered, and the Stanley Company of America selects those which it wishes to have.

This, we understand, you agree that it has a right to do. On the other hand, you certainly have a right to sell where you please.

We deny emphatically that exhibitors in the Pennsylvania territory are interfered with in any way in dealing with you. The Stanley Company is perfectly willing that exhibitors here shall buy their pictures wherever they please, and we are told to state that the Stanley Company has not the slightest objection to having any exhibitor who wishes, deal with you, nor will his dealing with you make any difference as far as his relations with the Stanley Company of America are concerned.

Please do not misunderstand the attitude of the Stanley Co. of America. It has absolutely no feeling against you. There is a great over-supply of pictures at this time, and it just is not possible to take all the pictures which are for sale. The Stanley Company selects those which suit it best, and will be very glad indeed to have those whom your pictures suit best buy them from you.

If there is any way in which you desire the Stanley Company to evidence this sentiment, it will be happy to do so, if it is at all possible for it to.

Yours truly,

industry in every branch were brought before the United States Courts and their monopoly was ordered dissolved, and the screen was free again. Then once more the exhibitor became boss of his theatre.

"Today the exhibitor is confronted with a more daring and dastardly attempt to dominate his business. The formation of booking companies to deal with distributors in group bookings spells the stagnation of the industry should it meet with favor by exhibitors. A group of booking offices in the principal sections of America would soon control the motion picture industry in every branch. The exhibitor would be the biggest loser.

"The American public will not support a monopoly in the art of the motion picture. No longer would the exhibitor be the boss of his theatre. The booking agency trust would boss and command the picture theatres after kicking the exhibitors into business oblivion.

"Every branch of the business lends itself to absolute domination if the nation-wide booking agency trust is an established fact. No longer would progress be the guiding star of the industry. In its place would come greed, the tyrannical domination by a small group of men, and the elimination of the exhibitor of today.

"Fox Film Corporation places itself on record as absolutely opposed to group bookings with all booking agencies. It will deal exclusively with the exhibitor direct.

"No person or persons or company is authorized to use the name of Fox Film Corporation or the undersigned in the promotion of booking agency schemes. It was reported from two sections of the United States that booking agency promoters had promised Fox pictures, which is an indication of the misleading, unauthorized and greedy tactics that are being used.

"The Fox Film Corporation and the undersigned stand on record for free and competitive dealing in the motion picture industry. We are opposed to monopoly in any form.

"We hope the above has made our position clear.

"Very truly yours,
"FOX FILM CORPORATION,

THIS TELLS THE TALE MORE THOROUGHLY THAN TEN THOUSAND TONGUES CAN TELL

THE NEW YORK TIMES

"Whenever a celebrity of the sport world appears in pictures, as a rule one does not expect much in the way of story and acting. 'Babe' Ruth in 'Headin' Home' scores frequently, not only as a batter but as an actor. The picture is really entertaining, and that's a lot for any kind of a production."

NEW YORK EVENING SUN

"'Babe' Ruth and his bat were cast in celluloid last night, and there is no further doubt that both will be saved to posterity and no doubt run off in the future for the benefit of the lesser lights who are due to rest in the hall of fame."

NEW YORK EVENING WORLD

"Any one to whom the crack of the bat, the zip of the ball or the dust of the dash to base is music will cheer the artistic work of 'Babe' Ruth, the idol of the diamond, who thrills with his superlative acting in that great six-reel photodrama, 'Headin' Home,' now playing to capacity audiences at the Garden."

NEW YORK SUN-HERALD

"An immense throng of baseball and movie fans attended the first presentation in Madison Square Garden last night by Tex Rickard of 'Babe' Ruth on the screen. The home run hero appeared in 'Headin' Home.'"

NEW YORK GLOBE

"Directed with skill and humor, 'Babe' Ruth is a constant joy to watch. He is by far the most amusing leading man that ever wandered off the sporting page into the movie columns."

NEW YORK ILLUSTRATED NEWS

"Every small boy in the country will want to see 'Babe' Ruth in pictures, and since seeing 'Headin' Home,' I don't think the great batter will lose any of his prestige through his appearance in films."

S. E. KISER IN THE NEW YORK AMERICAN

"Hon. 'Babe' Ruth, who gets a big bonus for every home run hit he makes, draws the largest salary ever paid to a baseball player, is receiving a royalty for a lecture that he has put upon a phonograph record, gets a good income from the movies, and has set $2,500 a week as his price for appearing in vaudeville during the coming winter season."

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

"'Babe' Ruth makes another home run at Madison Square Garden."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"It is fitting and proper that 'Babe' Ruth, who is fast becoming a popular idol, should grace the screen with his personality. Outside of major league cities, the King of Swat has not shown himself. In making his film debut the rank and file of the picture-going public will have a chance to see what he looks like and how he crashes the 'ol' apple,' even though the crack of bat meeting ball is silenced."

NEW YORK TRIBUNE

"The author has provided him with a role which fits him perfectly, and 'Babe' just walks off with the honors. Breaking records is an everyday occurrence to 'Babe' Ruth, and he broke another one last night at Madison Square Garden."

NEW YORK WORLD

"'Babe' Ruth made his screen debut last evening at Madison Square Garden. It really doesn't make much difference about the story. It's the 'Babe' that counts. The audience yelled with glee when the hero ambled on as the good son of a good father."

ROGER FERRI IN EXHIBITOR'S TRADE REVIEW

"'Babe' Ruth, by running up a total of 54 homers for the Yankees, won thousands of dollars for hundreds of his followers. 'Babe' Ruth will win thousands for exhibitors throughout the country with his splendid work in 'Headin' Home.' Here is a real American hero in a 100 per cent American play that will draw Americans by the thousands to the box office. We've watched scores of sporting luminaries on the screen and on the stage, but this happy-go-lucky young gentleman seems to come out of the picture, grasp your hand, and when he does you are more than glad to tighten the grip."

NEW YORK EVENING TELEGRAM

"There was a great outpouring of baseball fans and moving picture supporters at the Madison Square Garden, New York, Sunday evening, September 19th, when the 'Babe' Ruth picture, 'Headin' Home,' opened an engagement in the largest auditorium in the United States. Standing room was at a premium."

Light Upon a Burning Question Which Is of Vital Interest to Every American

The Anti-Asiatic Movement Is Endorsed By: { The American Legion / The American Federation of Labor

Senator Harding Says:

"With a new realization of the necessity of developing a soul distinctly American in this republic, we favor such modifications of our immigration laws and such changes in our international understandings and such a policy relating to those who come among us, as will guarantee to the citizens of this republic not only assimilability of alien-born but the adoption by all who come of American standards, economic and otherwise, and a full consecration to American practices and ideals. . . .

"The nation owes it to the people of the Pacific Coast to stand behind them, in necessary measures consistent with our national honor, to relieve them of their difficulties."

Governor Cox Says:

"The policy of the United States with reference to the non-admission of Asiatic immigrants is a true expression of the judgment of our people, and to the several States whose geographical situation or internal conditions make this policy and the enforcement of the laws enacted pursuant thereto of particular concern we pledge our support.

"My interpretation is that California objects to land owned within her borders by Orientals. . . . California should not ask, and I am sure does not ask, for any procedure in the Oriental settlement problem which cannot be accommodated to the general policy of the Government in harmoniously working out such agreements as must be made with friendly nations. At the same time, if California does not desire her lands to come into the possession of Orientals, she may expect . . . the genuine co-operation of the National Government in the working out of a plan whereby she excludes the Oriental settler."

Another Big Success

James Oliver Curwood has AGAIN hit the bull's eye with "NOMADS OF THE NORTH" which is jamming MOE MARK'S Strand Theatre, New York City all this week.

The "SAFETY FIRST" methods I have been preaching in the trade papers for the last four years were applied. BEFORE the crank turned the "O.K" of First National officials was secured upon the CONTINUITY—the DIRECTOR and the CAST. Mr. Curwood's manuscript made more than one journey between 6 West 48th Street and Owosso, Michigan BEFORE the final O.K. was attached.

This "O.K." meant the unanimous approval through their New York Representatives of the Associated First National Theatres franchise holders from Halifax to San Diego.

The splendid record now being made by "BACK TO GOD'S COUNTRY" will be surpassed by "NOMADS OF THE NORTH." I am receiving from

"One of Year's Triumphs"

Michigan Film Review

Read what this publication says:

"Allan Dwan's long looked forward to production of William Allen White's famous novel of real life, 'In the Heart of a Fool,' is having its Michigan premier at the Madison theater, where it is attracting attention.

"Exhibitors who have viewed it are unanimous in acclaiming it one of the very best pictures of the season, carrying an appeal to every class of patronage and carrying an appeal and suspense that will make it one of the most talked-of themes of the year. Besides the dramatic power of the story, 'In the Heart of a Fool' will also register as an artistic triumph in the career of Director Dwan."

SPEEDY TICKET SALES

The slow and sure way is all very well,—but the quick method that is just as sure is better! To sell motion picture tickets via the sure and speedy way is to sell them through the agency of the RITCHEY poster.

That method is quick, positive, profitable and efficient. The money spent by the exhibitor is sure to yield maximum profits in the resulting ticket sales.

In a certain sense it can be considered as a co-operative method whereby the exhibitors pool their interests to employ the best quality of salesmanship that it is possible to get, for the RITCHEY poster results from the labors of the greatest poster advertising experts existant in the world. The efforts of these men are essentially centered in producing ticket selling posters.

One thing the exhibitor should always bear in mind. The reputation of the RITCHEY poster is based upon what it has done! And what it has done it is doing,—and will continue to do!

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXII OCTOBER 9, 1920 No. XVI

The New Music—And the Picture

MUSIC looms very large in the future of the motion picture theatre.

We can foresee, we believe, the following remarkable developments:

(1) The better motion picture theatre of the future will be known, also, as a concert theatre. It will be, everywhere, a rendezvous for those who love music; and music will be greatly popularized and its appreciative audiences greatly increased—through the motion picture theatre.

(2) The Exhibitor of the future will be, much more generally, a music as well as a picture showman. We don't mean that musicians will manage theatres—necessarily. We do mean that competent exhibitors will and must acquire a keen appreciation of and wide acquaintance with music, instrumental, vocal, dramatic; so that they can join together successfully these two great public attractions. We have a few such exhibitors today—too few; there must be, and will be, many more.

(3) The time is coming, very shortly it seems to us, when operatic stars of, for instance, Galli-Curci's renown, will sing over a circuit of the largest and most beautiful picture theatres. It seems to us that we already have a sufficiently large circuit—that the time is even now here.

Other houses, of a large number, will be served with musical bookings—of a vocal, instrumental and dramatic nature—to suit their capacity and clientele.

And even the smallest houses will be supplied much more generally with mechanical music of a much better type than the musical accompaniment now used.

We have spoken of the subject before. We have had it in mind for a long time.

The development, it seems to us, is inevitable. And the plain signs of it are already before us.

The Capitol theatre, under Rothapfel, is now giving over to music at least fifty per cent of its program—and with marked success. Grauman, of Los Angeles, has just introduced a Sunday concert beginning at eleven in the morning, lasting a half hour and followed by the picture show. It is a pronounced success; and it adds one show a week to the theatre.

Just a glance at our weekly record of first-run programs shows how music is featured today in the leading theatres. And this we believe is only the beginning of a swift and wide development. Music will not crowd the picture bill; but the overtures and musical specialties will greatly increase in scope and quality; in stage settings, and, what is of most importance, in their harmony with the picture.

This, of course, demands adequate service. This is one of the big points. The Exhibitor, whatever his ambition and ability, is dependent upon a source of supply; and this source must be sympathetic and completely efficient.

Already a few musical service bureaus have appeared, largely, we believe, because of our musical department and Mr. Isaacson's very spirited campaign in behalf of the new and better and universal musical program.

We will back up these Bureaus to the best of our ability and in behalf of the exhibitor; and we predict for them a speedy growth and considerable competition. The picture producers, we know, will gladly cooperate in what is so important a matter to the picture.

To bring the whole big problem to the point and to start right its general solution MOTION PICTURE NEWS is arranging for a Music-Picture conference which will shortly be held in New York and in which the leaders of both fields will join in a cooperative effort to start right. This event, we regard, as a most important step.

Everything depends upon the proper inception and development of the specialized musical Bureau. Vaudeville agencies are not fitted for this work. Only those who are prepared and able to concentrate upon pictures and picture theatre requirements and who understand both will prove worthy of the important task.

Music must not be slapped on to the program; it must harmonize with, interpret and emphasize the picture. It must not preponderate; it must be, like the artistic stage setting, the harmonious background, the suggestive force. It must grow out of the picture. This, therefore, demands close association with the picture.

It is a practical thing—and we believe producers will gladly lend their aid—to have pictures shown in advance to those who are competent to suggest musical prologues, specialties and other musical inserts—and to supply them. Service—intelligent, sympathetic service to the exhibitor, based upon an intimate knowledge of the picture—this must be the foundation of this very fine and desirable and inevitable development.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

One Exhibitor's Story

The Tale of a Theatre Man Who Has Performed a Miracle

The scene is a dinner table in a New York hotel. C. W. Barbian, of Akron, Ohio, is the guest of honor. The manager of a theatre seating only 280 has, by his achievements, notched a career that results in bringing around the table such guests as J. D. Williams, of First National, and the editors of all the trade papers. Mr. Barbian is talking; and his words are the story:

"PICTURES are a business, not a game," stated Mr. Barbian at the outset of his speech, "and for the salesman or anyone else who comes to me and talks of 'the picture game' I have no time to spare. It is a business which carries responsibilities for the exhibitor, responsibilities to the community for morals and healthy conditions—responsibilities to fellow exhibitors, and, for himself, responsibility for his investment. It is no longer a business into which one can go with a capital of a dollar and a quarter. I would not want to enter it if it were, but it is a business whose basis, like that of any other business, rests upon fine principles and fundamental common sense.

"Like many of my fellow exhibitors I entered the business of exhibiting from another business. That was some years ago and I am, I believe, the second oldest in point of priority among sub-franchise holders. I make it my business to study my business. First, I started to inspect my program—to know exactly what I was going to give my public. Five or six years ago I discovered the re-booking plan. I played, for instance, 'Tess of the Storm Country' no fewer than eleven engagements, bringing it back always to increased prices, ten cents, fifteen, then twenty and then at a quarter. Next I started to look at the film. Good film will always do business," remarked Mr. Barbian.

"That was my re-booking period. Then came for me a pre-release period. I started to get advance information, to visit the exchanges, to pick out what I knew, or thought, I wanted and pay for it as a pre-release.

"I run my pictures a week and sometimes more. A good picture for two days is better than two poor pictures a day each, and the same principle applies to longer terms to week runs. In the end it pays me to find a good picture and run it longer than to make possibly more money for the time being by putting in several poorer pictures and getting away with them through frequent change. I am out to satisfy the public—that is the only sure way to success for me or anyone else, and even where I myself don't make money I want to give my patrons their money's worth.

"It is the exhibitor's business to be able to recognize good pictures. If he can't do that he should not stay in the picture business—next, he must search till he finds good pictures and then, see that he gets them. There's a free and open market. It is the exhibitor's own fault if he is unsuccessful. He can and must work out his own salvation. It is up to the exhibitor. When anyone comes to me with talk of this 'menace' or that 'menace' I suspect him of using a smoke screen for ulterior motives. There is only one great 'menace'—bad pictures. There are only two things that count—good pictures and bad pictures.

"I am a believer in reaching out for the exhibitor market. The exhibitor must go out and find business even at the cross roads and one way to do it, a vital way, is to advertise.

"In this as in anything else clean-cut methods are the only way to results—avoid adjectives, avoid hokum, don't try to delude your public—which brings me to the question of free publicity as well as advertising. Get the news value out of your picture and let the public know it through your ads and through your press agent. See to it that your publicity man gets less bunk and more fact, more truth into his stories. I don't believe in hokum.

"We have fought a big fight in Akron over advertising. I believe in advertising. I devote, and I believe every exhibitor should devote, ten per cent of his gross to advertising. If I do $150,000 gross in a year I spend $15,000 in advertising—not on billboards, but in the newspapers and other forms of the printed word.

"We had a tough struggle to get the Akron papers to cooperate—there was one rate for this exhibitor and another for that—until we got together, myself and my competitors. We talked things over. I am a firm believer in talking things over, and as a result our local newspapers are no longer matching one exhibitor against another. They are, in our territory, selling us advertising in bulk. I believe in suburban exhibitor advertising. I was told that if he advertised he would keep his people in the suburbs and I downtown would suffer. The view I take is that if he fills his house there'll be an overflow that will come to me. I believe in large production—of theatre-goers, that's why I believe in everybody advertising—even my competitor, even the suburban exhibitor. We have secured what at first I was told was impossible, viz., the same advertising rate in the suburbs as in town. There are exhibitors around Akron paying an 80c rate instead of a $1.25 rate and to this day they don't know how the reduction came about—they don't know that I personally guarantee the bulk amount that enables them to benefit. Our next battle was over publicity in the newspapers. They were nullifying our publicity by running it under the caption of 'Says the Press Agent.' In that way they were handing us a backhanded slap, giving us space with one hand and nullifying it with the other. 'We must run it that way' they told us, 'we can't appear responsible for the bunk the p. a. puts out.' We talked that over, we undertook to give them material they could run—I engaged my own press agent—it is his business to get the news element out of the pictures and there's no longer, for us, any back handed caption over movie news columns.

"I believe in helping my competitor when he is in a tight corner and always am for passing on to him news of good film. In 1919 some five or more first run houses took my word about good films. After all there is nothing very praiseworthy in that. The better business they do, the better it is for all of us in the community—there's nothing small about prosperity. Again, sometimes we have to fight. Injustices must be combated—legal injustices affecting the very elements of our business call for analysis and correction,—and, too, injustice in the trade. The exhibitor must get closer to the man he is buying from and look into his methods as well as his pictures. September 2nd was the fifty-second straight week I have run only First National feature productions, because I have looked into them and found them to be what I want, because they proved themselves to be what my public wants, and because I have looked into and admire the business methods of that organization."

How He Books Them

J. C. Jessen Tells About a Rating System of Interest

SENTIMENT, personal likes and dislikes, precedent and a lot of other things have been cast aside by H. B. Breckweder, owner and manager of Symphony and Palace, two downtown Los Angeles theatres, and he has established what should be termed a percentage system of booking films which represents a study of conditions in his theatres covering a period of almost four years.

Any statement regarding the Breckweder system should be prefaced with a statement that this successful exhibitor had a scientific training, has a college certificate permitting him to add M.D. to his name and other permits granting him the right to practise in three different states. What he learned in the university along the lines of the law of average has served him since the first day he was interested in theatres and that was about six years ago. From the first he kept a very accurate set of books which went into all the trivial details of expense. These books now serve him in arriving at conclusions and a review of his books show the trend of the public likes, dislikes and its fickleness. The most important feature of the Breckweder booking system is accuracy of records and constant changing of percentage figures according to box office results.

The first requisite of the system is that the exhibitor know the exact 100 per cent figures for his theatre. The Symphony, if the theatre plays to six 100 per cent audiences a day, would gross approximately $1,200 a day or $8,400 per week. By averaging the weekly expenses consisting of rent, help, advertising and all other items of cost except that paid for film rental, gives Breckweder within a few dollars of what he must spend each week. By the same system he has arrived at definite figures as to the average receipts of the theatre, the possibilities under normal conditions in Los Angeles and the lowest under adverse conditions. Every manager by keeping in touch with local conditions, Breckweder claims, can know almost two weeks in advance what is going to happen that will distort conditions or cause a falling off or increase in business.

Knowing the cost and possible receipts it is a simple matter to book a picture that will play best at his theatre.

Every phase of film drawing power has been accurately watched and averaged and the box office receipts, according to Breckweder's averages, depend upon all features of the picture and the drawing power of each. Here are his figures:

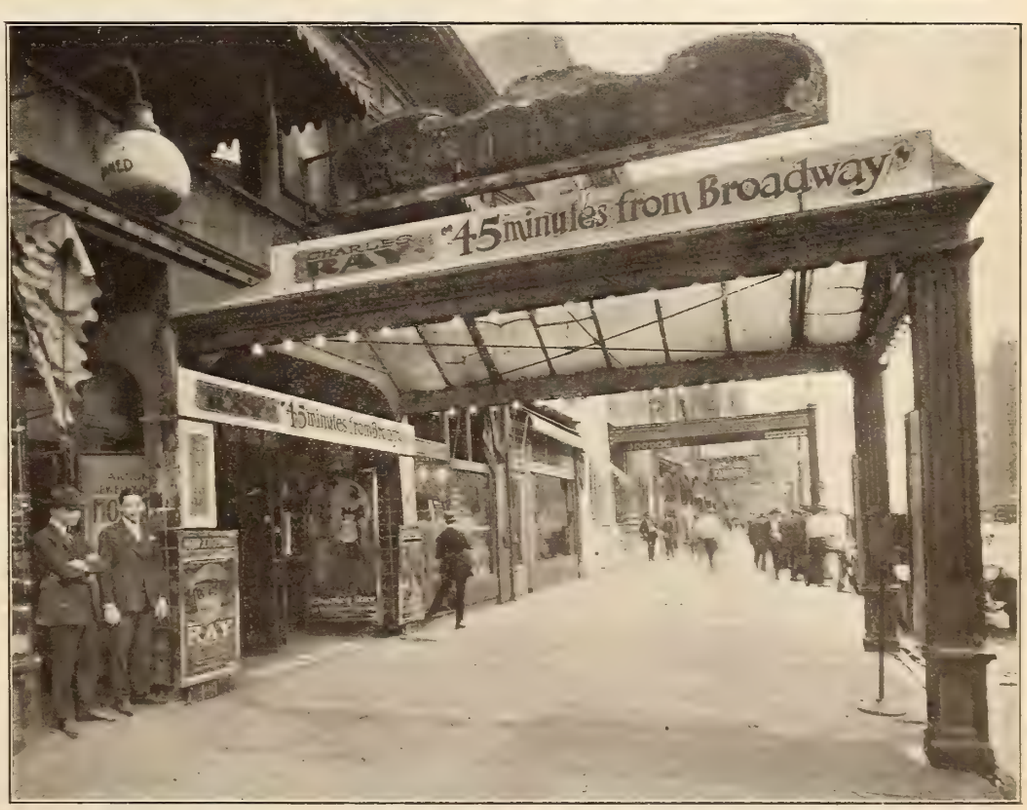
Star	50%	30%	20%	10%
Title	15	10	5	0
Author & Story	5	2	0
Director	5	3	1
Entertainment Value	10	5	1
Firm or Trade Mark	3	2	1
Advertising and Lobby	12	12	12

In considering a film for booking an estimate of its value is made by the use of each set of percentage figures. By the sum of these Breckweder can gauge within a few dollars of what his total receipts will be as compared with calculated results of business of his theatre in the past. By subtracting his average overhead or expenses he knows what amount he can afford to pay in rental and if that amount is paid approximately what his profits for the week will be. In setting the percentage figures on stars Breckweder finds but six that belong in Class A, eleven in Class B, more in Class C and a still greater number in Class D. In reaching these conclusions he found that some played better to matinee business than to evening and vise versa and that but two pulled business into the theatre afternoon and evening alike.



Another fact the figures show is that many pictures pull more business on a second run than they do on the first, this class being those that have an exceptional story creating interest and word of mouth advertising. Specials that have had big exploitation at first run houses can be given rating in the percentage system on the same basis as the star.

The houses conducted by Mr. Breckweder have seating capacities of less than 800, his prices are 25c, 35c and 50c plus war tax which are equivalent to any downtown houses except for the extra charge of loge seats in three of the theatres. By exhibitors and exchange men this exhibitor is considered lucky because practically every film he books pulls a good business into his houses but the above facts point out that he has made a very careful and thorough analysis of business conditions at his theatres.

DEALING IN PERSONALITIES

SERVICE being our keynote, and frankness our gospel, we are going to give you the tip right at the start of this three column frivolity that you will find much better reading on the opposite page than on this one.

Bill Fox holds the center of the stage there. That means a lot, for Fox is not one of the ever-ready family of magnates. He doesn't take the center of the stage every day in the week.

And that means a whole lot more.

We wish we could tell you how much those words "Booking Combine" mean at this moment. We wish we knew the whole blamed thing. But this much we do know: Before the last winter snow has fallen, the one big trade paper news and editorial topic is going to be—

Booking Combines.

And it's going to be a story that will crash through to the front pages with all the force that a re-enacting of the Patents Company episode would.

THE apparently united front put up by the producers against Booking Combines caused a lull in the fear of that ghost some several weeks ago. But the unity was not all that it appeared. And the various units promoting combination booking in different sections of the country went merrily ahead with their work.

So, today, every third producer you meet will confess to you that deep down in his heart the big fear he has for the coming season is the deep cut in revenue that will be made by the blue pencil boys who dictate the prices for groups.

It's the dark shadow that looms up after the good cheer we have all felt over the plentitude of good pictures—big pictures—in sight for the coming year. For, your complaining producer will tell you, "It's going to take tall and lofty mathematics to figure out where the return is coming from on some of the big specials."

The producer will then slip you a few hints as to the identity of the "men higher up" in the booking combines. But to date they are hints. And, gosh, how a news column hates a hint.

Battling Fox steps to the front with action this week. The next thing you know you'll find Knockout Cochrane in the ring. You can't keep good fighters down when there's a worth while scrap in sight.

And it seems to us that Fox and Cochrane are the Minute Men of the industry when the bugle sounds the call to arms.

COUNT that state lost which isn't holding an exhibitor convention these days. The type runs over three full pages to tell the story of all the meetings this week. Indiana, Kansas, Iowa, Michigan, Kentucky, Nebraska are in the list. The last few weeks have told of others.

First Annual
Turn to page 2877

We hesitate to say it. We have said it and heard it so often in this swiftly repeating cycle called film history that we are almost ready to give ourselves the laugh. But here we are stating our belief that November is going to roll around and find a national exhibitor convention that will actually display to the industry a one hundred per cent organization.

One hundred per cent! Boy, what a dream it has been! Go ahead and laugh at us if you want to—we are getting rash.

We don't need any further proof after the way the organization slipped into Indiana last week.

We will differ with Cohen, Berman and O'Reilly as often as the next man. They differ with us a good deal oftener than lots of people we know. But we are here to declare that as organizers and politicians they could slip Will Hays all the aces in the deck and then beat him with a royal flush.

GOLDWYN continues to run strong in the rumor market, but Paramount this week raced ahead to first place.

The Goldwyn rumors grew out of a number of meetings of the "important personages" during the week. We are told that a new "Production Manager" is to be announced in the near and impending future. And once more repeated are the other hints of changes further up the ladder.

The crop of Famous Players rumors found print in the statement that Arthur Friend had resigned—to be as quickly denied. Still the hazy murmurs persist. Someone whispers to us that Jesse Lasky said, "If Friend goes I go too."

As we used to write whenever stumped: "Important developments are expected."

And here's an expectation that has come to us from two different sources within the week: Samuel Goldwyn will join Famous Players-Lasky!

OTHER entrants in the rumor market failed to show staying qualities and dropped by the wayside. Six Boston banks closed their doors and someone got to wondering what picture company was affected. Then the waiter arrived with his check and another bubble burst.

It was rumored that a press agent had said a word of appreciation to an editor who had gone seven leagues out of his way to be nice. That died abornin'.

Harry Sherman broke out of the rumor corral when he brought his ad copy into The News and Herald offices. Harry fooled them all by stepping to bat with something more than a proposition, for he has two pictures under his arm already. The pictures count. Harry knows it. So even when he had lined up what looks like a fool-proof plan he went a step further and got the goods.

You're missing a real idea if you don't read the Sherman announcement in this issue. Take our word for it. And we don't send you wrong very often.

With which we will proceed from the ten point to the eight point bold italic:

Robert Brunton was in town during the week. Here's a regular fellow who, while hugging close to the forty-year mark, has put over one of the real big things of the past few years in his all-round producing organization. We know he's regular because J. C. Jessen calls him Bob Brunton.

After which we must add that Jessen is also a temporary New Yorker. We repeat that it is only a vacation. But if there's anything The News can do for you in Los Angeles tell us now; or, better still, tell it to J. C. direct.

Congratulations, Captain! Merritt Crawford now has a sister act under his management. The new star is Charlotte Holmes Crawford. Arrived Sunday, Sept. 26. Weight, 7½ pounds. Both mother and baby doing well. Once again, congratulations, old scout!

In Ernest Shipman's office we see a cablegram which states that British bookings on "Back to God's Country" have already passed the fifteen thousand pound mark. And first release date is August, 1921. Looks as though some records are going to be smashed.

Arthur E. Hernandez-Mejia, identified with the Colorgraph Laboratory, New Rochelle, and a worker in color film problems for years, passed away Friday, Sept. 24.

James A. Maddox, managing director of the Southern theatre, Columbus, Ohio, dropped into The News office to say hello. One of the clean-cut, energetic type that you like to meet.

That new fifty-two a year English proposition is going to hit the news columns soon. Watch for it.

Charlie Muehlman, Jimmie Grainger and Paul Mooney gathered in conversation. What chance has the poor exhibitor got?

We caught George Blaisdell in the 729 elevator and induced him to get off at the fourth floor. George is back from a vacation looking as though he had a real vacation. Ready, fit and trim for a big job. We hear rumors.

George Kleine is in town. Has a serial with him which was announced, before production, as a "serial of class." A good friend of ours has seen several episodes and says it lives up to the promise.

Strong corroboration comes on Thursday of the report that Bill Brady is to resign as president of the National Association. Said report saying that Bill intended to do it all along. Percy Waters will be chosen to succeed him.

States Policy on Booking Agencies: Stanley Co. Denies Allegations

THE William Fox Film Corporation in a letter through its attorney to the Stanley Company of America, of Philadelphia, takes issue with that company over its policy of refusing to enter into any contracts for film service. The letter is as follows:

"Gentlemen:—

"This company has been given to understand that by reason of the policy adopted by you you have refused to enter into negotiations for any contracts for film service for the season 1920-1921 in the Pennsylvania territory consisting of the State of Pennsylvania and adjoining states, except with such companies controlled, owned, booked or managed by you.

"In recent years investigation reveals that you have gradually built up an organization of film distribution which consists of a combination of distributing and booking companies which are either owned, controlled or managed by your company or in conjunction with certain film producing and rental companies with whom you have made booking and releasing combinations and also by means of exacting a booking fee from theatres for all film service furnished to such theatres regardless of whether or not you were instrumental in furnishing the service, and your operations have been carried on with the idea of dominating the distribution and booking of motion pictures in the Pennsylvania territory so as to practically boycott the product of any other distributor or booker except those in your organization or combination. We now discover that up to the present you have used the product of this company so long as you deemed it advisable to help build up your monopolistic organization and now that you feel that it has served its purpose you are prepared to discard it and to refuse to deal further with us or to distribute or exhibit our pictures in that territory, and to exert unlawful influence to exclude our product from that territory.

"It has never been the policy or the desire of this company to assist in the formation of monopolies; on the contrary, our policy has always been a free field for all, free and open competition, and unrestricted trading.

"The statement has been made by your representatives to our representatives that you will be unable to deal with us because you have so much material on hand that you will not be prepared to make any arrangements for films until after January, 1921. It is clear to us that this statement is not made in good faith but is merely a subterfuge that is being used by you for the purpose of keeping our product out of that territory.

"We wish to make our position quite clear. Inasmuch as you refuse to deal with this company, we intend to enter the market in the Pennsylvania territory and will deal with every exhibitor in that territory directly, in a fair, open, honest manner and to compete fairly with the product which you or anybody else intends to release in that territory, and we shall expect you to respect our rights to deal in this manner and to refrain from in any manner influencing any exhibitors in that territory not to deal with us, either directly or indirectly, and we shall likewise respect your legal rights and your right to free, honest, open competition.

"In this connection we wish to give you warning that if you indulge in tactics of notifying, directly or indirectly, any theatres or places of amusement owned, operated, conducted or booked by you, or in which you may in any manner be interested, that they are not to have any business relations with us, or if, you cause a boycott of our product in that territory by refusing to serve exhibitors we shall most assuredly avail ourselves of every legal right and every legal remedy at our disposal to maintain a free and open market and free, healthy, open competition.

"Very truly yours,
"Fox Film Corporation."

The reply of the Stanley company denies many of the allegations. It reads in part as follows: "The Stanley company has not refused to negotiate for contracts for film service, except with companies controlled, owned, booked or managed by it.

"We deny emphatically that exhibitors in the Pennsylvania territory are interfered with in any way in dealing with you. The Stanley Company is perfectly willing that exhibitors here shall buy their pictures wherever they please, and we are told to state that the Stanley Company has not the slightest objection to having any exhibitor who wishes, deal with you, nor will his dealing with you make any difference as far as his relations with the Stanley Company of America are concerned."

In explaining his policy to the National Association of Motion Picture Industry, Mr. Fox writes as follows:

"Fox Film Corporation places itself on record as absolutely opposed to group bookings with all booking agencies. It will deal exclusively with the exhibitor direct.

"No person or persons or company is authorized to use the name of Fox Film Corporation or the undersigned in the promotion of booking agency schemes. It was reported from two sections of the United States that booking agency promoters had promised Fox pictures, which is an indication of the misleading, unauthorized and greedy tactics that are being used.

"The Fox Film Corporation and the undersigned stand on record for free and competitive dealing in the motion picture industry. We are opposed to monoply in any form."

J. D. Sullivan Returns After Lengthy Vacation

D. J. Sullivan, well-known in the film industry, has just arrived in New York after a year's vacation spent in the timber lands of the Northwest. Mr. Sullivan has been for many years identified with motion pictures. He was in executive charge of the distribution of the twelve Chaplin releases.

No formal announcement has yet been made regarding his future plans.

United States Photoplay's Offices in New York

The United States Photoplay Corporation, which is now producing Capt. F. F. Stoll's superfeature picture, "Determination," at the studios in Grantwood, N. J., will move its executive offices on October 15, from Washington, D. C., to 227 West 45th street, New York City.

Famous Players Gets Peter Milne

Peter Milne, for years a reviewer on Motion Picture News, and latterly in the same capacity on "Wid's," has joined Famous Players-Lasky in the studio department at Long Island City.

While young in years, Milne is a veteran reviewer, and known to practically every one in motion picture circles.

Goldwyn Opened Door for Authors, Says Beach

Samuel Goldwyn, retiring president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is warmly praised by Rex Beach, for his actions in allowing authors a free hand in producing their own works on the screen. The opening of the studio doors to authors set a precedent, writes Mr. Beach to the former executive, which has been eagerly followed.

Mr. Beach's letter follows:

"My Dear Samuel Goldwyn:

"Your resignation as president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation prompts me to write you, not alone on my own account, but also on behalf of American authors as a body. I am sure that neither you nor they realize the significance of what you have accomplished for them and for the screen. Nor do I believe that motion picture people understand the importance to the industry of at least one theory that you put into practice; namely, the revolutionary theory that moving pictures are not merely so much celluloid and that good pictures are not measured entirely by the quality of the camera and laboratory work.

"So far as I know, I was the first author to make his own pictures, and certainly you were the first influential producer who agreed that it was a good experiment. The others seemed to believe that the mere presence of an author in a studio would wreck it. My shock at finding in you an intelligent human being with a keen, sensible outlook upon the picture industry was second only to that I experienced later when you suggested that we undertake to seriously interest several of the big, vital fiction writers of the day in devoting their talents to the actual preparation and supervision of their own pictures.

"Briefly, I hold you accountable for this: for being the first powerful producer to give real recognition to the author and to afford him not only the opportunity of presenting his stories upon the screen with the same freedom he enjoys in putting them upon the page or the stage, but also to encourage him in so doing. It took vision and courage. It blazed a new trail for other producers to follow, and Heaven knows they have done so. It did much for the industry, and it meant a very great deal to authors. You opened the studio door to authors and I hope I am not presumptuous in venturing to thank you on behalf of the whole writing fraternity.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "Rex Beach."

Callaghan Has a Near Escape from Death

Andrew J. Callaghan, president of Andrew J. Callaghan Productions, Inc., producer of the Bessie Love pictures, had a narrow escape from death in Los Angeles a few days ago, according to a telegram received at the offices of Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation in New York. The automobile he was driving became stalled on a railroad crossing just as an express train approached. Mr. Callaghan leaped from the machine, sustaining minor injuries, but the locomotive struck his car, completely demolishing it.

The unusual magnitude of the total attendance at the Capitol during the week of September 19, when "Earthbound" was the feature attraction, has prompted the Goldwyn Corporation to issue a sworn statement, giving the figures. According to this statement, 73,251 persons saw this picture during the week.

"This in itself," continues the statement from the Goldwyn headquarters, "is a phenomenon as extraordinary as were the scenes attendant upon the first day's showing at the Capitol, when 7,000 persons stormed the theatre at the seven o'clock performance, necessitating the calling out of the police reserves to clear Broadway to traffic and to line the patrons up in front of the box office in two lines three blocks long to wait for the next performance—just as extraordinary as was the fact that the selling of tickets had to be stopped four times that day and that the paid admissions for the single day amounted to a little under 16,000."

Revised Tax Regulations Are Published

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has secured for its members through its Washington office a supply of copies of the regulations relating to the collection of tax on motion picture films, revised to August, 1920, and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury Department.

The regulations quote Section 906 of the Revenue Act of 1918 and excerpts from the various sections of the law relating to the imposition of the tax, the persons liable, the measure of the tax, how and when the transfer of burden of tax may be made; reference to the Act of February 24, 1919, imposing a tax and the fact that persons liable under the original act are not relieved of such liability under the additional law.

Provisions are made for the rate and payment of the tax. The power of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is also further extended to assist him in collecting the tax and he has the benefits of all existing internal laws which are made applicable to films. Special mention is made of medium of payment of tax and for the use of uncertified checks.

Samuel Suckno Acquires Fourth Albany House

Samuel Suckno, who has been prominently identified with the New York state exhibitors' league, has just secured the Delaware theatre, Albany, giving him control of four houses, the Regent, the Albany and the Arbor Hill theatres, the first two being downtown houses. By reason of his latest acquisition Mr. Suckno now becomes the largest individual owner of motion picture theatres in Albany.

A. S. Black Charged with Disloyalty in Strike

A charge of disloyalty has been brought against A. S. Black, owner of the Merrimack Square and Jewel theatres in Lowell, Mass., by Thomas D. Soriero, general manager of the Strand in the same city. It is alleged by Mr. Soriero that despite Mr. Black's previous stand for "one-hundred percent organization for the protection of exhibitors and theatre folk alike," the latter deserted the recently organized managers' association of Lowell, when a strike of stage-hands, moving-picture operators and musicians threatened in that city.

After an exchange of views the differences with the stage-hands and operators were settled temporarily, but the efforts to make satisfactory arrangements with the musicians failed. Then it was decided by the managers to "stick" until a settlement was made. On Labor Day, according to Mr. Soriero, astonishment was occasioned by the announcement of the Merrimack management that the musicians were going to be put in. Walter J. Nelson, manager of the Merrimack Square, declared, according to Mr. Soriero, that he was acting under an order of the "powers over him."

The same evening at a meeting of the Lowell managers it was decided to request the resignation of Mr. Black's managers in that city from the managers' association.

L. H. Gardner Joins Kunsky Circuit in Detroit

L. H. Gardner, one of the best known film men in Detroit, has been appointed general representative in charge of theatre operation for the John H. Kunsky circuit. The rapidly growing and widespread activities of the Kunsky organization made the creation of the new post necessary. Mr. Gardner will devote most of his time to the smaller downtown houses and the neighborhood theatres.

Universal Sales Manager Feted on Anniversary

Charles Rosenzweig, general sales manager of the Big "U" Exchange, Universal's New York City branch, was the guest of honor recently at a luncheon in the Yacht Room of the Hotel Astor, given by members of the Big "U" sales force. The occasion of the party was the first anniversary of Rosenzweig's elevation to sales managership.

Atlas Educational Head in Motor Accident

Irving R. Rehm, president of the Atlas Educational Film Company, of Chicago, was seriously injured by a motor truck on his way home from the Studio recently. Mr. Rehm is confined to his home and it will be some time before he will regain the use of one hand as the wrist has been broken in several places.

Rights to Christie Comedy Re-Issues Disputed

The reissue of seventeen Comedies made by Al. E. Christie has called forth a warning from the Christie Company, who state that there are no Christie comedies available for re-issue, and a contradictory statement from the Film Publishers' Corporation, of New York City, who are State Righting the re-issues. Charles Simon, general manager of the New York company states that the seventeen Christie comedies which he is selling do not belong in any way to either A. E. Christie, or to the Christie Company. "These parties have no right whatsoever to the said negatives," says Mr. Simone, "They were made by Al. C. Christie under contract and were paid for."

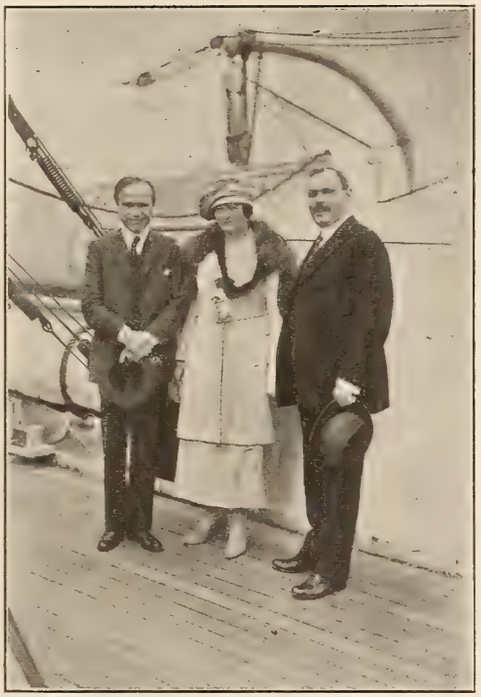
"The negatives of every Christie Comedy ever made are the sole possession of the Christie Film company," says Christie, "and no subjects are being re-issued by our company, which is the only company which has a right to dispose of these negatives.

"We are warning any individual or corporation that the Christie Film Company will prosecute any one who offers Christie Comedies for re-issue or illegally making use of the name of this company.

"Any person or company which owns negatives of comedies not known under the copyright title of "Christie Comedies" has no authority to advertise them as Christie Comedies, and is liable for damages. All negatives of comedies known as Christie Comedies are the sole property of this company, and we are ready to protect our rights in this matter.

New Educational Exchange Opens in Dallas

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., announced this week that with the establishment of the Dallas exchange, the company's own representation through the south has been completed. The Dallas opening followed closely on the heels of the establishment of the New Orleans office. The Atlanta territory has been an active selling field for several weeks.



The Dallas office is located at 2003½ Main Street and is under the direction of Joseph I. Toner, a film man of wide experience.

Hutchison Injured While Making Pathe Serial

Charles Hutchison, Pathe serial star, was seriously injured on Friday, September 24th, while making a scene for "The Double Adventure" a fifteen episode serial which Robert Brunton is producing in Los Angeles for Pathe distribution.

With two wrists broken, his legs badly lacerated, and suffering from other painful, if not serious hurts, Hutchison probably will be unable to return to the studio for two months. Hutchison slipped after making a daring jump.

Capital Film Exchange a Member of F.I.L.M.

The F. I. L. M. Club of New York reports that the Capital Film Exchange was voted to membership at the last meeting. Mr. Gluckman will represent it at the meetings of the club. It was also announced that Select Pictures Corporation would assume the membership of the Republic Distributing Corporation.

Famous Players Close With Ruben and Finklestein

District Manager Harris P. Wolfberg of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who was in Minneapolis during the convention of the United Theatrical Protective League, returned to Chicago having closed a big deal together with Al Lichtman between Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Ruben & Finklestein, owner of a chain of theatres in St. Paul, Minneapolis and other cities in that territory, whereby Ruben & Finkelstein contracted for the entire output of Paramount, for their houses.

A number of other important deals were closed with exhibitors from Minneapolis for the convention. One was with Oliver Whaley, owner of theatres in several north Minnesota towns.

Other recent additions to Paramount's list include Koppleberger & Burford, La Crosse, Wis.; H. A. Schwahm, Eau Claire; Thomas Roddy, Hibbing, Minn.; Archie Miller, Devil's Lake, No. Dak.; McCarthy Brothers, Aberdeen and Watertown, So. Dak.; T. H. Tohhey, Sioux Falls; H. J. Uptegraph, Sioux Falls; G. E. Wintergreen, Bismark, No. Dak.; V. B. Volleau, Albert Lee, Blue Earth and Marshall, Minn.; E. Dilley, North Field, Minn.; J. B. Clinton, Duluth; Harding & Whaley, Demedji; H. L. Brown, Wahpeton, Johnson, Tomah, Wis., and others.

Gore Brothers and Lesser Acquire New Theatre

Further important developments in the theatre activities of the Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser, who now control a large chain of theatres in Southern California, comes with the announcement that they have acquired the theatre now nearing completion as a unit of the New Ambassador Hotel of Los Angeles.

Arrangements have been completed between the home office of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., whereby the Ambassador theatre will be a world premier house for all "First National Attractions." Immediate booking orders have been arranged through J. D. Williams, general manager for First National.

Anti-Censor Candidate Wins in Primaries

The victory of Walter I. Manny, of Mount Sterling, Illinois, over William H. Dieterich in the recent primary pleases those engaged in the motion picture business, both in the Mount Sterling district and the state at large. Both were seeking the nomination for State Senator from the 30th Illinois district.

Dieterich, as a state representative, was one of those who sought to have drastic censorship legislation enacted in Illinois and it was largely through the efforts of Manny, who at that time was State Senator, both in the senate and among his friends in the house, that the bill was defeated.

Affiliate with National Association and Adopt Definite Policies

ORGANIZATION of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska was effected formally at the first convention of charter members held at Omaha, Neb., September 22-23. Sessions were held in the banquet hall of the Hotel Rome. Fully 100 theatre-owners from points in western Iowa and eastern Nebraska were present as charter members.

The members voiced affiliation with the national association of theatre owners. Many details of business in the film world that are vital to the exhibitor were taken up and discussed with a view to bettering conditions for themselves. "Plugging for ourselves," was the gist of the sessions held during the two days' convention.

Samuel I. Berman, of New York City, attended the convention as a representative of the national association. He assisted considerably in organizing the Iowa and Nebraska exhibitors in affiliation with the national association.

The most important policies drawn up by the association follow: (1) Staunch opposition to the deposit system. (2) Institution of a uniform contract signed by the manager of a theatre. (3) Opposition to censorship. (4) Opposition to Sunday closing. The foregoing policies were voiced in resolutions drawn up during the convention.

Referring to these policies, Mr. Berman spoke as follows:

"It has come to a point in the film world that the exhibitors must have a stentorian voice in the business and contract end of the game. The deposit system is unethical. It breeds contempt and poor business policies between the distributor and the exhibitor. With the system in practice, there is a suspicion of distrust and dishonesty displayed against the exhibitor. We are fully aware that the distributing end of the film world has its evils as well, but the suspicion is directed against the exhibitors.

"And consorship! There has been plenty of haranguing about it. Let the public be their own guide. Why if there is consorship of movies, isn't there censorship of newspapers and magazines?"

According to the resolution opposing the present contract system of distributors with exhibitors, the latter are in favor of a uniform contract signed by the theatre-owners. The present system tends toward inflated prices of productions that really do not warrant them, one exhibitor declared.

Disciples of the Sunday closing movement were given a "black eye" at the convention. Dr. Harry Foster, state legislator of Nebraska, and Mrs. W. S. Knight, head of the Omaha Woman's Club, spoke at the convention. Both praised highly the work of theatre men throughout the country in their efforts to afford the public "clean, wholesome and educational amusement."

"The motion picture theatre is the home of the masses," Mrs. Knight declared. "It is there that the public receive their general trend of morals, and the sweet story of the hero and heroine that enters everyone's life is the highest pleasing entertainment in vogue today."

Subscriptions amounting to $2,000 in cash were raised at the convention to place the organization on a business basis. Voluntary contributions ranged from $25 to $200.

The following were elected to office: A. R. Pramer, manager of the Alhambra theatre, Omaha, president; vice-presidents, J. C. Jenkins, Neeley, Neb., Jordan Munroe, Beatrice, Neb., and H. A. Kennedy, Broken Bow, Neb.; S. A. Hayman, Grand Island, Neb., treasurer, and J. Erle Kirk, owner of the Grand theatre, Omaha, secretary.

Harry Goldberg, manager of the Sun theatre, Omaha, was elected chairman of the executive committee, the members of which are to be appointed by the president. A member is to be appointed from each of the six congressional districts in Nebraska.

The first music conference called to bring about a higher standard of music in motion picture theatres.

Michigan Exhibitors Will Act on Big Problem

Action on a number of important problems at present confronting exhibitors the country over is expected to be taken at the convention of the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, which will be held in Lansing, Mich., October 5 and 6.

At no time in the history of the Michigan organization has there been manifested so great an interest on the part of exhibitors in the work of the association as is the case at the present time, and a record attendance is expected at the convention. Every exhibitor in the state has received personal letters from the office of the association, urging him to be present.

The impression seems to be widespread among Michigan exhibitors that a strong organization will be necessary to wage the battle against unfairness to exhibitors, whether the latter condition result from political action or from producers' measures. Among the matters to come up before the convention will be: the maintenance of the campaign against the censorship; the legalization of Sunday opening; the deposit system; equitable contracts; reduction in taxation; fair film rentals; the elimination of the music tax, and others.

Michigan exhibitors have had a taste of what concerted action may accomplish, in the results of the recent primaries. Thomas Read, a candidate for the Republican nomination for lietenant-governor, who had been very friendly to the interests of motion picture exhibitors, was being strongly opposed by various interests. Michigan motion picture exhibitors, through the state association, jumped to his defense, and poured forth a barrage of screen support. Read won by a handsome majority.

Invitations to attend the convention have been extended to Alexander J. Brosbeck, Republican nominee for governor; Sydney S. Cohen, and others. The two named have signified their acceptance of the invitation.

Prepare for Convention in Cincinnati Next Week

I. W. McMahan, president of the Greater Cincinnati Exhibitors' League, which is calling a convention of exhibitors from southern Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, and West Virginia, has appointed a number of committees to take charge of the detailed work of the convention. The meeting has been called for the purpose of organizing a representative association, to be known temporarily as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern Ohio, and will be held October 7 and 8 at the Hotel Gibson, Cincinnati. Temporary officers are: I. W. McMahan, Cincinnati, chairman; Godfrey Katzen, Covington, Kentucky, secretary; and John J. Huss, Cincinnati, treasurer.

Fred S. Meyer, of Hamilton, Ohio, was appointed chairman of the publicity committee. He will be assisted by T. J. Quinlin, manager of the convention and publicity department of the Cincinnati chamber of commerce.

The finance committee consists of John J. Huss, chairman; I. Libson, and Otto Luedeking. The temporary committee on business relations has been appointed as follows: A. J. Hettesheimer, chairman; Fred S. Meyer, Harry W. Kress, Dr. George Kolb, T. Tynes, W. D. Harris, I. Libson, Dan Worth, I. Frankel and Dr. Alexander. A. J. Ackerman, of Cincinnati, has been appointed chairman of the entertainment committee who will see that side-lights are provided after the business session has been attended to.

Indiana Exhibitors Organize New State Association

State Organizations Being Formed Rapidly All Over the Country

MARKING all their deliberations with an earnestness of spirit which exceeded anything of its kind displayed during the six years' tenure of the old Indiana State Exhibitors' League, fifty progressive exhibitors of Indiana established on the remnants of the earlier organization a live, vigorous, infant association, known as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, at a meeting held on September 27th at the Hotel Severin in Indianapolis.

The scheme or organization adopted by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was followed throughout in the building of this new State body of theatre owners. All the resolutions passed by the national association at its Cleveland convention last June were reaffirmed, and three additional measures passed. These latter expressed the disfavor of the Indiana exhibitors towards the practices of "stealing" stars and of reissuing picture productions as first runs without apprising exhibitors of their true character, and voiced disapproval of "fake" productions of all kinds.

Morton Van Praag, secretary, and R. G. Liggett, president of the Kansas State Exhibitor Asso., which has just held a successful convention. Details will be found on page 2794

The predominant feature of the convention was probably the swift and generous response given to promoters of the organization when these gentlemen called for the raising of a fund of $3,000 with which to "start the ball rolling." The half hundred exhibitors present tendered their subscriptions without a moment's hesitation and further pledged themselves to spend every available moment on their return home in traveling to neighboring districts and lining up new members for the association. In accord with the suggestion of several representatives of the national organization who were present, it was decided that the State body should have representatives in each of the thirteen congressional districts for the purpose of strengthening the league. These representatives were to be selected on Friday of this week during a session of the executive board at Indianapolis.

The spirit of unanimity which pervaded the convention was attested to by the fact that the officers installed were elected by acclamation. Those elected to office are as follows: Gustav G. Schmidt of Indianapolis, president; Carl Miller of New Albany, first vice-president; Joe Baummerscheim of Bluffton, second vice-president; Frank Heller of Anderson, treasurer, and Ray Andrews of Muncie, secretary.

The election of Gustav Schmidt to the presidency is hailed by the members as a splendid move in the right direction, for Mr. Schmidt has gained a State-wide reputation for organizational ability and capacity to carry things through in which he is interested. As president of the City Council of Indianapolis he has acquired considerable experience as an organizer, and he is particularly close to the political situation. This intimacy with things political is regarded by the exhibitors as a valuable asset in view of the prospective battle to be waged for legislation favorable to the industry during the January session of the State Legislature.

All the other officers elected gained recognition because of their activities in the interests of the business in general during the past several years. It is felt that Mr. Miller being a resident of New Albany will be in close touch with all the affairs of particular interest to exhibitors in the southern half of the State, while Mr. Baummerscheim, who is located in Bluffton, will be in direct contact with developments in the northern half of the State. Frank Heller was elected treasurer over his own protest. Mr. Heller acted as temporary chairman of the organization's meeting and was especially responsible for the successful launching of the drive for the $5,000 quota. The members present refused to accept his stand that he would be of greater value to the association as a member not in office and elected him to the treasurership.

While affairs of national import were discussed at some length by officers of the national organization who were present, the exhibitors were chiefly interested in the speeches of President Schmidt and Secretary Andrews, urging them to "look alive" to their political interests this fall.

"We are approaching not only a national election which is of great interest to our industry, but also a State election," said Mr. Andrews. "Right now, five weeks before election, is the opportune time to get in some good 'licks' towards determining whether or not we are going to get the recognition we deserve from the next State Legislature. Now, before election, is the time to find out who is for and who is against us. We have got to get busy and pledge every candidate for the Legislature we can regardless of party affiliations. We must make sure right now.

"Don't make the mistake of thinking that we have not a tight little battle ahead of us, for there are enough holdovers in the Legislature whom we know from past experience are against us to give us all the trouble we want. This is the time to get those who are in favor of us into the Statehouse in order that we may get some real motion picture legislation.

"There have been sixteen States which adopted legislation favorable to motion pictures, and the time has come when we must have some real action in this State. We have been held up to the public in an unfavorable light up to now, but that has got to be changed. We have a better opportunity to do something than we ever had before.

"Don't forget, too, that it is a dead-sure thing that if we get favorable recognition from our Legislature that our senators and congressmen in Washington are going to sit up and take notice."

Among those present who are prominent nationally in the industry were E. T. Peters of Dallas, Texas, treasurer of the M. P. T. O. of A.; S. I. Berman of New York, national organizer; W. D. Burford of Aurora, Ill., regional director of the Chicago zone of the M. P. T. O. of A. and secretary of the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance; Al Steffes of Minneapolis, regional director of the Minneapolis zone and president of the Minnesota Exhibitors' League; Sam Bullock, executive secretary of the national association, and A. L. Kinseler of Dayton, O., of the Miami Valley League.

Matters of national interest were also touched upon by several of the speakers. Sam Bullock devoted some of his remarks to the Harry Levey production entitled "Uncle Sam of Freedom Ridge." Mr. Bullock read from a newspaper clipping of the congressional inquiry into the presidential campaign fund for the purpose of backing up his statement which was to the effect that while the picture has patriotic merit, it is in reality propaganda in favor of a particular political party.

Kentucky Exhibitors Form State Organization

The motion picture theatre owners and managers of Kentucky from all parts of the State at a meeting called at the Phoenix Hotel, Lexington, Ky., on Wednesday and Thursday, September 22nd and 23rd, formed an organization known as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kentucky for the purpose of promoting more harmonious conditions among the exhibitors, bringing about co-operative business protection and movements in the exhibition industry and assisting in all civic, State and national welfare movements.

A large number of the theatres were represented, and it is expected that all theatre owners or managers will become members. At the evening session the following officers were elected: L. J. Dittmar, Louisville, president; J. H. Stamper, Lexington, vice-president; C. W. Krebs, Louisville, executive secretary and treasurer.

An executive board of directors was also chosen, composed as follows: C. O. Brown, Brownie theatre, Middleboro, Ky.; F. J. Dolle, Alamo theatre, Louisville, Ky.; A. N. Miles, Eminence, Eminence, Ky.; Henry Strube, Empire, Shelby, Sun, Louisville, Ky.

A series of resolutions were adopted by the exhibitors declaring their stand on matters of interest to their special business and to the general public. Some of the high-lights in the resolutions are as follows:

Percentage Booking—We declare our firm opposition to every form of percentage booking.

A wire just received from Kansas City informs that in the convention assembled in that city the exhibitors oversubscribed the quota to the national fund, six thousand dollars being contributed by the theatre owners present. Mr. Liggett as president and Mr. Van Praag as secretary are to be retained in office until the next semi-annual meeting, which is to be held in the spring of 1921. The convention failed to carry through any action on the Blue Sky Law.

Advance Payments or Deposits—The organization is opposed to paying in full for any picture as a deposit or an advance payment. We condemn the efforts of any distributing organization attempting to enforce such payment on signing of a contract and the members of the organization pledge themselves not to enter into any contract requiring payment in full for any picture more than seven days before play date.

Producer Exhibitor—We condemn the practice of any manufacturer or producer or distributor of motion picture films of buying or building theatres in competition with independent exhibitors and further denounce as being unfair and vicious the practice of these companies or their agents and representatives in threatening independent and small exhibitors with competition or ruination, if they do not accede to their unwarranted demands.

Independent Producers—This organization pledges its hearty and practical support to the independent producer and distributor.

Contracts—This organization believes that the contracts now entered into by and between the exhibitor and the producer are inequitable and recommends a uniform contract with equal rights, wherein the exhibitor will be equally protected with the distributor and producer.

Censorship—We and the public are the sole judges of what goes on our screens, and there are sufficient local police powers to keep from the screen obscene films. The great factor in the control and management of all forms of public amusement is public opinion. Public opinion keeps a careful watch over every form of amusement and no form of amusement can exist without public approval. Censorship has proven a failure in the three States where it has been tried and this organization is therefore unalterably opposed to all forms of censorship.

Illinois Exhibitors Hold Lively Convention

Attended by a large and representative body of exhibitors, the first general convention of the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance was opened at the St. Nicholas Hotel in Springfield, Ill., on Wednesday of this week. Officers of the association outlined the future activities of the organization and discussed plans for a drive which has for its purpose the realization of a 100 per cent membership for the I. E. A. among the exhibitors of the state.

President Joe Hopp presided, and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the national organization of which the I. E. A. is a unit, was represented by Sam Berman, personal representative of Sydney Cohen, president of the M. P. T. O. of A.; W. M. Steffes of Minneapolis; W. E. Burford, Aurora, Ill., member of the committee of nine; and Mr. Hopp, who is second vice-president.

Among the resolutions passed during the first day's session were: An expression of disapproval of Frank Rembusch's attack on President Cohen, which was preceded by speeches from Messrs. Burford and Berman; a declaration against the practice of violating contracts as carried on by some stars, who join forces with producers other than those with whom they have agreements and thus bring about increased film rentals; and resolutions encouraging independent producers and condemning censorship legislation, music tax, percentage bookings, certain activities of film clubs, producer-ownership of theatres and advance payments.

Plans for a meeting of exhibitors of Western Illinois at Peoria within sixty days and for a gathering at a later date of the theatre-owners of Northern Illinois at Chicago were announced.

A fund of $8,000 was raised at the convention to be devoted to the treasury of the national association. Sam Katz headed the list of contributors with a donation of $1,000. There were marked evidences of a general determination on the part of the assembled exhibitors to get together and work the common good, especially as regards beneficial legislation and improvements within the industry.

Louisiana and Mississippi in Gulf States League

The independent motion-picture theatre-owners of Louisiana and Mississippi in convention in New Orleans this week organized the Gulf States Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. St. Clair Adams, former district-attorney, was named attorney for the new organization as well as for the Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Louisiana Association. J. A. Bethancourt, president of the Louisiana association, presided at the convention.

It was decided to allow the parent body, that is, the Gulf States Motion Picture Exhibitors League, function for both organizations when the interests of the entire Gulf coast were involved, but to permit the Mississippi and Louisiana associations to handle their own affairs respectively when the problems and activities involved were confined to any one of these two states.

Mr. Bethancourt declared in his speech that a great deal of construction work had been done and that the association has made very rapid progress. W. A. Blues of Greenville, Miss., and H. Hutchinson of Tupelo, Miss., represented most of the Mississippi exhibitors. The delegates to the convention were entertained at a banquet in Fabacher's Rathskeller by Eugene Pearce of Pearce Films on Monday evening of this week. Mr. Pearce declared that he was convinced that the exhibitors were doing the wise thing in organizing to defend their rights.

Tangible steps were taken by the exhibitors in the convention to formulate a cooperative method to handle films along the same lines that have proved so successful with many of the producing industries of the country, such as, the orange growers of the West and some of the cereal growers in the grain states. Mr. Pearce declared his readiness to merge the interests of his concern with those of the independent theatre owners on the promotion of such a plan.

The News Alone Covers the Field

"It's All True" Says Woody of Realart Offer

FILM ROW has been given something to talk about during the past week, in Realart's offer to allow the exhibitor to play three big Mayflower specials and pay for them whatever his box-office says they are worth.

The MOTION PICTURE NEWS had made inquiries in advance of the publication of the advertisement, and was assured by Realart officials that the offer was made in absolute good faith—that the whole proposition was fully set forth in the brief and simple contract tendered the exhibitor.

This declaration was repeated with emphasis by Realart officials in tendering the follow-up advertisement which appears this week. General Manager Woody directed attention to a misapprehension under which some readers of the advertisement seemed to labor.

"Apparently some readers got the idea that we are offering to give something for nothing," said Mr. Woody, "that the pictures are offered free.

"Nothing could be farther from the truth. Ordinary pictures cost a lot of money, and big specials, such as those listed in this offer, cost a whale of a lot of money. Realart is philanthropic to a degree, of course, but not to the point of giving pictures away. We honestly think that these attractions will bring more money on this 'honor arrangement' than they would if the price were arbitrarily fixed in advance.

"'Well, then,' I hear the unbeliever saying, 'why not book all Realart pictures on the same basis?'

"That very thing may come to pass," pursued Mr. Woody earnestly. "This offer is in the nature of a test. It's a straw vote which may indicate the big result to be determined later.

"Honestly, now" (Mr. Woody himself turned interviewer), "aren't you immensely interested in the outcome of this daring test which Realart is making? You must be, and so must every thoughtful observer of new plans offered for the distribution of motion pictures.

"Fundamentally, I believe in the integrity of the average exhibitor—in his spirit of honesty and fair play. A lot of high-sounding, theoretical word painting has been indulged in through the medium of paid advertisements. The exhibitor has been told what a whale of a good citizen he is, and how his place is with the kings of the earth. But, invariably, these talks end up by asking him to sign on the dotted line, to commit himself in advance, to make a bet on the amount his neighborhood clientele will put up for any particular production.

"Right here I'll anticipate the doubting Thomases and say that Realart has been equally guilty in this respect with other producing companies. It's the way of modern business, and maybe it's the best way. I don't pretend to know to a dead certainty, but this I do know: I'll have a better idea about it all when this test is completed.

"The issue is clear cut. Here are cracking good specials, chock full of love, interest, adventure and all-round pulling power. The oldest of them has been released within ten months. All have been widely exploited and all are worthy of every dollar spent on them. The Mayflower Photoplay Corporation was prodigal in the amount spent in producing these pictures, the directors being given carte blanche. A fortune was spent for famous titles and in assembling casts of wide reputation and special fitness for the parts assigned them.

"With these really great productions Realart is making its test. The result is up to the exhibitors, large and small. No favorites will be played—no favoritism shown. With it all, I maintain that Realart has launched one of the most absorbingly interesting experiments in contemporaneous motion picture history."

"We Are Drifting from Progress to Discord"

Prominent Exhibitor Voices Protest Against Endless Personal Attacks

A. F. Brentlinger, general manager of the Consolidated Realty and Theatres Corporation, of Fort Wayne, Indiana, in a letter to the editor of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS complains against the attacks that have been carried on for some time past between Messrs. Cohen, Zukor, Black and others, and sees in them a gradual drift towards jealousy and discord. His letter is as follows:

"As an independent exhibitor wanting to be let alone in the management of my business, and with a state of mind that is very close to boiling over from the heat of real soreness generated in it by the attacks and counter-attacks that have appeared in the trade papers in the last few weeks between Sydney Cohen, Adolph Zukor, Alfred S. Black, Stephen Lynch, and others, I want to register a strong protest against the way in which this wonderful industry seems to be drifting away from progress and toward discord, jealousy and a suspicion of everyone and everything.

"It is curious to me that the attacking seems to be done chiefly by individuals who are under suspicion for one reason or another, and that instead of replying directly to allegations against them with actual facts which will disprove their supposed efforts to throttle independent exhibitors, they resort to counter-attacks against other individuals and concerns and Associated First National Pictures and its franchise plan in particular.

"I am a franchise holder and member of Associated First National. I am more than twenty-one years old. I am responsible to no one but myself and my immediate associates for the manner in which I spend or invest the money we make from our theatres, and I do not and cannot sit quietly back and permit Sydney Cohen, Mr. Lynch, Mr. Zukor or Mr. Black to attack me through an organization of which I am part and parcel as one of its many hundreds of exhibitor members.

"If there is anything wrong with Associated First National Pictures; if there is anything in its franchise plan that is not absolutely fair and just to everyone concerned; if it is not strictly on the level with every exhibitor affiliated with it, and if the directors and executives at the head of it are doing anything that is not entirely to the best interests of the exhibitor members they represent, then I am as much at fault as anyone else who is a part of the organization.

"Realizing my responsibility for whatever condition is alleged to exist as the cause for these attacks, I want to know what is wrong in the affairs of my organization. I am not trying to induce every exhibitor to join me in this company with any idea of double-dealing, plotting or with the intention of harming them in any way. Their rights are equal with mine. They have as much to say as I do, or as any other member in the conduct of our mutual affairs. I dislike to explain the Associated First National franchise to some fellow-exhibitor only to have him doubt my sincerity.

"Won't you please put my name on the list of exhibitors who want trade journals for the benefits to be had in knowing how the other fellows are making money out of their theatres and not as "personal publicity" house organs for a few disgruntled individuals with axes to grind.

"Very truly yours,

"A. F. BRENTLINGER."

Export Manager Sums Up Foreign Situation

Britain Over-Supplied with Pictures, Says George Kann: American Supremacy Safe

GEORGE E. KANN, manager of exports for the Universal Film Corporation, who returned recently from an eight months' stay in various countries of Europe, brings back a comprehensive report on the producing and distributing conditions in several foreign countries and especially in England. Although not exceedingly optimistic over the foreign situation, Mr. Kann believes that the situation caused by oversupply of films, restriction of imports in Germany and lack of sufficient theatres will finally clarify—and this in the not far distant future.

Mr. Kann sees no immediate danger of American productions losing their supremacy either in England or any other European country for some time to come. England, while it may have the actors, stories and studios, is sadly lacking in equipment, he states. He cites as an example a certain British company about to enlarge its production activities. Plans for a new studio had been drawn up and a site selected, when it was discovered that it would be impossible to supply sufficient electrical power for the lighting planned.

In summing up the situation in Germany, Mr. Kann states that while that country is active in picture making, and their productions well acted, produced and photographed, they have not the story material to make feature pictures. "They use a plot," said the export manager, "which would form the basis of a two-reeler in this country and endeavor to string it out to feature length. In the future, however, we will look to Germany for the production of real, big spectacular pictures." Mr. Kann also told how the forbidding of importation of films into Germany would act as a boomerang for that country. Before the war, he stated, Germany did a great amount of printing, which is now lost. The ban on importation decree was intended to stimulate production and provide employment for the German people, and while it has succeeded to some extent, it caused a cessation of the printing industry.

The Scandinavian countries, he reported, are producing some excellent pictures, but evidently not with a view towards American consumption, for they seem to be emphasizing local color and using native costumes, which reduces their American appeal to a negligible quantity. France is, to some extent, doing the same thing. Mr. Kahn recalled one French production he had witnessed, which, he said, had every element necessary to find favor in America, with the exception that the players wore Alsatian costumes throughout.

"In England, and especially in London itself," continued Mr. Kann, in speaking of the prospects for an American producer to place his product in that country, "the greatest difficulty is the scarcity of theatres. The London City Council recently passed a resolution forbidding the construction or the enlarging of any places of amusement for a period of four and a half years. When it is considered that during the war American producers exported little of their product, and that after the war, because of the greater shipping facilities, increased their exporting enormously, it can be seen that the oversupply of pictures is very great. For example, 'The Virgin of Stamboul' will not be released in London until October 3rd, 1921. 'The Devil's Passkey' will not reach the British public until December 26th, 1921.

"Conditions in the outlying districts of England and in Scotland and Ireland are better," he continued, "but it must be remembered that the cost of building is even greater in Great Britain than it is here."

Mr. Kann does not believe that the over-supply of pictures in England will be remedied by converting music halls or legitimate theatres into picture houses. He ascribed this to the British temperament, which he considers phlegmatic and adverse to sudden changes. The Briton prefers to do the same things as his grandfather did and in the same way. Neither will features be incorporated into vaudeville performances as in this country. When an Englishman goes to a music hall, explained Mr. Kann, he wants to see vaudeville and nothing but vaudeville. There is a gradual tendency at present to run two features a week at the smaller theatres in England. Some exhibitors are running two features on one bill.

Only a certain type of picture is suitable to France, Mr. Kann believes. "They like Westerns and they like melodrama. They demand pictures with a 'punch'—not necessarily a physical thrill—but one that contains a novel, powerful thought behind it. The Frenchman also does not insist upon our American happy ending. He wants the drama and he wants the action, but the final fade-out does not bother him."

Mr. Kann, before leaving London, concluded a contract with the Film Booking Offices, of London, who will exploit the entire Universal product. He denied that there was any feeling against American pictures, and stated that quality alone ruled with the British exhibitor.

Swedish Executive Is Here to Study Market

Nils Bouveng Seeks Closer Co-operation with the American Producer

MR. NILS BOUVENG, president of A. B. Svensk Filmindustri, Stockholm, Sweden, has arrived in New York and will spend some time here investigating the American production market.

Mr. Bouveng's company is the largest producing-distributing-exhibiting concern in Sweden, owning outright 120 theatres, controlling 20 more and booking for at least two-thirds of the theatres in Sweden.

Mr. Bouveng reports to MOTION PICTURE NEWS that post-war film conditions in Sweden are much improved. The market has settled down to a normal basis. During the war and on account of the unsettled conditions in the European film market, a large number of small jobbers arose and much inferior film was put upon the market. Only a very few of these middle men now remain and the quality of the pictures shown is fast going back to previous standards. Only a few of the smaller houses are showing the cheaper film.

"We are very anxious," said Mr. Bouveng, "to co-operate closely with the American producer. This is due to both business and sentimental reasons. We prefer American pictures and have built up a large following for them. We therefore want to continue them. We also appreciate greatly the support of the American producer during the war period and feel bound to protect his interests.

"I want to make emphatic, however, this point, that the American producer's interests are very closely associated with our own and we must work together closely and intelligently. It is to his interest, we believe, as well as ours that we be allowed to select the pictures we want and not be forced to take those which we know our public will not be satisfied with. This is highly important. It is a short-sighted policy, we believe, for the American producer to insist that all his pictures be booked in Sweden. We believe he can well afford to take the loss on the unacceptable picture in order to build up the prestige of the American picture with the public in Sweden. We must do the choosing for the reason that we know our public. Some of the most successful pictures are not at all suitable for Sweden. cently passed a resolution forbiding the

Straw Ballot Rouses Nation—Wide Interest

Dailies in Many Cities Feature Returns of Votes Cast in Picture Theatres

WITH the national straw ballot in motion picture houses under the auspices of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., an accomplished fact, all doubts as to its genuine worth as a means of theatre exploitation and as a source of public information and prestige for the industry as a whole are laid to rest by the enormous number of votes that were recorded at the theatres co-operating, the space newspapers have given and are still giving to the returns, and the interest which the event excited on the part of politicians.

The theatres taking part benefited in ways that are evident not merely now but which will be felt at this time next year, declares First National. Better acquaintance with newspapers in their immediate neighborhood presaging future tie-ups and a better understanding on the part of the exhibitor as to what matter and photographs a newspaper will use, is, in the opinion of First National, one of the immediate results. Interest taken by persons in the straw vote has converted them into "movie" fans, and the regular patronage of theatres has been augmented. All in all, the theatre that staged the event has felt the influence of it through a wider understanding on the part of the public and officials as to the universal appeal of the "movies."

As to the publicity end, this includes the enhancing of the prestige of the theatres, but the Brooklyn Strand Theatre got the jump on all the theatres in the country when Manager Edward Hyman arranged to have the count made during performances and crashed into all the Brooklyn Monday morning papers and several of the New York ones with good publicity yarns. Then Joe Plunkett at the New York Strand started the voting on Monday afternoon, and for the whole week it was a lively race as to which of the two metropolitan Strands would lead in votes and space in the newspapers. The Brooklyn papers featured the story every day. The New York Sun and Herald and the Evening Mail accorded it daily space, and the two Hearst papers in New York and the World when the Cox returns became more prominent gave good space to it.

Outside of New York many theatres made exclusive tie-ups and benefited accordingly. At New Haven, the Olympia Theatre got front-page boxes for a week in advance of the beginning of the voting, the same space for returns, and is still getting it on the tabulation of the national returns. The Cincinnati Inquirer and the Ohio State Journal at Columbus featured the story in that State. Home offices of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., were kept busy telegraphing returns to newspapers that had not affected tie-ups with theatres, chief among them being the Buffalo Inquirer and the Nashville Tennesean.

As to the gathering of prestige for the industry as a whole, it attracted attention from people who never considered motion pictures as being of public importance. Politicians felt the universal appeal of the motion picture houses in a way that had never occurred to them before after the first two or three days balloting. The Democratic National Committee made a formal request to be provided with the details of the returns from Kentucky, Missouri, Indiana and Ohio for the purpose of determining where special work is necessary in the closing days of the campaign. Daniel Gutilla, owner and manager of the Strand and Majestic theatres in Bellefontaine, Ohio, called off the taking of the ballot because of objections to the form of the ballot on the part of both the Democratic and Republican local committeemen. Telegrams were sent to Mr. Gutilla asking for details as soon as this news reached the First National home office, but up to the present time no intimate acquaintance of the politicians with the popularity of motion pictures cannot help but effect their attitude toward censorship bills and other things which the lawmakers dally with to the discomfort of exhibitor, distributor and producer.

LAST-MINUTE reports from First National's straw-vote in Illinois, West Virginia, Michigan, Wisconsin, Massachusetts and Indiana show the following results. Harding has increased his lead materially over the Democratic nominee. Votes against the League of Nations continue to out-number by an increasing margin those in favor of it. Light wines and beer keep right on winning advocates who supercede considerably in numbers those opposed to these beverages. Woman suffrage registers a much greater number of adherents than opponents, and within the last week has made great strides in the totals of the First National ballot.

Democratic Candidate Feted in Hollywood

SIGNAL recognition was accorded the motion picture industry this week when Governor James M. Cox, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, passed up three other speaking engagements in Southern California and disappointed thirty thousand persons in order to keep his appointment at a reception given in his honor at the Hollywood Studios.

The affair was staged under the auspices of Associated First National Pictures Inc., with John E. McCormick, western representative heading the committee in charge. Half a hundred well known stars assembled at the Hollywood Studios to extend a welcome to the potential President on behalf of the film world, and where other gatherings had received but a few spare minutes, the Democratic candidate devoted three quarters of an hour to the event staged by the picture interests.

Allen Holubar, who was to have been chairman of the reception committee, was detained in San Francisco on location, and sent a lengthy telegram expressing his regrets and those of Dorothy Phillips, his star, to the Governor and delegating the honor to Andrew J. Callaghan.

The formal ceremonies were held on a set built to resemble "the ship of state" and the Governor was given a taste of the comedy as well as the dramatic side of motion pictures when fifteen Reggie Morris bathing beauties dashed into the water and furnished the motive power for the ship.

Swedish Executive Here

Stars, for instance, of importance to your market may not count in Sweden. I could mention some recent big successes here which are not well received in our country.

"Let me make myself clear. All we want in this connection is the most reasonable and sensible co-operation—the kind of business policy that will most benefit us both. I might add that we also want to encourage American production because we primarily believe that the best pictures are bound to come in the future from the United States.

"European production is already making itself felt. We are getting a great number of pictures from Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy. We prefer, however, and wish to support the American product.

"Longer runs are prevalent in Sweden," said Mr. Bouveng, "A great majority of the theatres change twice a week. There are only three cities in Sweden of over 100,000 population. The larger theatres in these cities have week runs. Theatres in the various small towns run only two days a week. The theatre season in Sweden is closed for two and a half months each summer because of the light nights.

"The price of American pictures in Sweden, said Mr. Bouveng, "has more than doubled within the past year. This is a considerable burden in addition to the rate of exchange situation."

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

EXHIBITORS' reports on the feature pictures playing leading theatres of the country are shown on this page. Only such houses as play a picture a full week are represented. An entirely new list of comments appears each week, same being for the bills played the previous week. After publication once on this page the reports are transferred to the "Exhibitors' Box Office Reports" department appearing on the pages backing the "Plan Book" reviews.

The theatres reporting or the cities from which the reports have been secured are not given, since few managers of leading theatres will permit their opinions to be quoted.

Managers who are willing to assist in compiling this most valuable exhibitor service will be furnished blanks for returns and assurance is given that their reports will be considered strictly confidential.

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Humoresque—
Continues second week. Standing them up and giving this new policy of extended runs a big boost here where two week runs are a novelty. (East).

Third week and still breaking records. (Middle West).

Despite unseasonable hot weather went so big it was held for a fourth and final week. (Middle West).

Third week held up in fine shape. (West).

Seventh week continued good. Record for house in receipts and length of run. (West).

Second week still going big. (East).
Wonderful picture. Two weeks run and it's certainly "knocking 'em dead."

Lady Rose's Daughter—
Fair business. Story not much, but star carried it over. (East).

Civilian Clothes—
Has met with much favor. Good money maker. (Middle West).

A Full House—
A very entertaining story which went over big. (West.)

Guilty of Love—
This is an average picture but drew more than usual business. (West.)

The Village Sleuth—
An amusing picture which proved a good drawing card and was well liked by the many admirers of Charles Ray who attend this house. Did excellent business first part of week but was slowed up somewhat by the hot weather. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Turning Point—
The people liked this film and turned out in large crowds. (Middle West).

What Women Love—
A very entertaining and interesting picture which brought more than usual business. (West).

Interesting picture which brought good business. (East).

A Perfect Woman—
Good business. Usual Talmadge type. Rather clever. (East).

The Branded Woman—
Picture not up to the previous high standard of the star, Norma Talmadge. (East).

The Yellow Typhoon—
Has very interesting story. Went over big. Good money getter. (Middle West).

A poor picture and was knocked hard by the critics but apparently continued to draw well. (Middle West).

The Master Mind—
An artistic picture which played to only average houses. (Middle West).

Barrymore is a great favorite. The picture pleased. (Middle West).

Large audiences. Very good attraction. (Middle West).

GOLDWYN

Milestones—
Good picture but brought about the average business. (West.)

Double-Dyed Deceiver—
While this was a poor picture it drew about the usual business. (West.)

Stop Thief—
Nothing extra either in business or quality of picture. (East.)

Dangerous Days—
A fair week. Average picture. (Middle West.)

Madam X—
This is a fair picture, its only value being the fact that it was made before. (Middle West.)

Dollars and Sense—
Although this is only an average picture, it went over big. (Middle West.)

Scratch My Back—
This feature is great and certainly pulled in the crowds. My house was packed during its run. (Middle West.)

Revenge of Tarzan—
A wonderful picture and drew big business. Audiences seemed to be well entertained and pleased as box office receipts proved. (Middle West.)

REALART

The Law of the Yukon—
An average picture which drew the usual business. (West.)

Sweet Lavender—
Fine picture which went over big. (Middle West.)

The Dark Lantern—
Very poor picture, box office receipts are terrible. (Middle West.)

Food for Scandal—
The audiences liked the plot. Average week's receipts. (East.)

A good picture which drew well. (Middle West.)

39 East—
Great picture. A sure fire money getter. Drew large crowds with large box office results. (West.)

METRO

The Price of Redemption—
Big houses first two days. Rest of week fair. (East.)

Fine picture which brought good box office receipts. (West.)

Cruise of the Elsinore—

The Chorus Girl's Romance—
Big box office attraction, a good title, pleasing picture and a well liked star who shakes a good "shimmy."

FOX

The Joyous Trouble Makers—
Hot weather accounted for the poor business which accompanied this picture as feature was good. (Middle West.)
An average picture which brought fair business. (West.)

The White Moll—
Not as good business as usual. Many people appeared to think it a serial. (Middle West.)

The Daredevil—
Interesting picture which went over big. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Get Out and Get Under—
Good picture, bringing more than usual business. (West.)

My Husband's Other Wife—
Fairly entertaining picture. Did fair business. Miss Breamer works hard to put the film over. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

The Whisper Market—

UNITED ARTISTS

The Love Flower—
A beautiful picture produced with the attention to detail and artistic environment which has made Griffith famous. Played to splendid business for two weeks. (Middle West.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

Big Happiness—
Only average picture but drew fairly well. (Middle West.)

The Wonder Man—

EQUITY

Midchannel—
A good picture which drew well. (West.)

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

In the Heart of a Fool—
Did just fair for this very centrally located playhouse. (Middle West.)

Homespun Folks—
A very good picture. Filled house entire week. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

The Devil's Passkey—
Big business all week. Wonderful picture. (East.)

Shipwrecked Among Cannibals—
Monotonous stuff. Plainly evident most of it staged. Ran week to fair business. (East.)

SELZNICK

The Glorious Lady—
Business went up, particularly at matinees, by fans desirous of seeing Olive Thomas. (Middle West.)

Another "Her Elephant Man" Display

Few of the releases of the last few months have been favored with the amount of good exploitation as has "Her Elephant Man."

Among the latest to give this picture extra attention is C. E. Waughop, manager of the Scenic theatre, Detroit. Mr. Waughop, who is a real showman, and believes in getting in back of a picture with all his strength, engaged the local band. He placed the musicians on an automobile truck suitably decorated with banners announcing the coming production. The truck, with the band playing, moved about the town followed by a dozen made up as clowns who performed antics during the parade. These in turn were followed by several attractive girls in ballet costumes, riding bareback.

Humorous Column Makes Good Advertising

Is the top of a humorous column in a daily newspaper a good position for an ad? The manager of the Fenway theatre, Boston, agrees that it is. The conductor of the funny column in the Boston Morning Herald specializes in unique signs, business firm names, and any remarks that have a humorous point. The manager of the Fenway admits that a good week's business resulted after the column was printed with the following opening laugh: "Sign in front of Washington Street theatre, 'Dorothy Dalton Coming in Half an Hour.'"

Some "Down Mobile" Exploitation

Recently on the streets of Mobile appeared a large and luxurious limousine, rolling down the avenue in all dignity, except that over the entire back was a brightly colored poster, proclaiming "DON'T EVER MARRY — Follow Me." It became a topic of speculative conversation until finally the newspaper advertisements proclaimed that the next day a couple would be married at high noon in the big limousine in front of the Empire theatre. Next day there were several hundred people packed around the car in front of the theatre. The ceremony was performed and the bride and groom drove away in the big car still carrying its warning inscription. In the lobby of the theatre, Miss Luckel, the manager of the Empire, had hung a huge wedding bell, some old shoes, and several other things suggestive of weddings. An idea of this kind has a universal value. It can be used successfully in cities both large and small, and Miss Luckel says that the small cost of renting the machine and arranging the wedding was justified fifteen minutes after she opened her doors. The newspapers carried a story with cuts of the wedding and crowds in front of the theatre, giving a vast amount of publicity, from which Miss Luckel reaped a rich harvest in her box office.

Audience Singing Successful at Boston

The words of popular songs on the screen, before the feature picture is run off, is a big attraction to the audiences that patronize Gordon's Central Square Theatre, Cambridge.

Manager Sayer finds that the opinion of others that "free-for-all" singing brings out the rough element in an audience, does not hold true in his house. Both young and old seem to grasp the opportunity to try their voices on songs that they have heard snatches of before. Some time ago his press agent advertised that a local furniture dealer would donate a bedroom set to a couple who consented to be married on the stage. The stunt went through, and after the ceremony the audience joined in singing, "No Wedding Bells for Me."

Syracuse Paper and Theatre Co-operate

The Crescent theatre of Syracuse and the Syracuse Herald recently put over a cooperative exploitation campaign for "Why Change Your Wife?" which received a lot of attention and produced a lot of results for both theatre and newspaper.

Through the Herald a fifty dollar prize was offered for the best answer to the question asked by the title of the picture. The Herald was flooded with replies from all over its extensive territory. It is specifically stated in the announcement of the contest that personal viewpoints were to be given first consideration in awarding the prizes, but that a competitor does not necessarily have to be divorced to qualify.

Buildings, Bees and the Box Office

By Hal Opperman

How the Busiest Man in Pontiac, Ill., Made a Success of His Theatre

"BUILDING houses and office buildings is my vocation, raising bees is my avocation, but running a motion picture house is my recreation," states Hal Opperman, the busiest man in Pontiac, for he not only is a contractor with more "ultra-ult" plans piled on his desk awaiting his okeh than any other firm in the thriving little city of Pontiac, Illinois, but he is also a motion picture exhibitor, and what is more, is such a hustling good business man that the S. R. O. sign is out 'most every night in front of the Crescent theatre.

"How do we play to such big business?" said Opperman. "It is quite a simple proposition. Give the people what they want when they want it and see that they are comfortable while they are having it. I have tried to get the right touch and influence by becoming interested in things the people whose patronage I want are interested in, and they lend a helpful hand in bringing to pass the merry clink of box-office receipts by suggestion as to feature pictures they wish to see. Very often some practical suggestions as to a new kink in advertising or attention compelling pamphlet have been offered to me by some of my patrons, simply because they are interested not only in the Crescent theatre but also in the service given by the Opperman family. For the Crescent theatre is a family affair. My wife is the persisting genius of the box-office, and her smile is enough to make the grouchiest passer-by a firm rooter for the Crescent theatre. How many exhibitors realize that much of the success of their "regular patronage" (that is, the people who patronize the show four or five times a week, fifty-two weeks in a year and bring their friends) depends upon the girl in the box-office, the ushers, the orchestra? Possibly the average theatregoer would not stop to analyze his thought, but he will become a constant patron of the theatre where the girl in the box-office will hand him a smile and a pleasant "Thank you" along with his change and ticket, where the usher will promptly show him to his seat, and then not stand and gabble in the aisle with his friends or another usher, where the orchestra will play the picture, and not engage in animated conversation audible ten rows back between selections. That is not an overdrawn picture of a condition that exists in many houses where the exhibitor is wondering why he don't play shows to a full house when his program and location is every bit as good as Blank, down the street.

"My eldest son, my wife and myself plan advertising campaigns for every feature picture, but we spend just as much time and thought on our daily program. As many other exhibitors in a town of less than seven thousand realize, it is almost an absolute necessity to have a change of pictures daily in order to keep patronage. I have played to full houses this summer, and I attribute this first to the atmosphere of my theatre. By that I do not necessarily refer to the thin air, although by a system of ventilation and huge fans ceaselessly whirling I have managed to keep the theatre comfortable even on the hottest days, and a hottest day in Illinois is hot enough to make the celluloid wilt. I refer to the atmosphere in the theatre produced by a combination of the smile in the box-office, the courtesy of the ushers, the comfortable seats, artists, absolutely orderly theatre, agreeable arranged program, all of which go to make the homey atmosphere of a theatre. This is a prime factor in an exhibitor's calculations, and if he be canny, it is the effect he should strive for, because in the long run that little extra attention to the small details pays large dividends in the way of the box-office receipts.

"I find that I get results by a series of small advertisements, rather than one large advertisement a day. For example, for Marshall Neilan's farce, 'Don't Ever Marry,' which I ran two days to six full houses, I ran a teaser campaign. To successfully carry out a teaser advertisement it is necessary to increase the number of advertising inches materially, and to have the teaser advertisement appear on the same page in the same position each day until public attention is attracted. I ran a two-column by five inch advertisement in a specified position in our newspaper ten days before I commenced my regular advertising containing merely the words 'Don't Ever Marry.' We secured the regular advertising dodge envelopes, bearing the saucy wording, 'Is this the size your wife uses,' in which is a miniature wooden rolling pin with 'Don't Ever Marry' printed thereon. These we mailed throughout the township. We pasted yellow stickers with the same title printed thereon, on sidewalks, literally papering the town, and then after ten days of this, we ran four small advertisements daily on four different pages of the newspaper such as the ones illustrated. Our lobby is fitted up with an effect at restraint. We use charming poses of the stars, a few stills, mount them on a frame or easel. We do not care for a garnish display of 24-page bills—we are exponents of the artistic side of the silversheet, not advertising a circus.

"To balance our program we usually run a travelogue, the news, and a one or two-reel comedy in connection with our feature picture. This makes a well-balanced diet for the summer patron, for we try to book the lighter plays for summer. A roaring farce will do more towards dispelling the heat glooms than anything I know of."

Ballet Number and Scenic Synchronized

THE Capitol program contains a ballet number under the title of "Danse Espana" and given to "Toreadore at Andulouse" which at its finish is blended into the screening of a scenic number in a very nice manner.

As the drapes are drawn covering the stage setting used for the dance, an exterior drop done in futurist style, Angela Compana, the artist, steps down the stage and continues dancing Spanish steps while the title of "Marimba," a pictorial visit to Guatemala, Central America, is screened on the light colored drapes.

After the picture screen is in place the drapes are parted again and the girl dances off.

St. Louis Exhibitors Make Music a Strong Number

Again local exhibitors are finding new methods of tying up their programs and advertising features with other events and importances which have already gained popularity in St. Louis. When St. Louis was enjoying the municipal operas during a six weeks' period last summer the local houses instructed their orchestra leaders to play overtures from the operas that were presented that week on the municipal stage. St. Louis has the largest open air theatre in the world in respect to municipal ownership and operation.

So popular are the operas that columns and columns of news is devoted to their criticism and review each week by the daily press. The St. Louis exhibitors took advantage of this popularity and at the time advertised their programs as including overtures from the opera of that week.

When the opera season closed another avenue for similar exploitation was sought. It was found without much difficulty. Today the overtures are beginning to be selected from the musical shows that hit St. Louis. With the Greenwich Village Follies the Kings, the Pershing and the Del Monte played selections and overtures from the show's music. It took with great favor and other houses are going into the same plan.

Tudor of Atlanta Decorates for "Shipwrecked"

Jackson's "Kia-Kia" Makes Big Hit at Atlanta Theatre

Tudor Used "Cannibal" to Exploit "Shipwrecked Among the Cannibals"

One warm, sunny afternoon last week, when all Atlanta had turned out to bid farewell to the baseball season at its closing game, or to attend the opening of the theatrical season, at the first matinee, there was heard suddenly a demoniac shriek — and down Peachtree street, in all its festive Saturday afternoon gaiety, came a horrible and fearsome apparition — a huge black man, his weirdly fuzzy hair long and thick, standing in all directions, and adorned with many barbaric ornaments, the upper portion of his body clad sketchily in strings of beads, and bands of colored cloth, the lower half draped in a "grass skirt," of the sort always associated in the mind of the blase theatre-goer with weird music and a "hula-hula" maiden.

The crowd parted before this apparition as water before the keel of a vessel. The savage's waving spear was absolutely unnecessary — save as a decoration. Madly he charged, in leaps and bounds, looking like some uncouth animal — and now and then he emitted a short, barbaric yelp — whether of joy, surprise, pain or terror no one bothered to ascertain.

Not very far behind this man, and driving very close to the curb, was a closed automobile, and on the running board stood a man who was calling out to the savage in some foreign language, evidently intended to soothe the disturbed feelings of the gentleman who was trying hard to escape in the crowd.

Of course, such a thing could not last long. As a matter of fact, it lasted for just two short blocks—ending tumultuously at the center of the city, Five Points, where a majestic "arm of the law" stands and tells the automobiles and street cars where to go. With great presence of mind, this officer dashed across to the sidewalk and intercepted the savage — with the aid of one or two husky and brave citizens.

The automobile which had been following the yelping savage drew up at this juncture, and the man jumped from the running board and fought his way through the rapidly increasing crowd to the side of the officer, who was hanging on to the "savage."

"This man is in my custody," explained the man, breathlessly.

"Then I guess you'd better both come with me," suggested the officer, casually.

The man explained to the officer that he, himself, was a member of a motion picture company, and that the savage was Kia-Kia, chief of a tribe inhabiting the land at the bottom of the world, known as New Guinea — that Kia-Kia was to lecture at a local theatre the coming week in connection with a motion picture called "Shipwrecked Among Cannibals," which had been photographed in New Guinea, with Kia-Kia and his tribesmen as the chief objects of interest.

Window display on Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, in the heart of the ghetto district that attracted thousands to the showing of Humoresque" playing at Orchestra Hall

He had just arrived in town, he went on, with Kia-Kia, who had been in this country only six months, and that, of course, the most ordinary and commonplace things, to us, were objects and happenings of unprecedented horror to poor Kia-Kia, who had balked, finally, at being made to ride in an elevator—and who had made his escape.

The man made this explanation in a loud, resonant voice, and there were few people in the immediate vicinity who did not understand as much as the officer when the man had finished.

However, both the savage and his attendant went to the police station at the earnest solicitation of the officer, and one or two of his mates who had arrived in the meantime, and during the resultant publicity, there was ample mention of the picture, "Shipwrecked Among Cannibals," and even an interview with the attendant, which was written, by the way, very guardedly, for newspaper reporters are getting so wary of "movie publicity" that it is almost impossible to get stories over, in some localities.

When the Tudor theatre opened its doors the following Monday with a most effective lobby, specially built by the manager, James F. Jackson, which lobby consisted of a hut built of green canes, with full life-sized paintings of Kia-Kia and some of his chums, with a cut-out of one, half-emerging from the canes with his spear all ready, the whole effect emphasized by an ingenious arrangement of green lights, the people of Atlanta flocked into the theatre, literally in swarms.

Manager Jackson credits "Kia-Kia's" representative, as well as the lobby, with a great deal of this added interest.

Novel "Go and Get It" Idea Originated at Cincinnati

Demonstrating to perfection the idea which has lately been discussed in a great many "key cities" with respect to the possibility of an exchange blazing the exploitation-trail for the exhibitor, Roy H. Haines, manager of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., Exchange of Cincinnati, has not only put over a knockout preparatory campaign for a local exhibitor, but has brought forth a new hunch for exploitation, which exhibitors may adapt locally. Mr. Haines is assisted by Mr. William A. Clark, his publicity man.

As a result, "Go and Get It" will be a well-known phrase in 1,000 Cincinnati homes at least, thanks to a treasure hunt instituted by the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A.

The hunt was staged with the aid of 1,000 Cincinnati youngsters, each wearing a pennant bearing the inscription, "Go and Get It." The plan originally was named the Y. M. C. A. Treasure Hunt, but at the suggestion of Haines and Clark, the "Y" officials agreed to change the name of the treasure-seeking scramble to the "Y. M. C. A. 'Go and Get It' Treasure Hunt." As a result, "Go and Get It" appeared in all of the stories carried by the Cincinnati dailies telling of the "Y" event throughout the week, although no reference was made to the Neilan feature which will show in Cincinnati the latter part of September.

The same stunt can be worked in any city and is well worth the effort, the spectacle of a 1,000 youngsters parading about the city streets with a banner pinned to their backs, with "Go and Get It" flaring forth in big bright letters, attracting the attention of thousands, and Roy H. Haines, manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., Exchange of Cincinnati, has blazed the trail for the exhibitor.

Some Novel Exploitation Ideas for Current Attractions

New "Key" Stunt Works Well

A capacity house for the showing of the first episode of "Pirate Gold," Pathe's serial, was the return realized by Manager Lee of the Piedmont theatre, Charlotte, N. C., on an exploitation "stunt" he put on at small expense. The move was a novel application of the always-effective "lost key" idea.

Mr. Lee displayed a gold chest in the lobby of the Piedmont. The chest was locked and he had seven keys fitted. These keys and fifty others were tagged with the name of the theatre and the information that the finder might obtain a prize if he could open the gold chest in the lobby. The tags also announced that "Pirate Gold" was the attraction at the Piedmont.

The keys were "lost" in various parts of the town. Only a few hours passed before there was a lot of word of mouth advertising for Mr. Lee's show, and the time for the opening of the chest was anticipated as an event of excitement and moment in many quarters of Charlotte, as all details of the affair were announced in a newspaper advertisement in the Charlotte Observer a day in advance. The prizes won by the finders of the keys opening the chest were complimentary passes to the Piedmont for two weeks. Only five of the seven fitted keys were brought in up to the date on which "Pirate Gold" opened at the theatre, and as there are two more to be heard from the stunt sustained interest.

The expense connected with the stunt was very small. The cost of the keys was $3 and Mr. Lee's printing bill for the tags he attached to the keys was $1.25. The gold chest added nothing to the expense of the stunt, for it was one of the articles in the "prop" room and part of his stage equipment.

Mr. Lee reports that the stunt was highly successful and is convinced that it will prove a worth-while effort for exploitation in small towns as well as cities. His theatre continues to enjoy the benefits of the advertising, for the Piedmont plays to the biggest houses of the week on the days "Pirate Gold" is shown.

Strand Presenting Scenic Prologue for the Feature Picture

WHEN the Strand presented "Nomads of the North" the aim of the scenic prologue inserted was to fix the minds of the audience on the wild and primitive.

This was very effectively accomplished by the darkening of the house while hurrying scurrying somber clouds were flashed across the scenery.

A soprano solo with the singer invisible helped the illusion and when the lights were gradually allowed to shine they showed on a peaceful deep valley with a group of immense pines to the forefront on the mountain side.

Aided by the music and lighting effects the valley was pictured as peaceful while the mountain heights were stormy.

How Hyman Made Friends for the Strand

Personal exploitation of your show outside your theatre with the other fellow bearing the burden, isn't an everyday opportunity. Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand, grabbed the chance recently when he really made a "Boosters' Rally," conducted by the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A., the largest "Y" in the world, with a membership of 10,000, a boosters' rally for the Brooklyn Strand and his managing methods.

When this liveliest of all "Y's" arranged their rally for Saturday night, September 11, Membership Secretary Lawson and Manager Hyman got together with the result that the main attraction for the "Boosters' Rally," was an all-Strand bill. In fact, the thousands of young men in the Brooklyn "Y" auditorium gave a rising vote of thanks to the Strand generosity in putting over the affair.

Mr. Hyman sent over his Strand soloists, who went the limit in the way of entertainment. Through arrangements with the producers Mr. Hyman screened "Married Life." Even the short subjects were of Strand-Hyman arrangement.

Mr. Hyman's interest and effort brought home to the big "Y" membership that he was interested in the manhood of Brooklyn and that he provided the form of entertainment that could be given anywhere without offending and still carrying plenty of real pep and interest.

New Idea in Mailing List Exploitation

Ever and anon the efficacy of a mailing list as an adjunct to the business of motion picture exhibiting is attested to, but here is a new way of utilizing such a list when it has failed to respond with a high percentage of attendance in response to formal announcement of coming attractions. The idea is an indirect invitation by requesting the recipients of the matter sent out to participate in the exploitation of an attraction.

The idea was used by Herbert H. Johnson, manager of the Luna theatre, at Lafayette, Indiana, in a very successful exploitation of "Don't Ever Marry." Mr. Johnson has an extensive mailing list which he has divided into sections, using one-half one week and the other half the second week. On the "Don't Ever Marry" exploitation, however, he employed the full list.

The matter mailed out to the persons on the list consisted merely of a small, tastily printed card announcing the coming of "Don't Ever Marry" to the Luna for a week's engagement. It was accompanied by the request that the recipient fill in a line which read and bring or mail the card to the box office at the theatre so that the answers could be utilized for flashing on the screen and prizes awarded to those who prepared the ones which the audience found most pleasing.

As soon as enough answers had been received, Mr. Johnson incorporated the screen showing of them in his newspaper advertising of the event by announcing that the opinion of many residents of Lafayette as to why persons should not marry would be shown on the screen at the theatre.

The day before the picture opened Mr. Johnson used full page display advertisements in the leading local papers, and on the opening day of the production, which was Labor Day, from one thirty in the afternoon until nearly nine there was a line extending for half a block in each direction from the theatre made up of people awaiting an opportunity to enter the theatre.

The presentation of the answers received on the cards sent out to the mailing list of the theatre provided great amusement to the patrons of the theatre. A great many were amusing, and all that were selected for the screen were entertaining. Among the prize winners selected by the applause of the audience were:

"Don't ever marry, because if trouble comes let it come singly."

"Don't every marry, for while a man may have a strong will a woman has a stronger one."

"Don't ever marry, because I did once and know."

"Don't ever marry, because women voting will cease to be doting."

"Don't ever marry, because it's not worth the trouble."

Mr. Johnson used this feature only on the first day as a method of getting crowds into the theatre for starting a word of mouth advertising campaign which he felt sure the production would arouse. His expectations in this direction were fully realized, for with no further exploitation or advertising, outside of a small announcement carried daily in the newspapers, the theatre in the point of receipts broke the previous house record, which had stood as a high mark for the box office for nearly eight months.

Teuful Horns In on Good Roads Parade

F. W. Teufel, the wide-awake manager of the Rialto theatre, Butte, Montana, loses no opportunity in exploiting the high class list of productions for which his house is noted.

Recently the Good Roads Association of Montana staged a monster auto parade and which was called "Ship by Truck." The object of the demonstration was to encourage the shipment of goods by this means and incidentally to advocate the necessity of good roads. There were several hundred trucks of all descriptions in the parade, and several bands added to the success of the venture.

At this time "Down on the Farm" was playing at the Rialto, and Mr. Teufel lost no time in bringing this fact to the notice of the public. He secured a large truck, and dressed his staff of fair young girl ushers to represent country lassies, rigged up a very attractive float, as the accompanying photograph shows.

The sides of the float represented a farm fence, and peering over the sides were the young "country cousins." Of course, the fun making goose also was in evidence, having his share of fun with the youngster so prominent in the production of "Down on the Farm."

It is needless to say that this float was the center of attraction in the parade, and the Rialto was crowded at all performances as a result of this clever bit of advertising.

Gives Away Gasoline as Exploitation Stunt

An exploitation stunt that overcame a period of warm weather dullness, and filled the theatre to the doors, was introduced at Adrian, Mich., last week, by Elwyn Simons, manager of the New Family theatre.

Simons had booked a series of First National attractions, and was anxious that the first of these, featuring Anita Stewart in "Mind the Paint Girl," be well attended. He therefore concluded an arrangement with an Adrian oil firm which had just begun to handle a new brand of gasoline, whereby five-gallon cans of gasoline were to be given away free to automobile owners whose license tags appeared on the screen of the theatre each evening.

Simons secured the license numbers of all machines owned in Adrian; advertised his plan widely; and then began displaying some of the numbers each evening, asking automobile owners in the audience to come forward as their license numbers appeared on the screen. The first evening only thirty gallons were claimed; but the second and succeeding nights long lines of motorists awaited the opening of the theatre. Hand bills and newspaper advertising were extensively resorted to to advertise the stunt; and the exterior of the theatre was surrounded by empty gasoline cans, big and little.

"Miserere" from "Il Trovatore" as Prologue Number

As a prologue number for "Madame X" "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore" is being sung at the Capitol theatre, this week.

Sudworth Frasier and Lillian Ellison are the soloists and are assisted by a quartette composed of Messrs. Peacock, Duffield, Barber and Holbrook.

Miss Ellison appears in view of the audience while the other singers are off stage.

The setting provided for the number by Artist Wenger is a black velvet drop with a "jury box" at the center of the stage and a set of balance scales suspended about ten feet from the stage floor. As the number is concluded one side of the scales dips. Miss Ellison is attired in appropriate garb for the role she sings.

Shafer Engages "Bride" for "Bride 13"

That the most obvious thing is the most successful may seem to be a far fetched statement, but those who have any doubts about this assertion are only asked to spend a few minutes and read how Walter D. Shafer, manager of the William Fox Liberty theatre in St. Louis, took the shortest cut and reached his objective when others would have done the reverse.

Shafer was selected by Mr. Fox to reopen the Liberty theatre for the 1920-21 season and his last instruction was to successfully exploit the first serial ever produced in the Fox studios, "Bride 13."

Of course the title of this serial suggests a handsome young woman dressed entirely white and wearing a wedding veil and a tiara of orange blossoms. But brides in this rapidly moving Twentieth Century are common sights on the streets of a large city as they ride in highly polished limousines to and from the church.

It was Shafer's idea to make his "Bride 13" a more striking sight than what one sees almost every day. The accompanying photograph shows how he accomplished his purpose.

To obtain a cab of the vintage of '98 was an impossibility in this middle western city, so Shafer took the next best bet he could find, a stanhope. It had seen better days, it is true, but it served his purpose.

Then one of the fast vanishing quadrupeds was hired, harnessed with equipment used by dray horses, hitched to the stanhope and driven by a dusky son of Africa, and the young lady who represented the heroine in "Bride 13" made her appearance on the crowded downtown streets of St. Louis. As the photograph shows the quaint vehicle was liberally decorated with banners which served three purposes, announcing the re-opening of the theatre, the beginning of the serial and the feature attraction, William Farnum in "If I Were King."

Whole Sheepherding Outfit for "Fighting Shepherdess"

Nearly an ideal lobby display was used by Miss Catherine Schliep, manager of the Willard theatre, at Croston, Iowa, as an adjunct to her successful exploitation of "The Fighting Sheperdess." It consisted of two woolly lambs, one shepherd dog, a sheep pen and a cut-out of Miss Stewart, together with one sign painted for the occasion. The pen was erected right at the entrance to the lobby, and occupied nearly all of it except the space necessary for free passage to the box office and into the theatre. The dog and the two lambs were placed in the pen, which was provided with ample straw bedding. Above the pen, suspended from the ceiling of the lobby was the sign which read: "We are waiting for the Fighting Sheperdess to get through inside."

A large cut-out of Miss Stewart as she appears in the play occupied the back wall of the lobby, between the two entrance doors, and completed the display. Miss Schliep had taken pains to procure two lambs which had just been weaned. Their plaintive, trembling "ba-a-as" carried considerable distance, and people were attracted from distances of a block from the theatre for the purpose of seeing what lambs were doing at the theatre. The dog came in for his share of attention, for after the first day of the display he decided that it was his duty to keep the lambs from being molested and would calmly step in to prevent them from being patted by bystanders. The whole display cost nothing except the cost of erecting the pen and the painting of the sign. Miss Schliep said that it is one of the most successful lobby displays she has ever employed for the sight of the two lambs created an atmosphere which caused a desire to see the picture whose heroine evidently fought for their protection.

Clever Exploitation Idea for "Hairpins"

From Minneapolis comes a mighty clever exploitation for "Hairpins" same being originated by G. C. Johnston, manager of the Calhoun theatre.

Mr. Johnston's idea was to distribute cards about the city, same being about 2 by 5 inches and of white post card stock through which had been impeded an ordinary wire hairpin and on which was printed the following. "Ladies—losing hairpins nearly lost a husband for one woman. Protect yourself by seeing 'Hairpin' at the Calhoun theatre." The words "Ladies" "Protect Yourself" and "Hairpins" were capped so that these four words stood out on the card and were read at first glance.

Fifteen hundred of the novelty cards were distributed about the city and Mr. Johnston is authority for the statement that they were responsible for many extra dollars worth of business.

Thomas Doing Things in His New Field

H. M. Thomas, late of the A. H. Blank circuit, who has recently become general manager of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., is already making his presence felt in Canadian film circles.

The corporation controls the Regent, Strand, Alhambra, Oakwood and other theatres in Toronto and is building in Montreal, Toronto, Oshawa, Kitchener, Winnipeg, Regina, and other western points. Plans have just been made public of the new Regina theatre, which will be not only one of the finest in Saskatchewan, but in the entire western provinces.

In conjunction with the presentation of photoplays at the leading theatres operated by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, John Arthur, supervisor of music, is putting over some original novelties. These are playing a big part in the popularity of this chain of houses and it looks as though prologues and musical settings had come to stay.

Whenever practical, these prologues and settings are transferred to the smaller houses. The advisability of this was proven just last week. The prologue presented with "The Sea Wolf" downtown was run at the Alhambra, a suburban theatre, with exceptional results. The box office receipts more than trebled.

Gets Ministers to Endorse Pictures

J. J. Goodstein, manager of the Palm theatre, Pueblo, Col., the remodeled Princess, chose "Jes' Call Me Jim" for his opening bill after alterations and change in name for the house and then proceeded to give the offering an up-to-date exploitation campaign.

Invitations were sent to all ministers and others interested in the spiritual theme which forms a part of the plot of "Jes' Call Me Jim," to attend a special performance. The handsome theatre was filled with invited guests and their appreciation of the Will Rogers picture formed the greatest kind of an exploitation stunt and served to fill the theatre throughout the four days of the showing. Will Rogers was advertised as "that celebrated human star" in the invitations sent out and in the newspaper advertising.

The Palm Theatre has been extensively remodeled from the old Princess Theatre. Up-to-date rest rooms for men and women were installed; the seats rearranged so as to give an unobstructed view of the silver sheet; new projection draperies and fixtures selected to harmonize with the color scheme of the auditorium.

Musical Prologue Being Given at the Rivoli

This number was entitled "In Crinoline Time" and the quartette was appropriately dressed for the Civil War Days.

The scene pictured all that was peaceful and with the varied lighting shades in subdued colors the number was an excellent prelude to the feature that followed and received great applause.

"My Poor Nellie Grey" was the song number that brought the audience into a reminiscent mood.

Stratford's Parking Place for Cars Good Investment

Owners of motion picture theatres who are fortunate enough to have a vacant lot in the vicinity of their house should follow the example which has been set by the Stratford at Poughkeepsie. There is a vacant plot of land to the rear of the theatre and around this a high wire fence has been erected. The ground has been smoothed off and covered with a coating of fine gravel, the whole place being utilized as a parking space for the cars of patrons of the theatre. The plot is so arranged that when they drive in by one entrance they may leave by another. It is said that the scheme is paying handsome dividends and that many are attracted to the house, knowing that their car, parked but a hundred feet way and guarded, is perfectly safe.

Newsboys Wear "Go and Get It" Caps

As exploitation for "Go and Get It," at the Tivoli theatre, San Francisco, 800 Daily Bulletin newsboys appeared on the streets wearing caps on which was inscribed, "Go and Get It," in large letters.

The boys added the title of the picture to their vocabulary used in selling their papers.

The caps were secured through a local paint company and the "Go and Get It" caption added to an advertisement of the paint company's appearing on the back of the white headgear the boys were to wear.

In addition to the foregoing stunt 10,000 gum stickers are being pasted all over town at an almost nominal cost by the newsboys, announcing the picture this week at the Tivoli.

How Osserman Put Over "Deep Purple"

Novelty Stunts for the Duchess Theatre, Warren, Ohio, Showing, Make Big Hit

A lot has been said and written about the "extensive exploitation campaign," but few publicity drives launched recently have had better right to this title than the one conducted last week by the Duchess theatre, Warren, Ohio, on behalf of "The Deep Purple." Ace Berry, Mayflower exploitation representative who put over the campaign in cooperation with Manager Jack Osserman, played no favorites in selecting his mediums. Everything and everybody in town, from the Chief of Police and the City Council down to the local five and ten cent bazaar, were pressed into service to boost the Walsh picture.

The fact that "The Deep Purple" exposes the methods used by criminals who work the badger game gave Berry an opportunity to get the police force interested in the picture. Accordingly, he arranged a private showing for the Chief of Police and his department heads, and also the City Council. Reporters from both local newspapers were present and gave the event conspicuous display, using verbatim the testimonial given to the picture by the police and civic officials.

One of the outstanding features of the campaign was the application of an exceptionally serviceable idea originated by Manager Osserman. Realizing that in a town of Warren's size telephone operators are personally acquainted with almost all subscribers, he invited several "hello girls" to the special showing. The girls came, saw and were highly pleased, whereupon they became self-appointed advance agents for "The Deep Purple."

A disabled aeroplane that had been brought to Warren gave Messrs. Berry and Osserman another excellent publicity medium. Large banners calling attention to the showing of "The Deep Purple" at the Duchess were fastened on both sides of the machine. Now an aeroplane landing in Warren is no common occurrence—in fact, it's quite a sensation. The populace of Warren turned out en masse to feast its optics on the plane; hence "The Deep Purple" received considerable free advertising from this source.

The "South Bend Watch" with its well known purple ribbon trade-mark afforded an opportunity for a tie-up with the local jewelry store. Cooperating with the manager, Berry arranged an attractive window display consisting of South Bend watches, scene stills from the production and a card reading: "The Deep Purple Ribbon on a South Bend Watch is a sign of Quality, 'The Deep Purple 'at the Duchess this week is quality entertainment. See it!" Similar window displays were also arranged with the leading drug store, millinery shop and the five and ten cent emporium, which featured sundry commodities encased in purple wrappers.

The purple color scheme was also carried to the lobby of the Duchess, where the lobby and marquee were illuminated with lights dipped in purple dye. The scene stills and other announcements displayed in the lobby were mounted on purple cards.

Federated Release Oct. 17

"Bonnie Love," First Bessie Love Production, Will Be Issued Soon

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by W. E. Shallenberger, general manager for Federated Film Exchanges of America, Incorporated, that October 17th has been decided upon as release date for "Bonnie May," the first of the four super-productions starring Bessie Love, which are to be released by Federated.

Bessie Love is one of the most popular stars of the cinema and ever since the announcement was first made that she was to star in a series of productions produced by Andrew J. Callaghan, and that these were to be released by Federated Exchanges, interest has run high, for Miss Love is a favorite among the exhibitors and it has long been felt that if she were given the opportunity she would be capable of producing pictures far superior to any in which she has yet appeared.

Since the first advertisement announcing the release of Bessie Love productions by Federated Exchanges appeared in the trade papers the Federated Exchanges have been flooded with inquiries from the exhibitors all over the United States asking the release date of the first production. Reports from various Federated members indicate that these Bessie Love productions will prove one of the most popular series ever released.

"Bonnie May," the first release, is from the well known novel of the same name, which was written by Louis Dodge, and appeared in book form, having been published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

Eagon Finishes Script for Pinnacle Comedy

Kenneth L. Eagon of Chicago, recently associated with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, exploitation and sales, has finished "Cedarbrook Farm," which will be the scenario used for the first Pinnacle Comedy, released by Pinnacle Production, Inc., November 1. Eddy Eckels, general manager of the Independent Films Association, took the script on "Cedarbrook Farm" with him to the studios at Glendale, Cal.

Leo and Blanch White and Al Martin will be starred in Pinnacle Comedies. Eagon has started to work on the second comedy—"Raspberries."

$100,000 Improvements on Berwilla Studio

Improvements to the tune of $100,000 on their studio are rapidly being made at the plant of the Berwilla Film Corporation in Hollywood, Cal., which will consist of a mammoth dark stage, electric light plant, workmen's recreation room and refectory and other changes.

Ben Wilson, the serial producer, is the president of Berwilla, producing Select serials under his own management, but utilizing the Berwilla plant. According to William LaPlante, Berwilla's general manager, several new stars will be added to their roster in November, when the studio will be in shape to care for the additional load. Berwilla's first production is the Arrow serial, "Thunderbolt Jack," featuring Jack Hoxie, which is almost completed.

Agnes F. Bain Adapts "Virgin of Paris"

Agnes Fletcher Bain, who has written many motion picture successes, is responsible for the scenariozation of "The Virgin of Paris" which is adapted from Anthony Hope's famous book "Sophia." The Virgin of Paris" will be released in six reels by Mr. Raver on the territorial plan.

Among Miss Bain's noted contributions to the screen are "The Mystic Hour," which was produced by the Apollo Pictures and "The Master Crook," in which Edmund Breese starred.

Mesco Pictures Starts on First Production

The Mesco Pictures Corporation of Kansas City, announces that its first production is now well under way. It is entitled "Jesse James Under the Black Flag," based upon the exploits of Jesse James. Jesse James, Jr., the son of the bandit, is portraying the role of his father. Diana Reed plays the leading feminine role. Franklyn P. Choates is producting the picture.

Harry Sherman Offers Franchise Plan to Independents

Holders to Receive 12 Pictures a Year: No Advance Required

Harry Sherman, President of Sherman Productions Corporation

INAUGURATING what is said to be an entirely novel and original plan of operation between the independent producer and distributor, so different in detail from the established methods now in vogue as to be almost revolutionary, Harry A. Sherman, widely known in the industry for his successful exploitation of many big attraction productions in the past five years, announces this week the formation of Sherman Productions Corporation, which he has organized to produce or acquire motion picture rights of premier box-office quality for the Independent field.

In making the announcement, Mr. Sherman states that two productions of the highest attraction value have already been completed and are now ready for release and a third is well on the way toward completion. The first of these productions, "Man and Woman," written and directed by Charles A. Logue, is scheduled for release November 15. Thereafter, attractions will be released monthly.

Mr. Sherman enters the ranks of the producers after an extraordinarily successful career, both as an exhibitor, an exchangeman and an independent marketer of big attraction productions. His knowledge of the showmanship and box-office values is therefore unique and his judgment and opinion is valued highly by exhibitors and exchangemen in all sections of the country. Beginning half a dozen years ago with a small theatre in the outskirts of Minneapolis, Minn., he soon became the owner and manager of the Lyric, the largest motion picture house in that city.

As the head of the Sheman-Elliott Exchange he later built up one of the most thriving and successful independent distributing organizations in the West and his exploitations of "The Birth of a Nation," "Ramona," and other big feature attractions and the tremendous profits secured by him and for the exchangemen and exhibitors associated with him are motion picture history.

Consequently his advent into producing ranks as the head of Sherman Productions Corporation is of decided interest to all who have watched his meteor-like development and the innovations which he is planning will be received with correspondingly great attention.

"In announcing the formation of Sherman Productions Corporation," said Mr. Sherman, "I have no hesitation in saying that I believe the plan I am offering the independent exchange, is the fairest and most advantageous ever made to a distributor by any producer.

"I have perfected it in every detail and I am ready to stake my reputation on the plan's absolute success, although it may now seem almost revolutionary from a producer viewpoint.

"Sherman Productions Corporation will make all its attractions entirely with its own capital and it will not ask one cent from its franchise-holders until the actual, physical delivery of the positive prints. Then, and then only, the actual production cost, pro-rated according to territory, will be required.

"Our profits are wholly dependent on the exhange's rentals of each picture and the foreign rights. In the latter our franchise holders will participate equally with us, thus reducing or eliminating altogether their original outlay.

"I have divided the United States and Canada into twenty-five territorial areas in which Sherman Productions Corporation will grant franchises for a period of five years, with a guarantee of twelve pictures annually, or more if a majority of the franchise-holders desire it.

"Forty per cent of this territory has already been satisfactorily allotted prior to the public announcement.

"The proposition is so simple and above board and so distinctly advantageous for the distributor, that I anticipate no delay in placing the remaining franchises with the livest and most responsible independent exchanges in the territories which are still open.

"I have two productions ready for release, which I will match against any program feature now in the market for real, money-making box-office value. They are both Class A pictures in every respect, and the third, which is now being made, and all succeeding pictures that we make or acquire, will be up to or above this standard.

"From the exchange man's end there has never been a prosposition like it. A guarantee of twelve big attractions and not a cent to pay or advance until the actual delivery of the goods and then only the bare cost. The same holds good for all lithographs, lobby displays and accessories of every kind, which will be supplied at cost.

"Sherman Productions Corporation will receive as its share on each picture twenty per cent of the gross business done by each exchange in its territory and fifty per cent of the foreign rights. The other fifty per cent will be divided pro rata among the franchise holders.

"Out of its share, Sherman Productions Corporation will maintain offices in New York, pay all salaries of its executive staff, arrange for the sale of foreign rights and carry on an advertising campaign continuously in the trade papers. All this aside from the costs and advance expenses of each production.

"As soon as all franchises have been allotted I shall appoint a man, selected by the franchise holders, as treasurer of the company. They will then deposit in a bank also selected by them, the sum of $100,000, proportioned in amount according to territory.

"This will be held in escrow during the period of the franchise and prior to that time can only be withdrawn by reason of the franchise-holder's failure to fulfill his obligations.

"I am not overstating, when I say that I firmly believe this plan to be the most practical and most satisfactory ever offered to the independent exchanges of America."

Mr. Sherman is making his headquarters in the Longacre Building, 1472 Broadway, New York, where the executive offices of the new company will be situated.

Arrow Representative Starts on Trip

J. S. Jessey, special representative of the Arrow Film Corporation, left this week on a three months' trip in the interest of the Arrow. Mr. Jessey will make a swing over the western circuit.

Levey's Production Plans

"White Bottle," Second Picture, Nears End; "Man to Man" Is Third

HAVING completed "Uncle Sam of Freedom Ridge," which was given its premiere in two theatres in the same night at New York recently, Harry Levey is busy on his second production "The White Bottle," which is being completed under the direction of Harry Fraser.

"The White Bottle," the second of the Harry Levey Productions features, is being completed rapidly under the direction of Harry Fraser. This picture is said to be a message to the Mothers of the Country. All interior scenes were completed this week, and the company, which is headed by Lillian Bonnie, the Ziegfeld beauty, Leslie Hull, and the Carr Kiddies, have been making exteriors in Connecticut. Mr. Fraser is also responsible for the continuity of this picture, which is to be announced for release at an early date, it is said.

Third of the Harry Levey Productions will be a picturization of "Man to Man," the story by John Leitch. This, too, will follow Mr. Levey's policy of producing features with a big central idea, in that "Man to Man" presents one solution to the big labor problem confronting the industrial world today.

Mr. Levey has also secured the screen rights to "Tim Talks," the series of sketches on life written by Tim Thrift, that have won such wide-spread popularity that they have been syndicated to the newspapers and magazines throughout the United States. Three of these "Tim Talks," namely "The Silent Partner," "There Was a Time," and "The Doff Deserving," will be placed in production soon.

Joan Film Builds Studio

Billy West to Work in Large, Well-Equipped Building on Coast

IN its decision to make its series of twelve Billy West two-reel comedies, the Joan Film Sales Company has built a modern and generously equipped studio in Hollywood. This will avoid the rental of studios from others, and will put the Billy West company entirely at its ease, allowing it full and exclusive use of its equipment.

The new Billy West studio, which is the name given it by Joan, and was planned with a view to the nature of the comedies Billy West will produce for Joan.

One of the novel features of the West studio is the removable roof, which is controlled by electric attachment and which in the course of eight minutes unfolds from the center and rises on a plane with the walls, giving an outdoor effect to the studio, and making it possible to stage "street scenes" on the floor of the studio.

The erection of the West studio in accordance with the nature and plot of the comedies he will produce was considered to be a very wise course, as it makes it possible to follow the script of the scenarios faithfully, and avoids the delay of special construction for each new comedy.

The properties that have been bought for the new West studio have been specially designed to fit the scenarios. Automobiles and other vehicles of curious construction— "trick" furniture, and bizarre costumes form some of the innovations in equipment for the West studio.

Variety in Kineto Review

Four Subjects of Wide Appeal Are Seen in Recent Additions

AN illustration of the great variety in the Kineto Review, one of the series of releases under the Urban Popular Classics, was given one day this week when four new subjects were run off for Mr. Urban and his immediate staff.

Another Kineto Review is called "Peculiar Pets" and one hardly realizes how many such there are in the world until they are seen in the pictures. There are many persons in the world who lavish their affection on rats, mice, foxes, bears, snakes—not all on dogs and cats which are the common variety of pets. And after seeing the picture these seemingly strange pets aren't so strange after all.

Still another issue of the Kineto Review treats of "Water Babies" and there are ever so many more than most people know about. The picture shows them in their own and in foreign habitations in many parts of the world.

The unusual interest which persons of all classes manifest whenever they pass a big building operation has been drawn upon in still another issue of the Kineto Review wherein there is a detailed study of testing machinery at Columbia University, New York, showing how tests are made in compliance with the New York City building ordinances.

"See It First," Says Apex

No Quotations Given on "Out of the Dust" Before Screening Film

THE feature of the sales campaign on John P. McCarthy's "Out of the Dust," which is being offered by the Apex Film Company to State Rights, is the surprise which the company's policy has occasioned among State Rights buyers.

In reply to many letters asking for quotations on territory, it has been the concern's procedure to inform the prospective buyer that no prices are quoted without screen examination. The buyers are told that if they can arrange to be in New York City or will delegate somebody here to view the production for them negotiations will be entered into on such a basis; but otherwise the most urgent effort will bring forth no quotations on "Out of the Dust."

It is announced that the set of Remington's in four colors made from the original plates by special arrangement with Colliers is now in work and the complete exhibit will consist of over thirty specimens of the famous painter's masterpieces. The intent of this adjunct of the display is so that theatres showing "Out of the Dust" may open their reception foyer or mezzanine early mornings for a free art exhibit to the public. The tone and class of this innovation will no doubt quickly appeal to exhibitors and publicity men who recognize the true values in theatre advertising. The press book, lithographs and other novelty exploitation material on "Out of the Dust" are coming off the press every day.

Big Campaign Book Issued

Elaborate Press Book Prepared to Exploit "The Devil's Angel"

AN elaborate press and campaign book, prepared by newspaper men and exploitation experts, has been made to aid exhibitors and independent exchange men to realize the utmost from "The Devil's Angel," the special production being distributed through state right exchanges by the Clark Cornelius Corporation.

Dozens of unique exploitation ideas are described, which, it is said, every exhibitor in the country, whether he has a theatre that seats 500 or a theatre that seats 5,000, can make excellent use of and which are bound to bring results at the box office. Line drawings, which will prove exceedingly practical for most any kind of advertising, including newspaper work, programs, heralds, throwaways, post cards, window cards, car cards or any other medium that the exhibitor may desire to use, have been prepared by artists.

The innumerable opportunities offered for newspaper publicity due to the universal interest at the present time in psychic phenomena and other spiritualistic beliefs, will, it is believed, give the exhibitor every chance for making the production the success that it deserves.

Inter-Ocean Acquires "Below the Surface"

A BIG photoplay is promised to foreign film buyers in "Below the Deadline," a five-reel production made by Ascher Bros. Enterprises, which has been acquired by the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation for exclusive foreign distribution.

The production, which was made in California under the personal supervision of James P. McGowan, brings to the screen a story of the Harbor Police and their struggles with the wharf rats along San Francisco's Barbary Coast.

Levey Service to Make Electricity Film

The Harry Levey Service Corporation has undertaken to produce upon the screen an educational feature showing the entire story of Electricity—its uses and adaptations, and the manner in which it has been turned into the channels of progress in every corner of the globe.

The feature is to be released in the form of a series of ten one-reel pictures, each one complete in itself and dealing with a separate and distinct phase of the story of Electricity. They are to be released at the rate of one picture a month.

Electrical Effects to Exploit Joan Serial

The Joan Film Sales Co., who are now offering their 15-episode serial, "The Invisible Ray" to the states-rights market have completed an original variety of exploitation devices, conceived especially for this serial. They are almost all of an electrical nature.

States-rights buyers who were shown the apparatus mentioned declared that it is as effective as it is inexpensive.

Louise Fazenda Heads Company

Former Sennett Star Signed by Special Pictures Corp.

RUMORS concerning the future plans of Louise Fazenda, the Mack Sennett comedienne, were set at rest this week by the announcement from the West Coast that contracts have just been signed between Miss Fazenda, and the Special Pictures Corporation, whereby the former will head her own company in a series of two-reel comedies to be released by the Special Pictures Corporation.

Miss Fazenda, who is perhaps best known for her stellar role in "Down On the Farm," will leave soon for the East for a fortnight's stay in New York, and during her absence the Special Pictures scenario department will prepare several comedy starring vehicles for her use when she returns.

Miss Fazenda is the fourth Sennett star to join the ranks of the Special Pictures Corporation. Others are Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin and Harry Gribbon. It is the plan of the executives of the Special Pictures to have ten releases in the short reel field by October 1.

The Special Pictures Corporation which is a Los Angeles organization is specializing exclusively in one and two reel subjects. This week the company formally took over the Jesse D. Hampton studios on Santa Monica boulevard. The studio, which cost $100,000, has been leased for one year.

Chester Conklin, the company announces, has finished his first two-reel comedy to be released through Special Pictures Corporation. "Home Rule" is its title, Harry Edwards directed, Jack Martin supervised, and Frances Conrad played the leading feminine role.

Charlotte Merriam this week also completed her first "Comiclassics" release for Special Pictures Corporation. Reggie Morris directed the story "Up in Betty's Bedroom." Jay Belasco played the masculine support. "A Seminary Scandal" is the title of the second Comiclassics release starring Charlotte Merriam to be directed by Reggie Morris. The Hollywood studio club, where homeless girls of the movies live, furnished the seminary location. Jay Belasco heads the supporting cast.

"A Pajama Marriage" is the title of the first two-reel comedy Neely Edwards will start in for Special Pictures Corporation. Reggie Morris is directing, and fifty chickenettes feature in the ensemble scenes.

Joseph J. Lane, well known in Angeleno film circles, has been named studio manager of the Special Pictures Corporation, following the taking over of the big Jesse D. Hampton studios by Special. He succeeds Earl D. Shanks, resigned.

C. C. Craig, prominent in the West Coast film industry, has been appointed business manager of the Special Pictures Corporation. Craig, who is also well known in commercial circles, handled the business end of producing "Julius Ceasar" the big open air spectacle with movie stars in the leading roles, two years ago.

Hazel Dawn Returns to Screen

Popular Star to Make Series for Bimberg Productions

HAZEL DAWN, known as one of the original Famous Player screen stars, and known to the followers of the legitimate theatre as the star of Broadway successes from "The Pink Lady" to "Up in Mabel's Room," has announced her intention of returning to her former medium this season. Last week she entered into a starring contract with A. J. Bimberg, by which she is to head the organization that is to present a series of modern feature dramas to be known as Bimberg Productions.

It is five years since Miss Dawn has played in pictures, her only screen production since leaving the Famous Players having been "The Lone Wolf," directed by Herbert Brenon. But the memory of her early screen successes is still fresh, and the amount of national publicity that she has gained through her stage successes, as well as the fact that she is universally recognized as one of the finest types of American beauty will no doubt insure interest in her reappearance as a screen star.

Miss Dawn came from a celebrated family from the State of Utah. She was still in her teens when she set New York by the ears through her performance of the title role of the "Pink Lady." Her hit in this role was responsible for her engagement as one of the select group of Famous Players who made the pictures that started that concern on its sensational career.

Miss Dawn will continue her stage work, but it is probable that throughout the duration of her contract with Mr. Bimberg her appearances will be confined to Broadway.

The first of the Bimberg productions in which Miss Dawn will appear has been entitled "What Is Love?" and is described as a human drama of today, dealing with a vital problem that has entered the life of every man and of every woman. It is said to offer Miss Dawn a role of the type that her admirers have long wished to see her assume. It is from a scenario by Theodore A. Liebler, Jr., the author of "Success" and other stage plays and of numerous photoplay scripts. Preliminary work on the production has already begun.

Mr. Bimberg will have completed his organization this week, and the actual production of "What Is Love?" will commence at once. Among the notables who will participate in the production is Edward A. Morange, of Gates and Morange, America's leading scenic artists. This firm was responsible for the stage settings of "The Garden of Allah," "The Daughter of Heaven," "Joseph and His Brethren" and other big spectacles produced at the Century Theatre, as well as of a great percentage of the noteworthy productions now current in the theatre. Mr. Morange will have supervision of the art department of Bimberg Productions.

Cassinelli Wins Bookings

"Hidden Light," Commonwealth Production, Makes New Records

THAT "The Hidden Light," starring Dolores Cassinelli, is establishing a booking record in upper New York State for independent productions, is the information that has been received by Sam Zierler, president of the Commonwealth Film Corporation, who controls the world's rights to the subject, from F. M. Zimmermann, President of the Nu-Art Pictures Corporation, Buffalo, who was the initial buyer of territory on the picture.

Although Mr. Zimmermann has had prints of the picture only a few weeks, his salesmen have booked it widely through western New York. Harold B. Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome and Criterion, Buffalo, will play the production for a long run.

The same success that is greeting the production in upper New York is being met in Greater New York, announces Commonwealth. Although Mr. Zierler could have sold the Greater New York rights, he declined the bid, and decided to control the local territory himself. He operates in Greater New York as an independent.

President Zierler will soon announce the sale of various territories. He states that he has made arrangements whereby he will control the world's rights to several important independent productions and he plans to choose an established exchangeman in each territory with whom his relations will continue.

Kineto Review Soon Ready

Series Will Differ from "Movie Chats"; Single Subject to Be Treated

THE Kineto Review soon to be released by Charles Urban, will be an entirely separate and distinct subject from Charles Urban's Movie Chats, though both will come under the same general classification of the Urban Popular Classics, it is announced. The difference in the two subjects is in treatment. Charles Urban's Movie Chats are very much a form of illustrated lecture in films; they cover from three to twenty pictorial subjects with the titles written in the first person, giving the illusion of a personally conducted sight seeing trip to the audience.

The Kineto Review is devoted to a single subject in a series of great variety. There are really series within series; subjects of travel, of science, of art, of industry, of costume, of customs, of the interesting things all over the world. As in the case of the Movie Chats, the Kineto Review is in one reel.

An exhibitor will be able, it is said, to gain a consistent audience by devoting a certain day each week to each of these releases. Each reel is a complete story in itself, and yet they compel a return of interest to any person who has seen one of them.

Mr. Urban is away ahead in his work of preparation; he has Movie Chats prepared far in advance of schedule and there are more than fifty Kineto Reviews prepared for release. In time there will be 1000 reels of this subject, all of permanent value. They will form the first great film encyclopedia to be known as "The Living Book of Knowledge."

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

Miss Rosenfield's Service

Independent Service Established to Help Independent Exchanges

MISS MILDRED S. ROSENFIELD, who has been active for several years in the state right field, as purchasing representative for Sol Lesser and his various associates, announces the establishment of an independent service for the benefit of state right exchanges.

Based upon her knowledge of marketing and purchasing of film, she has organized an efficient special service for a group of selected clients in various parts of the country. The service also includes reviewing, negotiating and buying, and handling any matters of interest to them.

Among those already lined up are such representative exchanges as Sol Lesser, De Luxe Feature Film Co. of Seattle, Wash.; A. H. Blank Enterprises, of Des Moines, Iowa; Joseph Skirboll of First National, Pittsburgh; Doll-Van Film Corporation of Illinois and Indiana; Morart Film Company of Baltimore, Md.; Masterpiece Pictures Co. of Cleveland.

Equity Buyers Plan Drive

Exchangemen in Conference, Decide on "Whispering Devils" Campaign

FIVE buyers of Equity's Conway Tearle feature, "Whispering Devils," namely: A. M. Gollos, of Chicago; Ben Amsterdam, of Philadelphia; Joe Skirball, of Pittsburgh; Sam Grand, of Boston, and Sam Zierler of New York, met this week in the office of Equity, in response to an invitation by Joseph I. Schnitzer, its president, to get together on a systematic and detailed plan of exploitation and advertising on "Whispering Devils." The conference lasted for over two hours, and the results were reported on extremely satisfactory.

The invitation was sent out as a result of Equity's policy of an exchange of ideas among its buyers, so that each may benefit by the experience and suggestions of all. The result of the meeting was that many new angles of exploitation were brought up, and a campaign collectively outlined, with the assistance of Nat Rothstein, head of the Equity advertising office.

Among the many novel features of the exploitation and advertising campaign that were accepted, were four from the press-book on the picture—viz., the generous distribution of ear-muffs described in the campaign book; the use of the ballyhoo; the mirror with a devil cut-out, and most important of all, the adoption of a prologue that was completed by Equity's staff last week.

Many Gaumont Features

Twelve Productions, Four Serials and Comedies Will Be Released

GAUMONT claims to have for the following year the largest output of any company on the independent market. Their product is made up of twelve features, four big serials and probably twenty-four comedies. The first of the features, "The Fall of a Saint" has already been released.

The initial serial offering, "In the Clutches of the Hindu," is described as fifteen episodes of thrills and adventure. It will be followed in due time by others of the same nature. Because of this, Gaumont points out, state right buyers are assured of a full year's supply of serials which they can fully rely on. Nowhere in the independent market, it is said, is such a comprehensive offering made to the exchangeman.

The first Gaumont feature, "The Fall of a Saint" features Josephine Earle, who has had a great amount of previous screen material, and who it is excepted, will prove exceedingly popular. The second feature will be "Out of the Darkness" and Gertrude McCoy is featured. Miss McCoy is a sister of Bessie McCoy and is said to be a talented actress. "Out of the Darkness" is a story of mystery and adventure with a goodly amount of romance.

Mack Reports Demand for Short Subjects

Joan's special representative, A. Johnny Mack, who has just returned from a six-week tour of the Middle West, stopping off for a flying visit in the South and the Northeastern cities, reports a heavy demand among independent exchangemen for short subjects—chiefly comedies and serials.

Mr. Mack visited all the large states-rights distributors of Chicago, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, Des Moines, Cincinnati, Washington, D. C., and Atlanta on behalf of Joan's new serial "The Invisible Ray" and the series of Billy West comedies.

Weil Turns Free Lance

Joe Weil, director of publicity and advertising for National Film; Joe Brandt, Screen Snapshots and C. B. C. has entered the free lance field.

Noted Child Actress in Canyon Production

"Baby" Jean O'Rourke, who has sprung into the foremost ranks of screen child actors almost at first appearance, is the little girl in one of the Franklyn Farnum feature productions, entitled, "Hunger of the Blood" now being produced by Wm. N. Selig to be State Righted by the Canyon Pictures Corporation. She is said to contribute a most striking and remarkable effort to the big feature.

Baby Jean was well trained for her entrance into pictures. Martin Beck himself engaged her for the Orpheum circuit, together with her little sister. The two will be remembered as the "Yerxa Twins" in vaudeville.

Edwin Frazee Making Comedy Series

Edwin Frazee, the comedy director and head of the Frazee Film Productions, of Riverside, Cal., is busily engaged in the production of a series of two-reel comedies for the independent market, which will be released once a month. Contracts have already been signed up with many state right exchanges for this series, and the first subject entitled, "After Bed Time," will be released October 3rd.

Buyers Interested in "The Devil's Angel"

Following on the heels of the initial announcement in the trade magazines that "The Devil's Angel" was to be distributed through state right exchanges by the Clark-Cornelius Corporation, inquiries have been received from all parts of the country for territorial rights.

In addition to this a number of bona fide offers have been received from territory recognized by independent distributers as the most difficult to dispose of in the country.

The Clark-Cornelius Corporation is preparing every possible accessory that will aid the independent distributor and the exhibitor to give the picture the success that it deserves.

Arrow Announces New Series

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, this week announced the closing of a contract with Jack Eaton, of the Town and County Films, for the distribution of a series of one reel pictures to be known as "Sport Pictorials." These pictures are to be released one every other week and are to be devoted entirely to various kind of sports. They are to be edited by Grantland Rice, one of the widest read newspaper writers in the world. Mr. Rice has two columns pertaining to sporting matters appear over his signature in fifty-three daily newspapers in the United States, and a full page in color in over thirty Sunday newspapers. He is a recognized writer on all sporting matters and has a tremendous following among the sport loving fans of America.

A novel angle in the distribution of these films is that they are to be sold in blocks of twelve, that is an exhibitor will not be asked to contract for more than twelve pictures at one time.

According to the Arrow announcement, these reels will have an unusual appeal for the reason that sports are universal in their appeal, as every one is a follower of some particular sport. It may be racing, baseball, swimming, fishing, hunting, yachting, foot-ball, or anyone of the other sports but it is absolutely certain that there is no one who is not a devotee of some form of sport. Particular attention is called to the increasing interest in sporting matters since the termination of the World War. It is a fact that the base-ball clubs have enjoyed a greater patronage and played to bigger receipts than ever before in their history. These Sport Pictorials will not, in any sense of the word, be News Weeklies and events that appear in them are exclusive as they will not be in any other motion pictures.

"Sport Pictorials" to Be Sold in Blocks of Twelve

Slow motion will be used in conjunction with regular motion and use will be made of an especially constructed camera known as the Ackeley Camera, which has been especially designed for taking scenes at races and any sport where the scene of action changes with great rapidity. This camera is used for the first time in Sport Pictorials.

The slogan of Sport Pictorials is action. The first release is entitled "The Essential Pastime" or "How Will You Have Your Bath?" and treats in a very entertaining manner of the various forms of bathing. It shows how the child of the city tenements steals its bath from the public fountain as compared with its more fortunate brother of the country who has the delight of the old swimming hole. It shows swimming races and fancy diving by experts, aquaplaning in Lake George, and bathing at some of the popular beaches of America's summer resorts.

The second release is entitled "The Thrill of the Thoroughbred" and shows the sport of kings as it is practised at Saratoga and other tracks. Every angle of the training and care of race horses is shown in this picture, together with some wonderfully interesting shots of Man-O'-War, the wonder horse of the age. The third release, is entitled "Girls Will Be Boys," and shows the various sports which, heretofore have been the prerogative of the male sex, but since the event of woman suffrage and the bringing into practise of the theory that women are not only man's equal but superior, have been taken up in earnest by the fair sex.

Arrow calls particular attention to the fact that these reels will be produced under the personal supervision of a man who has probably had more experience in the production and selection of short subjects than any other individual in the world. Jack Eaton, who as managing director of the Strand theatre in New York, passed on over 2,000 single reels in one year for the purpose of selecting therefrom the cream of entertainment for the public.

The Public Forms Final Jury

By HARRY REVIER

PRODUCING a picture is very much like writing a book. The goal should be the public, the ultimate consumer. No successful novel is written for the benefit of the publisher or the newstand dealer. It is aimed at the great majority, the class whose opinion marks its success or failure.

Pictures have the same jury, are good or bad according to the verdict of the same majority. But how many producers and directors recognize this fact? Many of the screen's five-reel weak sisters today are financial and artistic invalids simply because they were not made for the screen.

In a general way, of course, the producers of these failures admitted that the films would eventually reach the public and made certain concessions accordingly. But in the main they aimed their pictures at the exhibitor. Thinking entirely of impressing him and without regard for the effect on the story, they put in this scene or that and burden the picture with an expensive look, later shifting the burden to the theatre-owner in the form of increased rental.

Many of the pictures thus laden with spectacular scenes and lavish sets would be far greater money-makers for the exhibitors if they contained good heart interest or little human touches instead of these startling but cold features. A strong, consistent story, well acted and properly directed, makes a good picture. To break up the interest and continuity just to inject flashy scenes is artistic suicide.

I do not mean by this that the selling qualities of a picture should be slurred in production. But I do maintain that the sales merits of a picture are in the things that fit into it naturally and not in sets, scenes or effects that are tossed in promiscuously just to give it what some producers call a "sales angle" for securing exhibitors' bookings.

It is a matter of record that pictures costing only $15,000 to produce have earned more than productions whose cost sheet reached the $150,000 mark. The reason for this lies principally in the fact that the $10,000 picture was made for the benefit of the picture-goer and the $150,000 white elephant was made to sell.

The exhibitor is best served by a picture which makes a hit with his audience. A production is on the high road to success when it appeals so strongly to Mrs. Jones, who takes her two children to the matinee, or Mrs. Brown, who makes her husband treat the family to an evening at the movies that they talk about it to their neighbors and advise the lady across the street to see it too.

This element, all regular, human folks, represents the ultimate consumer. An exhibitor is interested in a picture only insofar as it interests his audiences. Make pictures for the benefit of the public, make them to interest the public and the public only, and the exhibitor has something real to sell.

Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., who are distributing "Up in Mary's Attic," through state right exchanges, announce that they have received numerous offers from Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Washington, D. C., and the New England states, where the production has not as yet been released.

Virtually all of the exchanges, who have made offers for territory, have agreed to play the picture as a road show preparatory to distributing it as a regular release. The success with which the picture has played in other states has prompted the prospective buyers to handle the comedy in this fashion.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 220 SO. STATE ST.

One of the biggest contracts for films animation ever made has just been landed by O. W. Carlson, business manager of the Chicago Carlson Studios. Under this contract the Carlson Studios will animate the school films of the Society for Visual Education.

The Society has undertaken to take the curse out of education. Its goal is to have a projection machine in every classroom. History, geography, physiology, even arithmetic and spelling will be made easy for Johnny to learn by means of the movie screen. Wallace A. Carlson, former newspaper cartoonist, will direct the animation of school films. It's in the Carlson Studios that Mrs. Min Gump and her noble spouse Andy are put on celluloid. This studio also does the animation for Rothacker industrial pictures.

W. R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, is spending a week in New York City. W. H. Strafford Is back at the Chicago plant after directing the Rothacker industrial picture in Michigan. W. F. Kuehl, an Essanay old timer, has joined the Rothacker Industrial camera force. While with the Dodge Automobile Company, he made several water pictures and for a time was loaned to the government for aerial camera work, so he brings to Rothacker an unusually valuable experience.

Milton Hirsch, former star city salesman of the Paramount forces in Chicago, has been assigned to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he is representing Famous Players-Lasky, virtually as a resident salesman. It is probable that within a short time Paramount will have an exchange in Milwaukee, so extensive has been the enlargement of business in that city.

L. B. Salkin has packed his riding clothes and golf clubs and departed for West Baden, where he will spend a two weeks' vacation. He expects that the work of redecorating and refurnishing the Jackson Park theatre will be practically completed about the time of his return, and that he will open its doors to the public early in October.

Fred Aiken of Vitagraph has closed a contract for a two weeks' showing of "Trumpet Island" at the Ziegfeld theatre immediately following the run of the big Griffith picture, "The Love Flower," which has been packing this Michigan Avenue house for the last two weeks. Manager Kensie is planning a heavy advertising campaign for "Trumpet Island," and will give it an elaborate presentation. Prices will be one dollar, the same as during the engagement of the Griffith picture.

Arthur Lowy, head of the recently organized Illinois and Indiana rights for the Neal Hart series of eight five-reel out-door pictures, the forthcoming series of Pinnacle comedies and "The Lone Hand."

Chicago District Manager Harris P. Wolfberg, of Paramount, was the guest of President Al Steffes, of the United Theatrical Protective League, on a motor trip from Minneapolis to La Crosse recently, when a party of Minneapolis exhibitors attended the opening of the handsome new Rivoli theatre at La Crosse. This is the new Koppleberg and Burford theatre. President Steffes, who presided at the convention of his organization at Minneapolis, took Mr. Wolfberg, Phil Reisman, Paramount branch manager, and several exhibitors on the trip. They stopped at Winona and Rochester, Minn., long enough for Wolfberg to sign up two theatres in those towns. Incidentally, Mr. Steffes himself signed a Paramount contract for his Minneapolis houses.

Gala festivities were put on by Messrs. Koppleberg and Burford in honor of the film men present at the opening of the Rivoli.

William Burford, of Aurora, has closed contracts with Paramount for 1920-21 service. He will play first runs in his Rialto theatre at Aurora. Mr. Burford was scheduled to make an address at the Springfield convention of the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance this week.

Max Roos, popular Realart salesman, is busy accepting congratulations of his many friends in film circles over the arrival of the stork at his house. Mr. and Mrs. Roos and the new arrival are all doing well, thank you.

Richard Kippling, who has been in Chicago several days in the interests of his new series of six five-reel features, has received a wire that Tom Parker, of Dallas, Texas, has purchased the rights for "The Midnight Rider," the first of the new productions to be released, for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

F. J. Rembusch, who recently purchased the houses owned by Dolly Spurr at Marion, Ind., has now taken control of the theatres.

H. W. Weiss, of Superior Screen Service, Inc., has been made a member of the Advisory Board of National Exchanges, Inc.

Mrs. Sirk has sold her theatre at North Manchester, Ind., and has bought the Grand theatre at Bluffton, which she will operate.

Sherman Kelly, until recently with Superior Screen Service, Inc., has joined the Chicago staff of Robertson-Cole.

Among out-of-town exhibitors seen around the exchanges during the week were: S. A. Simpson, Primo theatre, Medaryville; R. E. Brian, Capital theatre, Pekin, Ill.; George Simons, Avonia, Ill.; Joe Tabor, of the Majestic, Belvidere, Ill.; Jack Heffler, of the Heffler Enterprises and D. S. Smith, of the Princess theatre, Hoopeston, Ill.

B. Herbert Milligan, president of Creation Films Company, was in New York this week in the interests of "For the Freedom of Ireland," which will be released throughout the country at an early date.

A. M. Gollos, of Gollos Enterprises, as recently announced, has secured the exclusive rights to Equity Pictures in this territory, and is completing arrangements for an extensive exploitation and advertising campaign which will mark the first release in the territory, which will be "Whispering Devils," starring Conway Tearle. Following this big picture, Mr. Gollos will offer "She Played and Paid," featuring Fanny Ward, and "Keep to the Right," with Edith Taliferro in the stellar role.

William Engelman, one of the most widely known film men in this district, is the latest addition to the staff of Gollos Enterprises, and already has taken charge of exploiting the list of Equity Pictures in Illinois and Indiana. Mr. Engelman's film experience includes two years as manager of Mutual's Indianapolis office, manager of his own exchange in Chicago, the old Exhibitors' Film Corporation, and connection with Universal's and Metro's Chucago branches as a salesman.

Mr. Gollos has revealed enough of his plans to make it certain that the exploitation campaign he is about to give Equity Pictures will be one which will make the public and exhibitors sit up and take notice.

Harry Spanuth, of Commonwealth Pictures Corporation, has been in the East for the past week, and, according to wires received at his Chicago office, has sold the New York state rights (outside New York City) for twenty-four of his Vod-a-vil movies to Gardner Pictures, Inc., of Buffalo, New York and has disposed of the New York City rights to a firm whose name he has not yet disclosed. Mr. Spanuth also expects to sell the Eastern rights to his new Billy Whisker series of one-reel comedies while in New York.

"What's Your Hurry?" the new Wallace Reid picture, backed by the big exploitation campaign given it through the auto safety first auto campaigners adopting it as a slogan, is making a most successful record in Chicago. It originally was booked for four days at the Randolph theatre, but due to its drawing power, was held for two weeks —the first so-called "program picture" ever to accomplish this feat at the Randolph. Following this, "What's Your Hurry?" played a two-weeks' run at the Orpheum, another Jones, Linick & Schaefer house, and then skipped to the Riviera for a week's run. According to Sales Manager Steve Montgomery, of Paramount, exhibitors are eagerly giving the picture extra days, and he has had to rush an order in for five extra prints. The Mack Truck people are supplying trucks to carry banners for all the theatres showing this feature in Chicago.

Fritzi Ridgeway Series Is Popular

General Manager W. D. Russell, of Capital Film Company, states that the Fritzi Ridgeway two-reelers, which are now ready for release, are being snapped up by state right exchanges, and on the return to Chicago of Si Griever, who has been on an extensive selling trip, announced that Mr. Griever had brought back a number of contracts for the sale of the state rights.

Paul Gilmore Tells of Oriental City

Paul Gilmore, well-known film star and director, announces further plans concerning his Oriental and Film City in Manatee County, Fla. The island, he states, is divided into three parts. At the end there will be a Japanese hotel. The Oriental scheme will be carried out throughout the island, and the bungalows will be built in Papanese style.

The center of the island is to contain the moving picture studios. The third part of the island will be devoted to the raising of fruits and vegetables to supply the hotel and bungalows.

E. Silcocks Returns to Special Headquarters

E. H. Silcocks, special representative of the Special Pictures Corporation, has returned to the executive home office in Los Angeles.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

ANOTHER important acquisition to its remarkable schedule of Fall and Winter releases has just been made by Pathe Exchange, Inc., in the taking over of Leonce Perret's international drama, "The Empire of Diamonds." The story is a classic Continental novel, written by Valentine Mandelstamm. Pathe Exchange, Inc., will distribue the Perret production throughout Canada and Australia, in addition to the United States.

"The Empire of Diamonds" is an international drama in every meaning of the term. Mr. Perret filmed the production in the actual territory written about by Mr. Mandlestamm in his novel. The director took an entire company to Europe, filming scenes in London, Paris, Nice, Le Havre, Monte Carlo, the Riviera. He completed his work on a transatlantic liner and in New York City.

"Screen Snapshots" to Have New Feature

The principal entries from each city in the annual competition for amateurs for motion picture engagements, will be a feature in future releases of "Screen Snapshots," the "News Reel of Filmland," produced by Jack Cohn and Lewis Lewin. Fully 50,000 entries are received each year from every town and city in the United States for the Fame and Fortune Competition of the Brewster Publications, Inc., "Motion Picture Magazine," "Shadowland" and "Motion Picture Classic."

"Vet" Actress Joins Metro

Florence Turner Signs Contract and Will Work in Stock Company

FLORENCE TURNER, who was among the first actresses of the speaking stage to achieve signal success as an exponent of the silent drama, has just signed a contract making her the newest addition to the constantly growing stock company at the West Coast studios of Metro Pictures Corporation in Hollywood, Cal. Her agreement stipulates that Miss Turner shall for a term of years appear exclusively in Metro productions.

For the past three months this talented actress has been playing at the Metro West Coast studios, having had an important part in "Blackmail," Viola Dana's forthcoming release, and now she is enacting a role in "But Yet a Woman," Doraldina's first Metro starring vehicle.

Miss Turner was one of the first motion picture stars. She began her screen career with the Vitagraph company about thirteen years ago, and for six years was one of the foremost screen luminaries. Besides interpreting stellar roles, Miss Turner is also a writer of conspicuous ability. While with Vitagraph she wrote many of the stories for her productions.

Miss Turner spent four years in London, where she had her own studios and producing unit. Since returning to the United States she has played with Sessue Hayakawa in one picture, with Mitchell Lewis in "Fools and Gold" and done various leading parts for six months at Universal City.

The Metro stock company in Hollywood, ever increasing, now numbers six, all of whom are well known. Gareth Hughes, Wyndham Standing, Edward Connelly, Edward Jobson, Lawrence Grant, Cleo Madison and Florence Turner are members.

Equity Has Fine Cast in Taliaferro Film

Attention is being centred by critics and states-rights buyers who have seen Equity's Taliaferro production "Keep to the Right" on the excellent supporting cast of the picture. Chief among the members of the supporting cast is Gladden James. E. Coit Albertson, Frank Burbesk, Paul Panzer, Elizabeth Garrison, Edith Stockton and Elizabeth Kennedy are some of the other notables in the cast.

Jans Issues Folders on "Madonnas and Men"

The first of the advertising and publicity novelties to be put out on the Jans Pictures, Inc., super-feature, "Madonnas and Men" is a folder that will be sent out to exhibitors through the State Right exchanges. The folder depicts many of the startling scenes.

PAUL POWELL, who has been appointed by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, as one of the directors for the new Famous Players studio in London, arrived in New York, Tuesday, to consult with Mr. Lasky before sailing for London, September 30, in company with Charles H. Bell, who is returning to England to be studio manager.

"Although I am keenly enthusiastic over the prospect of making Paramount Pictures in England," said Mr. Powell, "I am going over there with an open mind. That is, I appreciate that English aims and English methods must be somewhat different from ours, and I am going to reconcile my own methods with those of British actors and technical men with whom I come in contact."

Rosemary Theby Star of Royal Comedy

Rosemary Theby is featured as the star in the sixth release of the new Royal Comedy series now being distributed by the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation through Reelcraft and allied Independent Exchanges throughout the United States. Leon Errol, Billy B. Van and Neal Burns are some of the other stars who have been featured in the series.

"Married to Order" is the title of Miss Theby's vehicle, which was directed by Charles Parrot. It is described as an unusually rapid farce comedy.

T. Roy Barnes and Grace Darmond in "So Long Letty," a forthcoming Robertson-Cole production

Lionel Barrymore as he appears in Whitman Bennett's production, "The Master Mind," a new release on the First National program

VITAGRAPH has completed the camera work on "Dead Men Tell No Tales," the Tom Terriss special production based on the famous story by E. W. Hornung, with the exception of the scenes showing the burning at sea of the "Lady Jermyn" and its complete destruction by gun powder.

As the big sailing vessel, purchased by Vitagraph especially for use in this production, may be blown up but once, Director Terriss is making haste slowly in filming this final scene. The ship is at anchor in Gravesand Bay, awaiting suitable weather, both as to light and condition of the sea, before being taken out beyond the three-mile limit where the Navy Department will see that it is completely destroyed and all danger of its becoming a derelict and a menace to navigation is removed.

"Everything for Sale" to Star Swanson

Plans for a series of productions starring Gloria Swanson were announced this week by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production.

Miss Swanson's first production as a Paramount star in her own right will be "Everything For Sale," an unusually powerful story written by a famous British author who had seen Miss Swanson in "Male and Female," and who wrote the story especially for her during Mr. Lasky's stay in London this summer.

Launch National Tie-Up on "Mid-Channel"

As a result of negotiations carried on for the past month between the Equity Pictures Corp., its franchise-holders in the principal cities of the country, and the largest department and fashion stores of the country, arrangements have been made for a tie-up between these establishments and the local Equity distributor on Clara Kimball Young's fourth Equity release, "Midchannel."

"Black Beauty" for Screen

Randolph Chester Tells How the Adaptation of Story Was Handled

SINCE the announcement of Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, that "Black Beauty," the famous story by Anna Sewell, was to be presented by Vitagraph in picture form as a big special production, many inquiries have reached George Randolph Chester, Vitagraph's editor-in-chief, regarding the possibilities of the story as a picture play. Is the original story to be retained in its entirety or if changed, how would it be done? This has been the trend of the questions. As Mr. Chester, with his wife as collaborator, made the scenario, he has made some explanation in order that there may be no fear of any tampering with the original story as written by Miss Sewell.

"It would have been foolhardy to have made any attempt to change the story of 'Black Beauty,'" says Mr. Chester. "Although the wonderful story was written more than 40 years ago, it is as popular today as it ever was.

"With a realization of the tremendous sympathetic appeal of the story of 'Black Beauty,' and an appreciation of its powerful dramatic possibilities, Mrs. Chester and myself started to adapt it to the screen. I will confess that we labored for several days before we found the way to introduce the human element, and consequently the dramatic action of the play. And then came the inspiration. Black Beauty knew only what was going on, on the outside; what he actually saw, or what was supposed to have been told to him by other horses. He did not know, and therefore could not tell, what the human characters did or thought when he was not present. There was an inside story of which he knew nothing, and it is this story that we have added to the screen version. No new characters have been introduced, and none of the horses in the original story has been omitted."

"Black Beauty" is being completed at Vitagraph's West Coast studios, under the direction of David Smith, who has made a study of animal pictures. Jean Paige appears in the leading feminine role of Jessie Gordon.

Capital May Add to Its List

Chicago Independents May Have Five Reel Modern Society Play

A RUMOR is current that the Capital Film Company, of Chicago, will soon announce the acquisition of a star of the first water who will be released in five-reel modern society drama and just recently when W. D. Russell, general manager of the company, was in Los Angeles he contracted for a series of six five-reel westerns starring Lester Cuneo, "the smiling dare-devil." Mr. Cuneo is to be supported by Grace Gordon, Annette Defoe, Thomas Delmar, Phillip Gastrock and a brilliant cast.

Work has already begun on these features, and the first one will be released in November.

State right buyers and exhibitors are to be given every possible assistance in exploiting the features as Capital will have for their use a large very complete press book, and a full line of paper cuts.

In addition to the Cuneo features, Capital will have for release in October Fritzi Ridgeway, "The girl with a thousand personalities" in two-reel westerns of exceptional action and thrills. Besides these a series of one-reel comedies that are beyond question, laugh producers.

Fanark Corp. Plans Series

To Start Second Production in October; "Crimson Cross" Is Ready

WITH the announcement by the Fanark Corporation that their initial production, "The Crimson Cross," by N. Brewster Morse, is now ready, and that releasing arrangements have been practically completed, comes the news that this company is planning a series of high-class art pictures along the same lines, the second of which, "The Strength of the Weak," also by Mr. Morse, will be produced in October.

The first production to be made by Fanark, "The Crimson Cross," directed by George Everett, who will also direct the second picture, deals with hypnotism. Mr. Morse, seeing a big story with a big moral and a big human appeal in the subject of hypnotism and its connection with crime, has endeavored to develop an interesting theme along entirely new and original lines.

"People are wearying of thrillers and pictures with a surplus amount of love interest," said President D. J. H. Levett, of Fanark. "They want a happy combination of the two extremes. Fanark pictures have something to say, and they say it in an interesting, logical and entertaining way. 'The Crimson Cross' is in this category; likewise our second picture, 'The Strength of the Weak,' work upon which will begin in October."

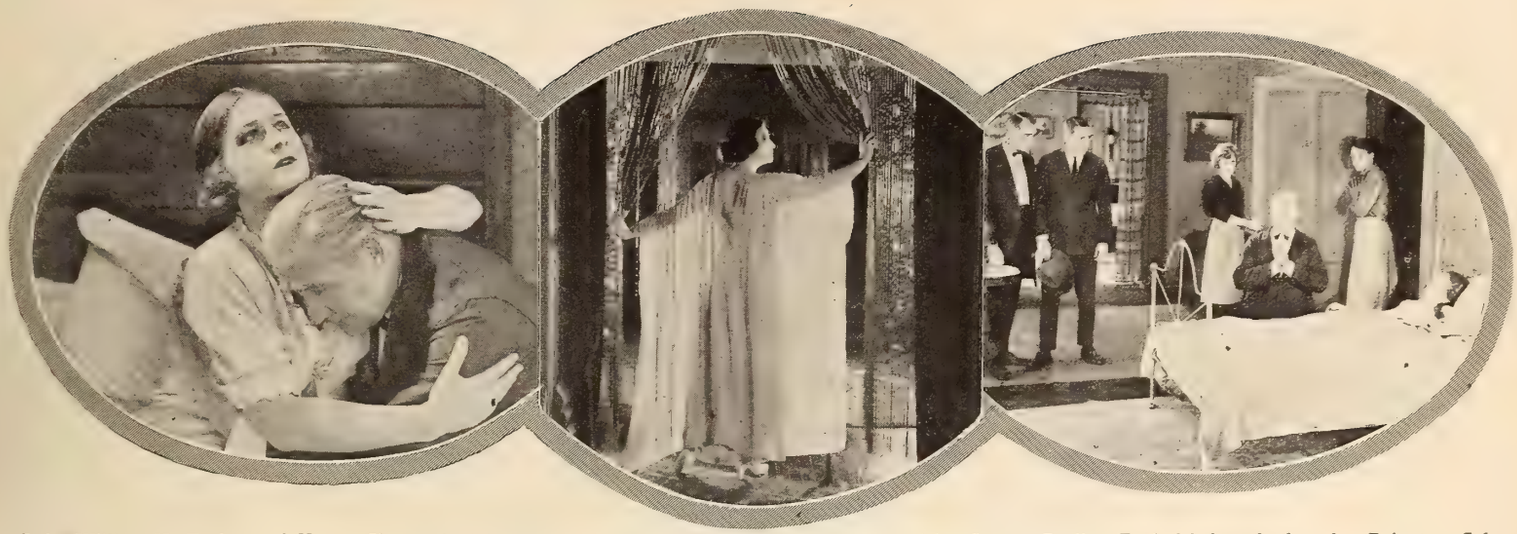
"THE Fatal Hour" is the releasing title selected by Metro for its special picturization of Cecil Raleigh's spectacular melodrama, "The Marriages of Mayfair," recently completed at Metro's New York studios in Sixty-first street and scheduled for distribution the first of November. The new title was selected as suggesting with particular force the most compelling and dramatic moment of the play.



The screen production of the famous melodrama was adapted by Julia Burnham from Cecil Raleigh's original stage version of the play, and was directed by George W. Terwilliger. An all star cast portrays the principal roles. The personnel includes Thomas W. Ross, Wilfred Lytell, Frank Currier, Gladys Coburn and Thea Talbot. The picture was photographed by Louis J. Dunmore, with special art interiors and effects by M. P. Staulcup.

10-Year-Old Stage Play Reaches Silversheet

The American premiere of "Hindle Wakes," a four-act play by the late Stanley Houghton, which has been made into a motion picture by an English company and which is to be presented by C. B. Price and Co., under the title of "Your Daughter—and Mine," was held on December 12, 1920. "Your Daughter—and Mine" is described as a modern exposition of the theory of one standard of morality for men and women.

Hallroom Cartoons Are Fifteen Years Old

The fifteenth birthday of the Hallroom Boys, the newspaper cartoon series that have been made into screen comedies by Jack and Harry Cohn, was celebrated this week. The Hallroom Boys Comedies are now in their second year. The cartoons were originated by H. A. McGill fifteen years ago.

Eight Super-Specials Appear on Robertson-Cole Schedule

Two Already Released and Others to Be Given to Trade Before January 1

IN its "big eight" super-specials, which comprise the first eight attractions released under Robertson-Cole's new regime of super-specials only, this distributing company believes that it has the greatest number of pictures of maximum drawing power ever released by one organization in such a short period. Two of these first eight pictures have already been released, and the others will be given to the trade before January 1.

Included in the "big eight" are "The Stealers," William Christy Cabanne's powerful human document; "A Slave of Vanity," which will introduce Pauline Frederick as a Robertson-Cole star; Otis Skinner in "Kismet," marking the first appearance on the screen of America's most representative actor in the play and role in which he appeared three years on the stage, scoring the triumph of his career; "So Long Letty," a Christie comedy-drama, based on the play of the same name, which was produced by Oliver Morosco, and widely successful.

"The First Born," which is the first of Sessue Hayakawa's new super-productions for Robertson-Cole; "The Little 'Fraid Lady," Mae Marsh's first Robertson-Cole release, based on "The Girl Who Lived in the Woods," by Marjorie Benton Cooke; "Big Happiness," starring Dustin Farnum, an international-romance of thrills, and "Occasionally Yours," starring Lew Cody.

Robertson-Cole believes this to be a group of subjects which for quality of stars, worth of directors, investment made to obtain beautiful results, dramatic and human quality of story, and general entertainment value never have been passed. It is offering it to the trade as a practical demonstration of what it means when it announces pictures of super-special degree, and expects the offering of the eight to be the sensation of the fall season, in view of the fact that Robertson-Cole less than a year ago was only beginning to be a factor in the motion picture industry.

"The Stealers" was made this summer in the East, Mr. Cabanne consuming upwards of four months in the actual making of a picture which he has been working on for two years.

"The Stealers" tells a strongly emotional story, which has to do with the everyday problems of a group of ordinary people. But behind this there is ever playing a deeper and more spirtual theme which raises these ordinary folks, glorifying them, and making their battle between self and soul a fascinating and vital one. To set off this struggle of the heart and soul, there is a physical complement of nature in calm and stormy moods, an artistic accompaniment which stamps the picture ineffably upon the mind.

Of "The Stealers," the MOTION PICTURE NEWS said: "'The Stealers' is exceptional both from directorial and technical angles. Viewed as a picture intended for entertainment, it is excellent throughout."

"'The Stealers,' the most pretentious of Robertson-Cole releases to date, will have a particular welcome to motion picture exhibitors. Splendid sets have been employed, and the locations are wholly attractive," said the Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"A Slave of Vanity," the new Pauline Frederick production, contains all the elements which go to make the successes of the hour. Its background is an exclusive plane of English social life, contrasted artfully with snatches of other scenes, a story which analyzes the soul of a woman who has won fortune and love and is now fighting to hold them, settings which are studiously chosen from luxurious modes, and a cast which measured up completely to the wonderful emotional standard set by Miss Frederick.

Exhibitors everywhere have watched with keenest interest the progress of "Kismet," starring Otis Skinner, which is now complete. This marks Mr. Skinner's first appearance before the camera in a part and play which, critics agree, was the best of his stage career. He acted "Kismet" for three years in New York and hundreds of other leading American cities.

Robertson-Cole, realizing the need of the most ample support and elaborate settings, to aid Mr. Skinner's portrayal has furnished these factors, so that everything may be in keeping with Mr. Skinner's masterpiece of acting, as well as contain the elements of a great commercial success.

In all the galleries of dramatic portraiture there is no spot upon which the bright lights of public plaud its shine more brightly than that of Otis Skinner's interpretation of "Hajj," the beggar, in the widely known story from the pen of Edward Knoblock. Robertson-Cole calls the screen version, "the most magnificent production the history of motion pictures has ever recorded."

The story of "So Long Letty," which was highly amusing in the spoken version, has been given several new twists and featured by Mr. Christie. In it the exhibitor will have an attraction with which he can interest all patrons, married or single, in love and out of it, for the narrative emphasizes how constant human desires and instincts are aside from the marriage bond.

The story of the photoplay tells just what might happen to any number of disgruntled married people throughout the country. Two couples but a short time married are neighbors. One husband, with a gypsy-like disposition and a strong penchant for clothes, discovers after the wedding chimes, that his wife prefers house dresses and loves to cook home food. The other husband, who doesn't care for bright lights and clothes, finds that his wife is keen for cabarets, Paris gowns and restaurant food.

They decide that divorce is the proper move, and each wishes to marry the wife of the other. They hadn't figured on the women. The wives are notified of the decision and hold a conference of their own. They concoct a deep plot and begin by assenting to the divorce idea providing they can change husbands for a week as a sort of trial. The change is made, and then—the punch of the picture.

"The First Born," starring Sessue Hayakawa, adapted from the tremendous stage success by Francis Powers, is a Chinese drama of love and tragedy painted in strong, forceful strokes. Helen Jerome Eddy supports Hayakawa in this picture which has a most wonderful dramatic story.

In "The Little 'Fraid Lady," her first Robertson-Cole production, adapted from Marjorie Benton Cooke's popular novel, Mae Marsh, has a vehicle, which allows her full scope for the expression of that whimsical charm which has made her one of the most beloved figures on the silver sheet. "The Little 'Fraid Lady" is centered around the many interesting and unusual adventures which befall Cecilia, a little artist, when she seeks refuge in the woods from the shame and "make-believe" of the great city.

Robertson-Cole is realizing from "Big Happiness," the first production of its new "super-special only" regime even more than it expected in the way of public and exhibitor support.

Mack Leaves Equity

Johnny Mack, well known exploitation man, whose last connection was that of Exploitation Director of the Equity Pictures Corp., has left that organization, it was learned this week. Mr. Mack concludes his association with Equity after many months of satisfactory service. He came to Equity with a record of many years of practical experience as a showman, exploitation man for various shows, circuses and theatres throughout the country.

Recently Mr. Mack undertook a tour of the key cities of the country on behalf of Equity, and the results were said to be very successful. Mr. Mack has gained a very extensive experience among film men in the industry at large and the amusement field as well.

It is as yet unknown what Mr. Mack's plans are. It is understood he has a number of offers from several prominent producers and distributers.

Carl Pierce, of Kineto, Returns from Trip

Carl H. Pierce, vice-president of the Kineto Company of America, Inc., has just returned from a business trip to Chicago. Mr. Pierce took with him a few reels of the Urban Popular Classics and showed them to several very prominent educational leaders. They aroused considerable interest, he reports.

"Oh, Lady, Lady" Complete

Bebe Daniels Finishes Filming Picture at Realart Studios

THE filming of "Oh, Lady, Lady," second starring vehicle for Bebe Daniels has been completed at the Realart studios in Los Angeles. The picture is a screen adaptation by Edith Kennedy of the Broadway stage success by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse.

In portraying the character of May Barber, Miss Daniels is first seen as an awkward country girl, without polish or style. Later, under the stage name of Rilla Rooke, she is represented as a beautiful and dashing actress. The contrast between the rural lass and the stage favorite is sharply drawn.

Harrison Ford plays the male lead and others who have important places in the cast include Walter Hiers, Charlotte Woods, Lillian Langdon and Jack Dowd. Major Maurice Campbell directed the picture, assisted by Walter McLeod, with H. Kinley Martin at the camera.

"Oh, Lady, Lady" is a society comedy and the screen version, Realart officials say, follows the original play closely.

"Voices" Popular in East

THE New York Independent Masterfilms, Inc., who are handling "Voices," the Victor Kremer production, in Greater New York and Northern New Jersey, report that their picture is being booked in all circuits and in many independent theatres. George Faulkner, general manager of the Strand theatre, Newark, where the production has been booked for an entire week, reported on the fourth day that hanging out the "S.R.O." sign has become a habit.

"One of the really remarkable things about 'Voices,'" wrote Mr. Faulkner, "is the fact that during the last two days the audience has been made up largely of groups of anywhere from two to fifteen persons. Single admissions are practically unknown. These groups have personally been told by their friends what a satisfying picture 'Voices' is."

Victor Kremer now announces that he is now ready to release his second production. This is entitled "Love Mad," and stars Lina Cavalieri, the grand opera singer.

Interest Is Shown in Klein's New Plan

The announcement of Arthur Klein's new activities as a booker of singing and musical acts for vaudeville has brought in its train a flood of inquiries that has fairly deluged his offices in the Strand theatre building, it is said. On Monday he equipped and sent out into territories in New England, Pennsylvania and New York four well known field men who will exploit the respective districts assigned them.

Managers of moving picture theatres who have called on Mr. Klein personally are said to be enthusiastic regarding the projected service, which in every way is admitted to be different from any proposition ever made to increase interest in the silent drama.

HERE is an exhibitor who believes he is paying too little for Fox News, and actually asks to be allowed to pay more.

A letter received from Phil Smith of the Crescent Theatre, Syracuse, is quoted by William Fox as follows:

"Owing to the wonderful satisfaction your weekly has given my patrons, we voluntarily ask you to increase our rental on same, as we feel it is worth considerably more than we are paying for it.

"We consider it the best news on the market, barring none. Our congratulations to Fox."

Fox News activities are expanding in two directions —sales and service. Branch managers from all over the United States, Canada and Great Britain report an increasing demand for the reel, and contracts are piling up.

New Harry Carey Picture Ready

Universal announces the release October 11, of a new Harry Carey picture from the pen of H. H. Knibbs. It is called "Sundown Slim" from the Knibbs novel of that name. In it the western star has a lovable tramp role equalled only by his characterization of another Knibbs hero, "Overland Red."

The picture was directed by Val Paul, although Harry Carey pictures owe most to the star himself. Supporting Carey are Mignonne, a beautiful young girl whose last name is not made public, Francis Conrad, Otto Meyers, Ed. Jones, J. M. Foster, Ted Brooke, Charles LeMoyne, Duke Lee, Joseph Harris, Genevieve Blynn and Ed. Prior.

Allen Holubar Seeking a Creative Musician

Allen Holubar is looking for a creative musician. He wants someone who can arrange or compose music to suit his new First National picture "Man, Woman, Marriage," which with Dorothy Phillips in the stellar role, has just been completed.

The picture is in several distinct epochs, and the music, according to Mr. Holubar's idea, should suggest those various periods in no uncertain way. Beginning with the stone age when cavemen used the historic club as a persuader in their wooing, through Roman days of the voluptuary, on into the period when knighthood flourished, and right down to the present moment, the course of the dream takes its way.

Universal Consolidates Dept's.

Concentration in Exploitation Department

COMPREHENSIVE reorganization of the Exploitation Department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company has just been announced by Mr. H. H. Cochrane, vice-president of the big film concern. All activities meant to help the exhibitor in putting over Universal pictures have been consolidated under one general head.

The new Exploitation Department includes the activities of the publicity department, the advertising department, the poster department, and the department devoted to exhibitor accesories such as lobby displays, slides, heralds, banners, and other material. Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, has appointed Mr. Phillip D. Cochrane as Exploitation Manager, with supervision over the new department. The term "exploitation" is not used in the limited sense of local "exploitation stunts," but is meant to include all service calculated to help the exhibitor sell Universal pictures to the public.

Under the former arrangement, the various exploitation activities were directly supervised by Mr. R. H. Cochrane itself. In turning over the active supervision of this work to his brother, P. D. Cochrane, the vice-president will be enabled to devote himself exclusively to the general affairs of the film corporation.

P. D. Cochrane has been the head of the Universal Poster Department for several years. In that capacity he has had entire charge of the devising and distribution of all paper, and most of the theatre accessories for all Universal pictures. In assuming his new position, with its national ramifications, he brings to the Exploitation Department many years experience in the advertising field, as one of the executives of the Witt. K. Cochrane Advertising Agency of Chicago.

Mr. Cochrane will continue to give his personal attention to the poster department, but he will be assisted in this work by Sidney Singerman, head of the program and film editing department. Singerman has been with Universal five years.

Universal's Advertising Department, under Edward S. Moffat, advertising manager, has entered an era of clear-cut policy and maximum efficiency. Co-ordinated under the Exploitation Department with the Publicity and Poster Departments, it is in a position to give better service to the exhibitor than ever before. Mr. Moffat has a double-barrelled slogan for the work of his department. It is:

"First, we tell the exhibitor exactly what the various Universal pictures are like, so he can choose the ones his patrons want. Then we tell him how to put them over."

Moffat has been known in the New York advertising field for many years. He started in ten years ago with the Aeolian Company, and subsequently was associated with such agencies as Street & Finney, Calkins & Holden, and Frank Seaman, Inc., before joining the Universal staff three years ago. He has been advertising manager for the film company for more than a year.

Mr. Moffat's right-hand man in the Universal Advertising Department is Ben Grimm, long a figure in the moving picture field. He is a recent acquisition to the Universal advertising staff. He formerly was the first advertising and publicity director for the Associated Exhibitors. He also was on the staff of the Moving Picture World, and is a former New York newspaper man. During the war he served in the Sixth Aero Squadron.

Important changes also have been affected in the Publicity Department in the last two weeks. Paul Gulick, heretofore editor and business manager of the Moving Picture Weekly, and the executive head of all Universal inter-office communication matters, has been appointed publicity director and manager.

Mr. Gulick is one of the best known men in the film world, having been with Universal seven years, and having been president of the A. M. P. A. during the past year.

British Authors Submit Work

RESULTS of the visit of Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, to London last summer, when he engaged a long list of famous British authors to write directly for the screen are already evident in a number of original scripts which have been turned over to the Famous Players production department.

While in London Mr. Lasky arranged with Sir James M. Barrie, Edward Knoblock, Arnold Sennett, H. G. Wells Henry Arthur Jones, Max Pemberton E. Phillips Oppenheim, Robert Hichens, E. Temple Thurston, R. C. Carton and other prominent authors to write plays directly for the screen or to adapt stories and plays they already have written to the requirements of the photoplay.

On his arrival in New York last week from Hollywood, Mr. Lasky found cablegram from London that Henry Arthur Jones already had turned in his first script, his own screen version of his stage play, "James, the Fogey." Preparations for the production of this picture in the London studio are now under way under the direction of Hugh Ford.

The cablegram also stated that no sooner had Donald Crisp, who is to be the head of the second production unit at the British studios, arrived in London than Edward Knoblock turned over to the British production department the scenario of the first play he has ever written for motion pictures. This story, which is said to be an unusually powerful and revealing picture of middle class British life, has the title, "Appearances," and will be produced by Mr. Crisp who already has begun assembling a British cast preparatory to shooting the first scenes the latter part of this month.

Doris May, who is appearing with Douglas MacLean in "The Jailbird," a new Paramount production

Meanwhile the first story written directly for the screen by E. Phillips Oppenheim, the prolific writer of popular novels, has been received by Mr. Lasky. This story is "The Mystery Road," and promises to be something unusual in film plays. Indeed, so impressed was Mr. Lasky with the subject that he directed that this picture should be the first to be produced in England by Paul Powell, who is sailing September 30 to become head of the third production unit in the London studios.

At the same time two plays by Sir James M. Barrie are in the course of production in this country. William DeMille, in Hollywood, is busy producing Barrie's famous play, "What Every Woman Knows," one of Maude Adam vehicles on the speaking stage, and Barrie's favorite character, "Sentimental Tommy," is being produced for the screen in the new $2,500,000 Long Island studio by John S. Robertson, who won the position of featured director by his wonderful production of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." The screen version of "Sentimental Tommy" will be a combination of Barrie's novels "Sentimental Tommy" and "Tommy and Grizel." Gareth Hughes has been awarded the enviable honor of playing the title role, and speculation is keen as to who shall be given the part of Grizel.

In addition to these important stories from England, Mr. Lasky announced that his prophecy, that in the future plays would be adapted from the screen to the stage, already is being borne out. Henry Arthur Jones has written an original play "The Lifted Veil," described by Mr. Lasky as a strong melodrama. Preparations are going forward for "The Lifted Veil" to be produced by Charles Maigne, who is now directing John Fox Jr.'s novel, "The Kentuckians," with Monte Blue as a featured player. After the production of "The Lifted Veil" as a photoplay it is to be produced in London as a spoken drama by one of the leading British actor managers, Mr. Lasky said.

At the same time Miss Murray's husband, Robert Z. Leonard, signed a contract to direct all of the new Paramount star's productions.

Miss Murray recently returned from a trip to Europe, where she had gone for a rest after an unusually busy season. In announcing the new contracts Mr. Lasky stated that his determination to star Miss Murray was a result of her splendid work as one of the featured players in George Fitzmaurice's production, "On With the Dance," "The Right to Love" and "Idols of Clay."

Luncheon Talk Given by New York Editor

Members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers who attended last week's luncheon were given a treat in the nature of a talk by William Johnston, who holds the editorial chair on the New York Sunday World. Mr. Johnston's remarks had to do with the faults of press agents and the part they have played in building up what he termed a "spite fence" between publishers and publicity men.

He also made a plea to the organization to use its influence in obtaining for authors due credit in cases where either their original stories or books have been screened. He pointed out that at the last meeting of the Authors' League complaints were registered by some of the country's foremost writers over unfair treatment they claimed to have received at the hands of producers.

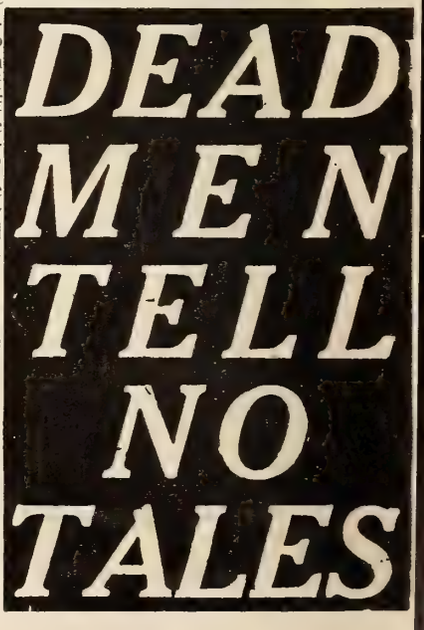
Some interesting sidelights on the life of O. Henry were given by the speaker, for it was under his supervision that some of O. Henry's best stories were published.

Benj. Hampton Pathe Producer

"Money Changers" His First for That Organization

BENJAMIN B. HAMPTON enters the ranks of Pathe producers on October 31, when his version of Upton Sinclair's "The Money Changers," will be released by Pathe Exchange, Inc. In his yearly announcement recently, Mr. Paul Brunet informed exhibitors that the coming season would be notable for many big productions. "The Money Changers" is one of the pictures referred to at the time. The production was made by the Federal Photoplays, of California, of which Mr. B. B. Hampton is the guiding genius.

"The Money Changers" is first of a series of big motion pictures Mr. Hampton will release through Pathe. His initial attraction is claimed to rank superior even to his successes of the last year, among which are numbered "Desert Gold," "The Westerners," "The Dwelling Place of Light" and "The Sagebrusher." Four months were spent in making "The Money Changers."



Fourteen prominent players appear in the cast of the Hampton production, and every one is of repute on the screen. Robert McKim is seen as Hugh Gordon; Claire Adams as Lucy Hegan; Roy Stewart as Allen Martin; Audrey Chapman as Mary Holmes; George Webb as Monk Mullen; Betty Brice as Maggie O'Brien; Stanton Heck as George Conley; Edward Piel, of "Broken Blossoms" fame, as Ling Choo Fang; Harvey Clark as Chow Chin; Harry Tennebrook as "Chink" Murphy, Zack Williams as Wesley Shiloh Mainwaring; George Hernandez as James Hegan; Miss Gertrude Claire as Mrs. Mullen, and Laddie Earle as Jimmy Mullen.

Mr. Hampton collaborated with Mr. Sinclair himself in working out the story details of "The Money Changers," the theme of which was taken from the famous novel. William H. Clifford, head of the B. B. Hampton scenario staff, wrote the continuity, while Jack Conway, with many successes to his credit, directed the production.

The production is described as "a powerful drama of New York life, taking in alike the colorful, mysterious drug-laden atmosphere of the Oriental underworld, and the glittering splendor of the richest city's high test society, with a wealth of pathos, humor, love and warm human qualities shown in these settings, and in the strata between."

Upton Sinclair is one of the eighteen famous authors whom Mr. Hampton has under contract to produce all their works in motion pictures. During the filming of "The Money Changers," seven of these authors were visitors to the Hampton studios. Mr. Sinclair himself was constantly "on the lot," while casual visitors were Zane Grey, William Allen White, Harry Leon Wilson, Stewart Edward White, Emerson Hough and Vincente Blasco-Ibenez.

Diaz Callahan Is Made Manager at Dallas

Announcement is made from the William Fox offices that Diaz Callahan has been appointed manager of the Fox exchange at Dallas, Texas. Mr. Callahan has been identified with the motion picture industry for a number of years in a managerial way, and is well known and popular among exhibitors throughout the country.

Interest in Carpentier Aroused Again

White heat in exhibitor interest in "The Wonder Man," Robertson-Cole special production, starring Georges Carpentier, is being felt the distributing company which has every available print of "The Wonder Man" booked solid. It is now definitely decided that Carpentier shall fight Battling Levinsky on the original date, October 12, at the Jersey City baseball park.

Due to action of the New York State Boxing Commission the bout, originally set for October 12, at Ebbett's Field, Brooklyn, could not be fought in the state of New York. So the location had to be changed to another state, but the original date stands.

Joe Ryan Busy on New Vitagraph Serial

Joe Ryan, Vitagraph's "lovable villain," is at present engaged with the production of a 15-episode serial called "The Purple Riders," in which he is being starred. Joe is making the most of the locations down in the extreme southwest corner of the well known United States, where the national boundary line divides California from Lower California, its Mexican sister.

Pathe Business Reaches Record

August Sees New High Water Mark Set

WITH the compilation of figures on Pathe bookings and collections for August and the first two weeks in September completed, a condition unprecedented in the history of the great distributing organization was indicated. It is nothing new for Pathe reports in these times, to show record-breaking business periods. But for the six weeks beginning with the first of August, the expansion of feature, serial and short subject business has been beyond compare with any other similar period.

There is no doubt but that September will be the biggest month ever experienced by Pathe. The pictures forthcoming assure that, it is claimed. There is slated for release within the next eight weeks, "The Riddle: Woman," first Associated Exhibitors production with Geraldine Farrar as the star; "Forbidden Valley," a J. Stuart Blackton picture, starring Bruce Gordon and May McAvoy; "Help Wanted: Male," starring Blanche Sweet; "Half a Chance," Jesse D. Hampton special production made by Robert Thornby; "The Money Changers," Ben Hampton's first Pathe release, adapted from the novel by Upton Sinclair and "The Beggar in Purple," an Edgar Lewis attraction.

With the beginning of the Fall season, bookings on these productions are being heavily registered in advance, which means that September will be by far the greatest from the standpoint of bookings in Pathe's long career. Serials, as well as features, will play an important part in this result. "Pirate Gold" and "Ruth of the Rockies" are current attractions, while in October, Juanita Hansen will make her debut as a Pathe star, in "The Phantom Foe." This production was made by George B. Seitz and is classed as a big box office card. Bookings on this serial are setting a fast pace in the September competition.

Pathe's tremendous business in August and early September can be traced in no small measure to the impetus given serial bookings by drives conducted by virtually every Pathe Exchange in the country. Chicago started the movement, and it was quickly followed by New York and with other branches immediately catching the spirit of friendly competition.

Then, too, an unusually distinctive series of features was released during the period, among which were H. B. Warner in "One Hour Before Dawn," "The Girl in the Web" with Blanche Sweet; Edgar Lewis' "Lahoma"; "The House of the Tolling Bell," J. Stuart Blackton's work; and "Felix O'Day" with H. B. Warner.

Pathe has vigorously pushed its campaign among exhibitors at every stage, and, while the field forces were making records in selling, they were being backed up by the acquisition of a number of unusually high class features. Under the direction of Mr. Brunet, Pathe has consistently improved its product, and there will be expanded effort to obtain pictures that will help exhibitors increase their patronage and maintain it.

Fox Announces New Serial

Work Started on Second Chapter-Picture Under Edward Sedgwick

WILLIAM FOX officially announces a second serial in preparation to follow close upon the heels of "Bride 13," which is now "hanging up" new serial figures throughout the country. Coincident with this announcement word comes from the studio that work has actually been started on this second serial under the direction of Edward Sedgwick.

That the theatres playing serials have found the first Fox chapter-picture a drawing card of unusual power has been evidenced time and again by letters from exhibitors everywhere commending it, says William Fox. A specific incident of this nature is demonstrated in a letter from George A. Giles, treasurer of the well-known Massachusett amusement enterprises bearing his name. Mr. Giles writes as follows:

"You may be interested to know that 'Bride 13' which opened at our St. James Monday, broke all house records with the exception of holidays. Best of all, our patrons went away well pleased with this opening episode.

"'Bride 13' also opened at our Waltham theatre on Thursday of this week to the biggest Thursday business the house has ever known under our management.

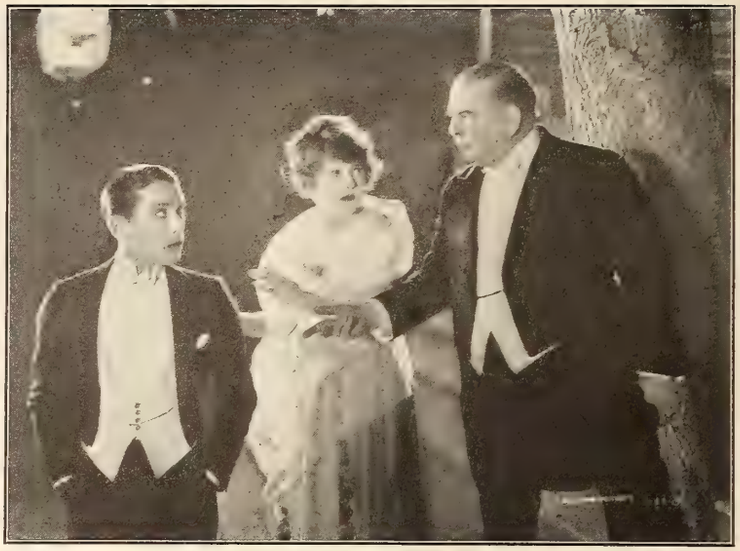
"With these two experiences behind us we look forward to equally satisfactory results in our other houses."

That the excellent results achieved by "Bride 13" have created a ready market for future Fox serials is evidenced by the many hundreds of letters received by the Fox company requesting information regarding the second serial.

FROM Fox Film Corporation comes official confirmation of the report that a new director has been signed by that organization to make a series of feature productions for release during the coming season.

J. Searle Dawley is the name of the new director who will shortly start upon his first picture for William Fox. He is no newcomer to the directorial field, being well-known throughout the industry as a maker of the bigger and better type of screen plays in which several of the country's most prominent stars have appeared.

Mr. Dawley has already assumed his place, and has been given one of the new offices recently completed on the huge stage floor of the West 55th Street Fox building for the Eastern directors. The name of his first picture has not yet been announced, but rumor has it that one of the feminine stars will be its central figure.



Bennett Joins Cast of "The Faith Healer"

Charles D. Bennett has been selected to play the role of Dr. Sanchez in the George Melford production for Paramount of "The Faith Healer." He replaces Frederick Vroom, who has been assigned to the character of Mathew Beeler, left vacant when Charles Ogle was obliged to forego the characterization owing to illness in his family.

"Torchy" Film Greeted on Tivoli Program

San Francisco motion picture critics took occasion last week to say that the bill at the Tivoli theatre of that city might well be called a "Live America" week. "Go and Get It" and "Torchy Comes Through," second of the Torchy series released by Educational, formed the picture portion of the bill.

Vivian Martin in Comedy

Second Messmore Kendall Picture Written by Successful Author

HAVING completed an emotional picture for her first Messmore Kendall Production, "The Song of the Soul," adapted from William J. Locke's story, "An Old World Romance," Vivian Martin has plunged into the making of her second picture. In it she has a completely contrasting role to that in "The Song of the Soul." Instead of calling upon the star for emotional acting, it will give her an opportunity to show her talents as a comedienne.

Her second production, to be released through Goldwyn, has been given the working title of "Polly." It was written by Edward Childs Carpenter, author of "The Cinderella Man" and other stage successes. Mr. Kendall has engaged Sydney Olcott, who directed the Rupert Hughes' screen comedy, "Scratch My Back," for Goldwyn, to direct "Polly." Work on the production is already under way at the Kendall studios at Astoria, L. I.

In order that the titles may be in keeping with the spirit of the comedy, Mr. Kendall has engaged Irvin Cobb to write them. A like service was performed for Miss Martin's first Kendall Production by Robert W. Chambers.

The cast supporting Miss Martin in "Polly" will be entirely different from that in "The Song of the Soul," Mr. Kendall engaging in each instance screen players fitted for the type of scenario in hand. In her second production for Mr. Kendall will be such well-known players as George Spink, Nadine Beresford, Ralph Bonsfield, Tom Meegan, Wallace Ray, Grace Studdeford and W. MacEwen.

W. Hodkinson Sets Release

Benjamin Hampton Production, "The Spenders," is Listed for January

FROM the home office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation comes an announcement to the effect that the first Benjamin B. Hampton production to be released in 1921 will be "The Spenders," a picturization of Harry Leon Wilson's great book.

It is tentively scheduled for release in January and will be followed by at least four more Zane Grey and Great Authors' pictures, all of which are Benjamin B. Hampton productions. The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has reported a great volume of business on the highly successful Hampton productions which they have released during the current year and exhibitors everywhere who have played "The Sagebrusher," "Riders of the Dawn," "Desert Gold," "The Westerners" and "The Dwelling Place of Light" can appreciate the significance which attaches to the statement that the forthcoming Benjamin B. Hampton productions are in every way bigger box office attractions than those which have gone before.

In November "The U. P. Trail" will be released by Hodkinson. This is the picture which was given such an enthusiastic reception by Governor Alfred E. Smith and Senator James Walker when it was shown privately at the Hotel Astor. It is a picture big in theme, big in conception and carried out in a big way, and it will surely serve to establish more firmly the popularity of Benjamin B. Hampton as a producer and W. W. Hodkinson as a distributor of motion pictures of the very highest quality.

ALL of the Loew first theatres in Cleveland are observing "Educational Week" in connection with the gathering in the Ohio city of the American Legion for its convention this week.

At both the Mall and Alhambra theatres "Torchy in High," the third of the comedies from the stories by Sewell Ford and featuring Johnny Hines.

At the Stillman "Don't Blame the Stork," one of the new two-reel Christies and the first one in which Harry Gribbon appears, supplies the fun element.

Loew's Euclid which has shown practically every Educational comedy for two weeks or longer will have "The Big Show," the third of the Chester Comedies.

"Nonsense," the latest of the Mermaid series, ended its two weeks run at the Euclid last week so that this accounts for the latest of each one of the Educational two reelers.

Educational reports that the voluntary competition between various exchanges in having comedies and other Educational product featured at all of the first run theatres the same week is strong.

Photographer to Speak on African Tour

Dr. Leonard John Vandenbergh, missionary, explorer and anthropologist, will go to Washington, D. C., November 19 at the invitation of the National Geographic Society to address its members on the subject of his explorations in Africa and his discoveries concerning the Mambuti the hitherto practically unknown tribe of pygmies, with whom he spent many weeks in the darkest recesses of the jungle.

Dr. Vandenbergh recently returned from a year's exploration of British East Africa and Uganda at the head of the Vandenbergh-Paramount expedition, which was financed by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and was conducted in co-operation with the American Museum of Natural History.

Rothacker Lab Adds Safety Features

Instead of one large assembling room at the Rothacker Chicago laboratories, there are now a number of booths accommodating eight girls each. The walls of these booths are asbestos sheets on steel frames. Each battery of cleaning machines is enclosed in a fireproof booth.

It was necessary to install a more or less elaborate addition to the ventilating system to insure each booth a steady flow of pure air which is washed through water to obviate dust that might settle on film.

With the new exterior vault and these asbestos booths, the Rothacker laboratories are now as near fireproof as engineering can make them.

"Kismet" Shapes Up Big

Robertson-Cole Officials Get First Look at Special and Wax Enthusiastic

THE first print of "Kismet" has reached New York, and Robertson-Cole officials after their first view of the offering, which will be given a private showing at the Astor about the middle of October, declared it "magnificent."

The statement continues: "While the vastness of the settings and the radiant beauty in which the romantic old city of Bagdad has been restored do not fail to captivate, an even more impressive factor which demanded the attention of those who were privileged to view to the picture, is the marvellous work of Mr. Skinner. There is now about his "Hajj," a maturity and understanding which even surpasses that of the role as he played it several years ago, achieving what all critics agreed to be the greatest triumph of his career.

"There is in the manner in which Mr. Skinner now plays the beggar of Bagdad, who in a single day overcomes his enemies and marries his daughter to the Caliph, something greater and more complete, an even more finished quality which Mr. Skinner has drawn from the years between, and which will make his screen, "Kismet," the best role of his entire career."

Since his first public appearance at the old Philadelphia Museum in 1877, Mr. Skinner has held a conspicuous place in the annals of theatrical history. During the early part of his career he appeared prominently in the support of such well-remembered artists as Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, Mme. Modjeska, and was a member of the stock company at Niblo's Garden theatre in New York, as well as a member of Augustin Daly's Company, which were considered the two most illustrious organizations of their day.

Later he appeared with Joseph Jefferson in "The Rivals," and then co-starred with Ada Rehan, after which he became a star in his own name. His starring vehicles, "His Grace de Rimini," "The King's Jester," "The Liars," "Francesca de Rimini" and "Lazarre," still occupy a bright spot in the galleries of dramatic protraiture while his more recent plays have shown the result of the years of accumulative study which have been his.

Curwood's Latest Oct. 11

"Nomads of the North" Given General Release; Shows Shipman Methods

OCTOBER 11th is James Oliver Curwood Week throughout the United States and Canada. It is the release date for "Nomads of the North," Curwood's second picture on First National program.

This picture was not started until every precaution had been taken to safeguard it against failure. Mr. Curwood's story was approved of in the rough by First National committee. The continuity was then finally passed upon, Mr. Hartford was again selected from a choice of directors, and the cast, which contains such players as Lewis J. Stone, Lon Chaney, Melbourne MacDowell and Betty Blythe was unanimously agreed upon. The result, it is believed, will place "Nomads" among the best pictures of the year.

These methods have been advocated through the trade papers and in other ways by Ernest Shipman ever since the days when he first started in business for himself, and every picture that Mr. Shipman is identified with in a business way will go through the same procedure, which, though it may not always guarantee the acme of success will at least discover weaknesses before they are in the negative and as a consequence absolute failure will be eliminated.

Mr. Shipman says: "Three things are absolutely essential for a successful production. First and foremost the story—next the producing organization technically capable of an artistic interpretation, and third a market which will guarantee a return in proportion to the money invested. The absence of any one of these three essentials is courting failure and in many cases proves to be financial suicide upon the part of the investors."

Mr. Shipman has built up a splendid organization for cooperating with First National franchise holders in the exploitation of these pictures and invites correspondence from exhibitors by wire or letter prior to or during first runs everywhere.

John Robertson Engages Mabel Taliaferro

Mabel Taliaferro, star of the screen and stage for many years, will play the role of "The Painted Lady," in the John S. Robertson production of Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy" for Paramount. This production will mark the actress' return to the screen after more than a year's absence; also her first appearance under the Paramount banner and her last picture for some time as she has stage plans in progress.

New York Critics Like "Honest Hutch"

Will Rogers has found his greatest and most congenial role as "Hutch" in his latest Goldwyn comedy, "Honest Hutch," from a Saturday Evening Post story by Garret Smith, according to some New York critics. They gave him credit, in reviewing the film when shown at the Capitol theatre, for creative acting of the highest kind.

Thelma Percy, new leading woman in Mermaid comedies. Release of Mermaid pictures is by Educational Exchanges, Inc.

Thelma Percy Selected as Leading Woman

Thelma Percy, the blonde and petite sister of the noted Eileen Percy, has just been selected as one of the permanent leading women in Mermaid Comedies, which are being released through Educational Exchanges. Miss Percy has recently had prominent roles in a number of prominent productions, including "The Vanishing Dagger" with Eddie Polo. However, she prefers comedy parts and she will have the fullest opportunity to develop that talent with the Jack White-Lloyd Hamilton organization.

Charles Parrott has also been engaged by Mermaid and will handle the megaphone in the next comedy in which Lloyd Hamilton is featured.

Costuming Is Based on Rare Old Prints

A collection of rare old prints has been made by Rex Ingram, the director, as an aid in costuming Metro's colossal picturization of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," the world-famous novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez.

A canvass of the art world has revealed the fact that anything approaching a visualization of The Four Horsemen, as pictured in the Bible, in the Book of Revelation, is all but unobtainable. After an almost endless search it was found that Arthur Denison a collector of old prints, held one of the two remaining copies of an original set of Albrecht Durer's etchings on wood, done in 1511. These were used with Mr. Denison's permission.

Wallie Reid in Story by Charles Van Loan

Owing to location conditions and certain delays in preparing properties for some of the stunts that will be seen in "Free Air," when Wallace Reid makes it for the screen as a Paramount picture, it has been decided to make another picture in advance of this. Therefore, a story by the late Charles Van Loan, has been selected and scenarioized by William Parker. No name has as yet been chosen for the picture, and work will not start for several days. James Cruze is to direct.

Edward Cecil Engaged for Metro Stock

Edward Cecil, the brilliant actor who is well known to Metro picture-goers, has signed a long term contract as a member of the stock company at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood, Calif. Mr. Cecil will appear in character roles in future productions of the company.

For the past four months, Mr. Cecil has been enacting important roles in Metro pictures. He played the East Indian Rajah in "The Price of Redemption," in which Bert Lytell starred, and has had leading roles in Viola Dana's two most recent starring vehicles, "Blackmail," by Lucia Chamberlain and "Cinderella's Twin" by Luther Reed.

George Walsh Vehicle Nears Completion

"Dynamite Allen," starring George Walsh, is nearing completion at the William Fox New York studios under the direction of Dell Henderson. This is the fourth Fox production that Dell Henderson has directed with this popular star.

Scenes of Wall Street Explosion Reach Screen in Very Brief Space

WHILE the newspapers of York City were still issuing extras giving the full details of the terrific explosion which killed 33 persons, injured 300 more, and did $3,000,000 damage in Wall Street on Thursday, September 16th, a Pathe News "special" was being exhibited in theatres along Broadway showing in detail the results of the explosion. At the same time prints were being rushed to every centre of the United States, to be attached to the regular Sunday issue of the Pathe News, and to be issued to the theatres as "specials" wherever possible.

Every effort was stressed by the entire organization of Pathe News to accomplish what it did with the explosion pictures. The calamity occurred at just one minute after twelve. A few minutes later three Pathe News cameramen were on their way to New York from their headquarters in Jersey City. In twenty minutes they were on the scene of the explosion, and, half an hour later special messengers were on their way to the laboratories with the detailed account of the explosion.

It was before six o'clock that night when thirty prints were in the New York Exchange, and being issued to the biggest theatres, while other prints were being rushed by special delivery mail to every other Pathe Exchange in the United States.

Telegrams congratulating Pathe on its enterprise have poured in from all sections of the country. A typical one is the following from Ben Lewis, of the Ellany theatre, El Paso, Texas, dated September 20th:

"We want to congratulate Pathe News for the fastest news beat in the history of motion pictures. Pictures of Wall Street explosion arrived in El Paso last night just four days after actual occurrence in New York. This is an unheard of speed record. Our hats off to Pathe News."

Mermaid Comedies Are Winning at Strand

Managing Director Joseph L. Plunkett is this week completing a two-weeks celebration of signing a contract for all of the two reel Mermaid Comedies released through Educational Exchanges by showing two of these pictures in immediate succession.

"Nonsense," featuring Jimmie Adams, was shown at the Strand last week, and this week "Dynamite," in which Lloyd Hamilton is the star occupies a prominent part on the bill. "The Simp" will be the next Mermaid to be offered to Strand audiences and the first run of these comedies in New York will remain at that theatre.

"A Fresh Start," the first of the Mermaids, was shown at the Strand practically unheralded, though it was announced as one of the funniest comedies ever created, and on the strength of this record "Duck Inn" was prominently advertised as a Mermaid. Although some weeks have elapsed since the showing of this picture, Educational calls attention to the fact that Mr. Plunkett is continuing to feature the brand name.

Mermaid Comedies are produced under the direction of Jack White, one of the best known of two reel creators and have alternately featured Lloyd Hamilton and Jimmie Adams. The supporting casts include such players as Marvel Rea, Sydney Smith and Frank Coleman. An unusual beauty brigade also has an important part in the comedies.

Mermaids are being released monthly.

Gore Brothers Finish Tour of Inspection

Messrs. Michael and Abe Gore, who have been on an inspection tour of their various theatrical holdings in Southern California, returned to Los Angeles last Saturday, in order to be present at the opening of Sol Lesser's "What Women Love," with Annette Kellerman, at the Kinema theatre. The Gores and Lesser are partners in the Southern California First National franchise, and the former were much interested in seeing Lesser's picture go over with a flourish.

TRUMPET ISLAND"

A TOM TERRISS PRODUCTION

From the Story by GOUVERNEUR MORRIS

Edited by LILLIAN and GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER

It is an ill wind that gives the supreme dramatic fillip to this simple, powerful story. It is of a girl, forced into unhappy marriage; of a man, drunk with sudden millions. They should have mated, but barriers of money stood between.

The girl went for a honeymoon trip in the clouds, the man to a lonely island to make himself over. Disaster overtook the girl, but instead of the death she craved, it gave her life and true happiness in the arms of a man of her choice—on Trumpet Island. A virile narrative, natural, fascinating, impressively scened, brilliantly enacted.

Metro Loans Actor to Famous Players

Gareth Hughes, Metro's newest and most youthful male featured player, is enroute from California to New York to play the featured role in J. M. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy."

The arrangement under which Hughes is to appear in this, a Famous Players production, is unusual in film circles. The Metro featured actor of but a few days has been loaned by Metro Pictures Corporation to the Famous Players organization because of Mr. Hughes' long cherished ambition to appear in the Barrie production.

Eileen Percy Is Giveu an Amusing Role

Speed, that prime requisite of successful farce, certainly reaches the top notch in the new William Fox production "Beware of the Bride," starring Eileen Percy. which will be released in the near future.

"Beware of the Bride," from the pen of Edgar Franklin, provides the star with a most fascinating role, says Fox, that of a dashing young bride who becomes separated from her husband while on their honeymoon, and is drawn into an unusual experience which forms the nucleus of a most amusing farce.

Publicity Department for Ohio Started

In keeping with the tremendous strides registered throughout not only Ohio, but the entire country by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., Manager R. H. Haines of the Cincinnati exchange for First National announces the establishment of a publicity and exploitation department for Southern Ohio.

The appointment fell to the lot of William A. Clark, a young newspaperman of wide experience in the Cincinnati field. For several years Mr. Clark was with the Cincinnati Enquirer, but prior to accepting the First National post, he had charge of the automobile department on the Post, an afternoon paper.

Fox Reports Heavy Bookings

HEAVY booking is reported by Fox Film Corporation on "From Now On," starring George Walsh, which was recently released. This picture appears to have made an instantaneous hit with exhibitors, and the first week's contract figures for the production —which is the first of the 1920-21 Walsh schedule—are far in excess of those reported on the first Walsh picture of last year.

Three more releases with this popular star are thus far arranged for the season and big stories and superb production characterize all of them, Fox officials state.

"From Now On," which is from the pen of the noted Frank L. Packard, author of "The Miracle Man," and directed for the screen by R. A. Walsh, tells of a thrilling and vivid story of a man's struggle to go straight when fate seems to place in his path every temptation to fall into the slough of evil. Many letters have been received by the producing organization from exhibitors lauding the production and telling of the favorable reception accorded it by patrons.

In addition to the popularity of Walsh as the star, the picture benefits materially by the fact that it is built on a Packard story. Something of the motion picture patron's predilection for Packard tales is also evident in the growing success of Pearl White's starring vehicle, "The White Moll."

According to the present schedule

Tom Mix and Pauline Stark in Mix's latest William Fox picture, "The Untamed"

the next Walsh picture for Fox will be "The Plunger," written by Thomas F. Fallon and directed by Dell Henderson.

Fox Film Corporation also reports that the bookings thus far for William Farnum in "If I Were King," the special production from Justin Huntly McCarthy's famous stage play and novel, are exceedingly heavy.

Some of these bookings are worthy of considerable attention inasmuch as they represent theatres which are among the finest first-run houses in the country—the managers realizing the tremendous drawing power of this star and the sumptuous character of the settings created by Director J. Gordon Edwards, and booking "If I Were King" at record-breaking prices for long runs.

Notable among these theatres is the Stanley in Philadelphia, which has played this special production for two weeks to very heavy business. The Savoy and the Liberty in Pittsburgh booked it for an entire week, while the Doric in Kansas City, Mo., did an unusually heavy business for a week. In Boston, Keith's has booked "If I Were King" for a full week.

That Fox pictures are also in demand in territories outside the United States is shown by recent reports. According to a weekly trade paper of Buenos Ayres, Fox films are shown in seventy-two per cent of the motion picture houses in the Argentine capital

There are one hundred and forty-three motion picture theatres in Buenos Ayres, and one hundred and three of these show Fox films. The nearest competitor of Fox shows its pictures in ninety-five theatres. These statistics are dated May 20.

Rio de Janeiro, where William Fox has a branch, also reports a heavy increase in business, a new office was opened recently in Rio. It is situated at Rua de Quitanda, 7, and is in charge of Alberto Rosenvald, who has just returned to Brazil after a visit to the Fox headquarters in New York .

Production Plans Are Stated

Lasky Outlines Future Activities on His Return to East

AN indication of the scope of the production plans of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was given this week when Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production, on his return to New York after spending the summer in Hollywood, issued a statement outlining the activities of the production department.

Mr. Lasky stated that in the new $2,500,000 Eastern studio of the company at Long Island City, N. Y., it was intended to keep ten companies at work continuously during the winter. At the Lasky and other allied studios in Hollywood, twelve companies will be kept busy, and during the winter there will be two production units producing pictures at the new London studio. In the near future, he intimated, there would be an announcement of the first director and producing organization to go to the new Famous Players-Lasky studio in Bombay, India, which is rapidly nearing completion under the direction of Frank Meyer and Tarkington Baker.

"We are inaugurating a new production plan at the Lasky studio in Hollywood," said Mr. Lasky "which already has been greeted with great enthusiasm by stars and directors. This new production system calls for alternating directors in the making of various pictures, which means that while one director is working on a picture another will be preparing for the next picture with the same star. It has been given to Roscoe Arbuckle to be the first star to put this system into operation. Mr. Arbuckle is now being directed by Joseph Henabery while James Cruze is preparing for the next Arbuckle picture. The purpose of this new system, of course, is to give our directors more time and opportunity to prepare their scripts and to arrange for the multitude of details which go into the making of an artistic production. This system will call into use many more directors, and is another example of the better results which can be obtained when pictures are made by directors who have a big organization back of them. The success of the plan is already forecasted by the enthusiasm with which it has been greeted by the directors.

"I had the pleasure, just before leaving Hollywood, of seeing the first regular Roscoe Arbuckle feature production, 'The Life of the Party,' an adaptation of Irvin S. Cobb's well-known story published in the Saturday Evening Post. This is one of the best legitimate comedies I have ever seen, and is certain to make a profound impression on the public. Great credit is due both Joseph Nenabery, who directed it, asd Mr. Arbuckle, who has a role that is ideally fitted to his talents.

"Just before I left Hollywood I was given a striking and peculiarly pleasing demonstration of the spirit which permeates the production department. All of our directors on the West Coast, including Cecil B. DeMille, William DeMille, George H. Melford and Joseph Henabery, attended a private screening at my home of George Fitzmaurice's production, 'The Right To Love.' The marvellous pictorial beauty of this production so deeply impressed the directors that each one of them sent a letter of congratulation to Mr. Fitzmaurice.

"We have just added another director to our staff in the person of Frank Urson, who has been Cecil B. DeMille's assistant. As assistant director Mr. Urson displayed unusual ability and has rapidly come to the fore under Mr. DeMille's tutelage. His first picture will be 'An Assisted Frankenstein,' with Wallace Reid as the star. 'An Assisted Frankenstein' is a story by the late Charles Van Loan."

Chas. Pacini Acquires New Picture House

A new link has been added to the chain of theatres owned by the Charles Pacini Amusements Company of Kenosha, Wis., and specializing in the exploitation of features distributed by Associated First National Pictures, Inc. The theatre will be known as the "New Strand" and will be located in the west side of the city of Kenosha. The theatre was purchased several months ago by Charles Pacini

J. Warren Kerrigan in the Bobert Brunton production distributed by W. W. Hodkinson, "The House of Whispers"

Private Screening for "House of Whispers"

Some of the foremost experts on crime in the country gathered in the Simplex Projection Rooms on Wednesday, September 22nd, to view a private showing of "The House of Whispers," a forthcoming Hodkinson release in which J. Warren Kerrigan is starred. There were also present a great number of newspaper men gathered to do honor to William Johnston, the author of the story from which the picture was made and editor of the New York Sunday World. All present were most enthusiastic in their praise of the picture which is a mystery story of the highest type unlike the conventional run of so-called "detective" dramas.

Rehearsal Started on Ince Production

Shadow rehearsals on Douglas MacLean's latest Thomas H. Ince starring vehicle, "One a Minute," which is to be released by Paramount, were started at the Ince studios on the West Coast last week under the direction of Jack Nelson. Production on the new comedy was scheduled for the beginning of the present week.

A new personality will be presented to the public in Madge Bellamy, New York beauty, who was recently placed under contract by Thomas H. Ince. Miss Bellamy has been cast in the leading feminine role of Miriam Knight.

Eve Unsell Contracts with Jesse Lasky

No sooner had Eve Unsell returned to New York from London, where she was in charge of scenario work in the new London studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, than Jesse L. Lasky presented her a contract which places her on the scenario staff at the new $2,500,000 studio of the company at Long Island City, where she will work under the direction of Tom Geraghty, the new film editor of the company's eastern productions.

Kellerman in Slow Motion

Educational Announces a Special Release Showing Diver in Action

EDUCATIONAL Film Exchange, Inc. announces that its single-reel picture, "Annette Kellerman in the Art of Diving," will be ready for release as a special as soon as the prints have reached the various exchanges from the Los Angeles laboratories. The picture was especially posed for the purpose by the "modern Venus," and in this she demonstrates the diving art that has made her famous throughout the world. First, she is shown by ordinary photography and then each movement is analyzed by the Cinal process, which is said to have registered unusual results in slow motion.

The picture was given an especial advance showing for a week at Grauman's million dollar theatre, Los Angeles, where it is said to have attracted a great deal of attention from press and public.

This will be the fourth of the single reel specials to be issued by Educational in accordance with its announced policy of using the word "Special" only when the single reel was of unsual importance and worthy of an especial place on the program. "Modern Centaurs," the wonderful picture of horsemanship, and "The Valley of Ten Thousands Smokes" camera record of the National Geographic Society's expeditions to the Mount Katmai section of Alaska were the first of these, and they are reported to be enjoying the heaviest demand from theatres all over the country. These were followed by "Babe Ruth—How He Knocks His Home Runs," which is said to be setting a new record for single reels.

"We regard these specials as unusually important," says President E. W. Hammons, "because they demonstrate to the exhibitor that a picture of this length can be made the most attractive thing on the entire program. Aside from their worth because of their pulling power and their advertising possibilities they help the exihibitor to prove to his patrons that he is attempting to afford a program of one hundred per cent importance. But they must not be abused and we therefore release a special only when it is of unquestioned importance."

Paramount Signs Up Author

Sir Gilbert Parker Contracts to Write Original Screen Stories

SIR GILBERT PARKER, author of more than a score of successful novels which have had an international circulation, has signed a contract to write original stories for Paramount pictures, according to an announcement made yesterday by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The signing of this contract, which gives the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation exclusive rights to all future stories by Sir Gilbert, is, said Mr. Lasky, in further fulfillment of his announcement on his return from London last Summer that he had made arrangements with a number of the leading British authors to write original stories for Paramount pictures and to study the technique of the screen in the Famous Players-Lasky studios.

Sir Gilbert, who arrived in New York last week from London, will leave October 2 for Hollywood where he will begin work at once on a big special feature. In the production of this picture, the famous author will work in the studio in close collaboration with the director and the scenario writer, putting his ideas into the picture and in general taking the active part in production which Mr. Lasky hopes to obtain from all authors whose works are filmed in the future by Famous Players.

In connection with the announcement of this first Sir Gilbert Parker production an interesting story has come to light regarding the writing of the picture. The theme for this production has been in Sir Gilbert's mind for twenty-five years. During the last year he observed an incident which completed the plot of the story. So big is the theme and so great is its message to the public that Sir Gilbert has decided that the circulations of books and magazines are inadequate to do the story justice, so he will tell his story first through the medium of the motion picture.

IN appreciation of his splendid work as a featured player in a number of big Paramount Pictures, including George Fitzmaurice's "On With the Dance" and "The Right to Love," Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has rewarded David Powell with an appointment to the company's London studio, where Mr. Powell will be the first member of a permanent stock company and will be featured in pictures made by the company in England.

Mr. Powell will sail October 9 on the Olympic. His first picture in the London studio will be "The Mystery Road," the original script for which already has been turned into Mr. Lasky by E. Phillips Oppenheim, the author. This picture will be directed by Paul Powell, who directed Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna" and who directed a number of successful Paramount pictures.

Fairbanks Picture Is Announced

"Curse of Capistrano" Chosen as Star's Next Vehicle

UNITED ARTISTS CORPORATION announced this week that the next Douglas Fairbanks production for release through their organization would be a picturization of Johnston McCulley's stirring story, "The Curse of Capistrano," that was featured serially in the "All Story" Magazine. With the announcement came the notification also that the final title for the picture had not as yet been chosen, but would be announced shortly.

From the time Fairbanks returned from Europe he has been hard at work speeding up this production, preliminaries for which had all been arranged, sets built, cast selected and exteriors chosen, while he was touring the continent. For the production he has surrounded himself with a company of the best known screen players, included among them being Marguerite DeLaMotte, a new leading lady for "Doug," Claire McDowell, Noah Berry, Robert McKim, Charles Mailes, Tote DuCrow, Charles Stevens, and Albert McQuarrie.

According to those familiar with this story of Southern California, Fairbanks has never yet had a vehicle with as many thrills, or with adventures necessitating his going the limit along his inimitable athletic line. The story also calls for a greater spectacle than either the flood in "When Clouds Roll By" or the avalanche in "The Mollycoddle." The direction of the picture is in the hands of Fred Niblo, assisted by Ted Reed. William McCann and Harry Thorpe, who were responsible for the camera work in "Doug's" last two pictures, are again the cinematographers.

The screen adaptation was prepared by Eugene Miller. One of the most important and massive sets of this production is the exact duplication of the city of Los Angeles during the period of 1840. It has been built in the San Fernando Valley, which is identical to the district about the Plaza in Los Angeles as it was in the early forties. Several hundred skilled workmen, under the supervision of Edward Langley and Frank England, had transformed this location into what Los Angeles was in 1840.

The story Fairbanks has chosen for his fourth United Artists picture is expected to surpass all of "Doug's" previous productions, and to establish a new record in expansive film creation. The main action of the story has as its locale early Southern California, with its colorful, picturesque, indolent life as existed before Americans migrated to its borders. Indolence reigns in the picture until the agile "Doug" enters the scenes and hence all become inured to the greatest amount of activity as usually transpires wherever he makes his appearance.

Full of swift, bristling action, there is a strong love interest quite different from that attempted by Fairbanks heretofore, states United Artists. We also find a relieving touch running through the entire picture that buoys one up for the startling events that are in all details gripping, impassioned and mystifying. Every detail of setting and acting has been given the greatest care in presentation, thus creating a harmony of art that is distinctly superior, it is stated.

Fine Role for Pickford in George Ade Play

That George Ade's humor is so native to the American soil, that it retains its flavor when translated from the printed page or from the spoken drama to the screen, is the belief of Goldwyn. It will be proved, according to Goldwyn officials, by the picturization of George Ade's stage comedy, "Just Out of College," one of the biggest hits on the American stage of the century, which will be Jack Pickford's next starring vehicle and which is now nearing completion.

It gives the star an ideal role, exactly suited to his personality, and also furnishes an extremely engaging role for Goldwyn's new leading woman, delectable Molly Malone, who captured all hearts in two recent Goldwyn releases, "It's a Great Life," from Mary Roberts Rinehart's story of boys' "prep" school days, "The Empire Builders," and in support of Tom Moore in "Stop Thief!"

Chet Withey to Direct Constance Talmadge

"The Man from Toronto" has been chosen as the first picture which Chet Withey will direct for Constance Talmadge, shortly after her return from Europe, where she has been vacationing with her sister, Norma, and Mr. Schenck. This picture is an adaptation from "Perkins," a play by Douglas Murry, which was produced in New York a few seasons ago by Henry Miller, and is now having a successful run in England under the first title. The screen adaptation is by Grant Carpenter, who recently adapted the Norma Talmadge feature, "She Loves and Lies," from a short story by Wilkie Collins. This picture was also directed by Chet Withey.

Dead Men Tell No Tales

Completing "Cousin Kate"

Alice Joyce is Working on Final Scenes of Former Stage-Play Hit

ALICE JOYCE and her supporting company returned from Hackensack, N. J., last week after having put in several days' work there filming exterior scenes for Miss Joyce's new picture, "Cousin Kate" which is being directed by Mrs. Sidney Drew. This week will be spent in making interior scenes at the Brooklyn studio, and it is probable that the picture will be ready for cutting and editing by the end of this week.

"Cousin Kate" was one of the most famous stage successes of the past twenty years. Ethel Barrymore starred in the stage version under the direction of Charles Frohman, and so great was its reception that the play was revived by Miss Barrymore several years after its original premiere.

In the screen version of "Cousin Kate" Miss Joyce will be supported by a cast of well known players, and Gilbert Emery will be seen as her leading man.

The adaptation from the stage play was made by Mrs. L. Case Russell who declares the leading role could not have fitted Miss Joyce any better had Martha Morton, creator of the stage version, had Miss Joyce in mind when she wrote the original script. Mrs. Russell has a record of many produced picture plays. It is a notable coincidence that Mrs. Drew who is directing "Cousin Kate" has played in several of her original screen stories.

Mrs. Russell has specialized on plays for woman stars, and is thoroughly familiar with the technic of screen work, having directed three of her own stories.

In the title role of "Cousin Kate," Alice Joyce appears as a novelist who after having published several successful love stories, finally runs into a real love story in her workaday existence. It is said to be an entirely new role for Miss Joyce.

Neilan Added to List of Film Notables

Marshall Neilan, whose personally directed productions are distributed by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., has been added to the list of "film immortals" compiled by the critic of the Louisville Courier-Journal. Neilan's latest production "Go and Get It," won him this place on the list which hitherto was made up of only five productions.

Holubar Picture Due Soon

"Man, Woman, Marriage" Will Be Handed Over to First National

THE artistry of Dorothy Phillips, the masterful direction of Allen Holubar, $300,000 in cash and five months' work are stated to have gone into the making of "Man, Woman, Marriage," the superture which Allen Holubar will soon deliver to First National for release. The concluding scenes are finished. Mrs. Frank Lawrence is well started on the editing and the supreme effort of the great director will soon be on its way to the screen.

Leaving Universal with nothing but offers from other producers, it is said, to bother him, Holubar spent several months in declining upon an affiliation, several more months in selecting a story, and then began work, leisurely and with neither time nor financial limits to hamper him, on the production of his first independently produced screen drama.

Is collaboration with Olga Linek Scholl, the story was written. Then came the casting of the picture. From New York, Los Angeles and Paris the players were assembled and rehearsals began with James Kirkwood playing in support of the star. Among other widely known names in the cast were those of Robert Kane, Mrs. Margaret Man, Barney Sherry, and Mlle. Valerie de Chevallier, the sensation of the Paris speaking stage.

The opening scenes of the production were made when it was decided that a capable instructor should be engaged to assist Mr. Holubar in staging the elaborate dances which were to follow. Marion Morgan, who for several seasons has headed her own dancing troupe on the Orpheum circuit, was signed to collaborate with the noted director in the scenes featuring the dance.

The story for "Man, Woman, Marriage," amazing in the magnitude of its theme, required scenes depicting dramatic action in the stone age, the Roman days of splendor that preceded the fall, the meriaeval period and the present day. For each sequence of scenes immense sets had to be erected and hundreds of players accurately schooled in the customs of the day and costumed with splendor.

ACCORDING to an announcement from Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., more than one hundred prints of its single-reel picture "Babe Ruth—How He Knocks His Home Runs" are working throughout the United States and Canada. This picture was taken in an actual game between the Yankees and the Cleveland teams and was recently the subject of attempted legal action, Justice Guy in the New York Supreme Court refusing to grant an injunction. Educational has brought suit for $250,000 as the result of statements made by Babe Ruth, the Yankee Photoplay Company and Kessel and Bauman preceding the decision.

Educational makes a further claim that the picture's bookings already represent a greater sum than has ever before been derived from a single reel picture and that this film has already been shown in more first run theatres of importance than any other picture, regardless of length, within a similar time period.

Report Record Booking on New Pathe Serials

Juanita Hansen's claim upon the favor of the serial audiences is manifested in the enthusiasm with which the announcement of the release of her first Pathe picture was received by exhibitors. A record number of bookings on "The Phantom Foe," scheduled for release Oct. 17th, is reported from all of Pathe's branches.

Star's Work Wins Approval

Los Angeles Reviewers Praise Katherine MacDonald's Acting

WHEN Katherine MacDonald's fifth starring vehicle for Associated First National Pictures, Inc., "The Notorious Miss Lisle," played at the Kinoma Theatre, Los Angeles, the critics of the Los Angeles papers were almost as a whole unusually complimentary.

Anthony Anderson, in the Los Angeles Morning Times, is very partial to the portrayal offered by Miss MacDonald. In a review he states:

"It so happens 'The Notorious Miss Lisle,' in which Katherine MacDonald is appearing at the Kinema this week, once came my way as a novel. In fact, it was my duty to assist in deciding its merits for photoplay production. Three people read it and they were all unanimously enthusiastic.

"For it is a good story, and a well told one, and it has immense dramatic and pictorial possibilities. The pictures have been discovered and met by the photographer and the director and how, indeed, could they possibly miss the picture when Miss MacDonald was the center of it This actress is such a perfect type, she is so exactly right from every point of view, that you might photograph her as armless as the Venus of Milo and still find her supremely beautiful."

Maud Cheatham, dramatic editor of the Los Angeles Morning Examiner, is equally enthusiastic over the latest work of Miss MacDonald.

"Katherine MacDonald's dramatic art is advancing by leaps and bounds, and in her latest picture, 'The Notorious Miss Lisle,' she proves that she is not only the most beautiful woman on the screen today but one of its greatest emotional actresses. Her portrayal of the girl who has been presented with a purple past by the English court is sympathetic and genuinely appealing. The tender pathos with which she struggles against an unjust burden permits few happy moments, and there is only an occasional glimpse of that fascinating little one corner smile which is so peculiarly her own."

The critic of the Los Angeles Evening Express, C. A. Goss, writes:

"The emotional work done by Katherine MacDonald in 'The Notorious Miss Lisle' serves to lift the 'American Beauty' into the class of the screen's best interpreter of that art. With skill and delicate finess she portrays the sufferings brought upon an innocent girl by malicious gossip."

First National Exchange Manager Inaugurates a "Prosperity Week"

DEMONSTRATING the exceptional advantages to be derived from a thorough co-operation with his exhibitors and outlining a new principle which can be used to stimulate exchange business, Mr. Joseph W. Skirboll, manager of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., exchange at Pittsburgh, has instituted "Prosperity Week" in his territory, and arranged for the exclusive showing of First National attractions during the week of September 13th to 18th by more than seventy of the principal theatres in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The purpose of his new departure in exchange manipulation, as explained by Mr. Skirboll, himself, was solely to familiarize the public with "First National trade-mark." By putting before the people in seventy different theatres in his territory for one full week exclusive First National pictures, it is Mr. Skirboll's belief, that he will have created a greater following for the stars and producers who release through First National and whose productions he handles daily. When it is taken into consideration that practically every high-class motion picture house in Pittsburgh, as well as throughout the remainder of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, were, showing exclusive First National pictures during this one week, it is an easy matter to see the vast benefits to be derived from the project, declares First National.

Concerning his project and the manner in which he carried it out, Mr. Skirboll said:

"The whole idea of the scheme was to identify—for the public—the First National trade-mark with the highest class motion picture theatres and productions. There was no motive other than to bring this about—although the system did stimulate business to a remarkable degree. This, however, was fully expected, in lieu of all the advertising and exploitation given the project. The difficulty of the thing is apparent even to one unacquainted with the exchange and its functioning. Indeed it is not a small matter to arrange with seventy theatres for the showing of one brand of attractions for an entire week, allowing no other trademark to sneak in and baffle the works."

SIMPLEX NOTES

ONE of the incidents attending the recent visit of Spain's latest and most modern battleship in New York Harbor, was the installation of a complete Simplex Projector, which was purchased from fund of $20,000, donated by the people of San Juan, Porto Rico, with which to entertain the crew and officers of this popular Spanish battleship.

When the time limit for the festivities had almost been reached, the question arose as to what appropriate gift might be made that would be a constant reminder of San Juan friendship for the men of the Alfonso XIII, and still be useful rather than decorative. It was then, that Senor R. Colorado, that well-known motion picture man of San Juan, and A. L. Pratchett, general manager of the Caribbean Film Company of Cuba and Porto Rico, and manager of the Fausto theatre of Havana, Cuba, were called into conference, and it was decided that no more lasting a testimonial of good feeling could be selected than a Simplex Projector.

Mr. Hornstein, of the Howells Cine Equipment Co., personally supervised the installation of the Simplex, which was placed amidships, and with a great number of prominent people as guests, the first motion picture show, with an American machine on a Spanish battleship was given with the four reels described in the foregoing, playing an important part in the program.

Bosworth Has Big Role in "His Own Law"

Goldwyn believes that the newest Hobart Bosworth picture, "His Own Law," produced by J. Parker Read, Jr., the man responsible for Mr. Bosworth's "Below the Surface," and the recent Louise Glaum pictures, is the strongest, most convincing and dramatic picture that Bosworth has ever had and that it will bring in the money in a constantly increasing stream to every exhibitor who books it. Goldwyn was so impressed with the commercial and artistic possibilities of "His Own Law" that arrangements were made with the producer to release it to the trade.

Celebrate Hodkinson Founding

Statement Issued on Occasion of Third Anniversary

THE celebration of the third anniversary of the inauguration of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is made the occasion of the following statement, which has just been issued from the headquarters of that organization.

"The W. W. Hodkinson organization is about to celebrate the third anniversary of its existence. The position which the organization has attained in the industry in these three brief years well justifies the faith that Mr. Hodkinson had in the need of an independent force operating independently of producer and exhibitor, but seeking to serve the true and larger interests of both. Upon the basis of system and quality Mr. Hodkinson founded the Paramount organization.

"In the organization which now bears his name his ideals are being realized without the possibility of interference from any quarter. The policy of Mr. Hodkinson has been to encourage the independent producer who holds out the promise of achievement and to penalize the incompetent and inefficient producer. In other words, under the Hodkinson system, consequences of failure in productions are assessed against the producer and not the exhibitor. Under the Hodkinson system every picture must stand upon its own merit. He favors and encourages the forming of more units and fewer pictures. Therein, in his judgment, lies the permanent salvation of the industry. Mr. Hodkinson regards his system as the most unfailing insurance for the exhibitors' independence and prosperity.

"During all his connection with the industry, which began more than thirteen years ago, Mr. Hodkinson has been known as a "builder." His work has always been creative and constructive. That it has also been productive of definite practical results is shown conclusively by the steady progress his organization has made in the past three years.

"The Hodkinson organization will celebrate the month of November as 'Hodkinson Month.' During that month an effort will be made to thoroughly familiarize the exhibitors throughout the United States with the name of Hodkinson and what that name stands for; during that month an increased sales quota will be striven for by every Hodkinson branch throughout the United States; during that month every effort will be made to acquaint the motion picture theatre owners of the country with the high and well sustained average of quality in Hodkinson pictures. The Hodkinson organization looks forward to November as an extraordinary opportunity to show to the exhibitors of the country the advantages of using a steady supply of high-grade pictures such as the Hodkinson program offers week after week."

"One Law for All" Completed

Americanism Picture Due Oct. 16; Hoot Gibson Star

ONE of the first photoplays produced according to the plans of the Americanism Committee following the movement initiated by Franklin K. Lane, ex-Secretary of the Interior, to utilize the screen in spreading the gospel of sturdy Americanism, recently was completed by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. It is called "One Law for All," and stars Hoot Gibson, Universal's popular cow-boy screen player. It will be released October 16.

The story was written by Ford Beebe, of the Universal Scenario staff, who is said to have taken great pains to incorporate in his script telling incidents that drive home with force, the lessons of Americanism—the reasons why American laws, ideals and human relationships are better than any others in the world and why America is the best land in which to live.

It is the story of a strife-weary father and his daughter who emigrate to America from an oppressed land. Accustomed only to injustice, the father is suspicious of everyone. His attitude gets him into trouble with the police almost as soon as he has set foot in this country.

Luckily a young western rancher, East on a vacation, takes an interest in him and takes the pair back to his ranch and employes them. Because of his heavy beard and his uncouth garments, the foreigner is the butt for the jokes of the cow-boys. This does not help the young westerner in his attempt to make a good American out of his employe.

A shave, a hair-cut and American clothes make the immigrant feel more at home, and he finally is convinced that the American Constitution, especially the part which declares that all men are born free and equal, is a just rule.

His new ideas of justice are upset, however, when a worthless cow-boy bothers his daughter. The cow-boy finally surprises the girl at home, alone, and forces his attentions upon her. Discovered by a stranger, he cleverly turns suspicion against the new-comer, upon the arrival of the girl's father and her employer, the young ranchman.

It is then the father, outraged by what he considers the injustice he and his daughter have received at the hands of their new-found countrymen, sees the young ranchman, as sheriff, arrest the new-comer, his own brother. This dutiful action broke down the immigrant's reserve. "I realize now," said the foreigner, "that America's laws are not only fair and just, but that they protect the weak as well as the strong. I am ready to become an American citizen."

The situation is cleared up, the evil cowboy brought to justice, and the aggrieved girl comforted in the arms of the young ranchman, formerly her employer, but suddenly revealed as her ardent admirer.

The picture is one of the new types of western pictures which recently have become popular. It was directed by Leo Maloney, who also plays the role of the foreigner. Among the others in the cast supporting Hoot Gibson are Dorothy Wood and Jim Corey.

Details of Farrar Campaign

Pathe Announces Big Exploitation Ready for "Riddle: Woman" Release

THE elaborate advertising and exploitation campaign worked out by Pathe on "The Riddle: Woman," starring Geraldine Farrar, first Associated Exhibitors, Inc., production, has been completed, and ready for the release of the picture on October 3.

The campaign book accompanying "The Riddle Woman," is not only an elaborate effort upon the part of the Pathe exploitation department, but is one which contains many novel and valuable ideas in "putting over" the attraction. A special double-truck newspaper advertising layout, is contained in the campaign book, in addition to the sixteen pages of regular exploitation and publicity matter. The work of the Publicity Department is manifested in a special press sheet, which is designed for use by exhibitors in newspapers. This sheet is something new in the industry, in that it offers material of the type that newspapers are demanding to-day, being written by men of many years experience in the "Fourth Estate."

For the exhibitor, Pathe has also issued a special twelve-page art brochure, setting forth the high lights of "The Riddle: Woman." It is printed in striking colors. The frontispiece is a four-color portrait of Miss Farrar. Four pages are devoted to art illustrations of the star, scenes from the production, the supporting cast and director, Edward Jose. The remainder is given over to descriptive material of the play.

A tie-up with the Geraldine Farrar Chocolate Company, which will result in nation-wide co-operation between this organization and exhibitors, will be of material aid in the exploiting of "The Riddle: Woman."

Critics Laud Fox Production

"OVER THE HILL," the William Fox presentation of the screen adaptation of the Will Carleton poem, not only received an amazing blage on the night of its prereception by a brilliant assemmiere at the Astor theatre in New York, but, from the standpoint of press criticism, was accorded a most unusual welcome. Collectively and individually, the newspapers of the metropolis apparently vied with each other in singing the virtues in this wonderful picture of home life and homely virtues.

Frank Pope, writing in the New York Journal of Commerce, prefaces his criticism with the frank statement that he does not care especially for motion pictures, but in speaking of the premiere of "Over the Hill," he adds. "Last Night we saw Mary Carr, of whom we never heard before, play a mother as a mother probably never has been played, for the screen at least, before. Reviewers of pictures raved over the work of Vera Gordon in 'Humoresque,' and reviewers of plays did the same over Emma Dunn in 'Mother' and 'Old Lady 31;' but let them see Mary Carr in this picture. It is safe to assert that the camera never has recorded a finer, more faithful piece of acting."

Robert G. Welch suggests the acid test to which the picture was subjected when he says in his criticism in the Evening Telegram; "An audience which included many distinguished persons gave it the hearty welcome which it so richly deserves, and accorded not only the tribute of spontaneous laughter to the many delightful comedy scenes, but also paid that rarer tribute, the gift of sympathetic tears over the pathetic episodes in the story."

James Spearing, writing in the New York Times, declared: "It's capacity for tear-water and gallery cheers is unlimited—it is impressive—its assault upon the emotions is sweeping."

Miss Agnes Smith of the New York Telegraph declared; "It is so true, and so vividly yet simply told, that it impresses itself upon your memory as one of the high spots in film production."

New York Press Has Nothing But Praise for "Over the Hill"

"It is a picture too fine, too human and too tender to miss," says H. Z. Torres in the New York Commercial. "The wondrous depths of maternal love are sounded in this picture, which grips the heart and holds it for two solid hours."

The opinion of Bide Dudley, of the Evening World, is summed up in the following crisp opening sentence: "It abounds with excellent humor and pathos, and tells a story of genuine interest that is gripping."

The New York American insists that "Over the Hill" is "a remarkable impersonation of motherdom. So keen a picturization that your eyes fill—made with a fine big spirit, a remembrance of youth, and appreciation of the eternal mother-soul, and excellent photography."

Again, in the Evening Journal, we read that "a new Fox film scores at the Astor theatre," that "it brought tears even from the most unwilling eyes," and that "it is funny—humanly, riotously funny."

Frank Vreeland, in the Sun and Herald, declares that the picture "draws tears—presses severe strain upon the handkerchief—will undoubtedly have a wide appeal."

Patterson McNutt, writing in the Evening Sun, says: "The applause was sincere and the comment, after the picture, was of the kind that ought to justify the management in expecting a long run."

P. F. Rainers, of the New York Post, insists "it is sort of play in which the battle is more than half won before it is started, because it comes pretty close to the heart-strings of any one who has a heart."

Viola Dana Seen Again in Role of Dancer

Viola Dana again will demonstrate her ability as a dancer in "Cinderella's Twin," by Luther Reed, her new Metro starring picture. However, it will be ballroom dancing that the little star will do in this picture instead of the combination of the shimmy and toe dance seen in "The Chorus Girl's Romance," her most recently released production. Wallace MacDonald, who is playing opposite Miss Dana in "Cinderella's Twin," was her dancing partner for the dancing scenes.

ready has built up and co-ordinated in line with the broadened scope of the personnel and the addition of several new writers has placed the Universal in position to back up the exhibitor with up-to-the minute publicity on Universal pictures and players.

Included in the reorganized Publicity Department are Henry Clay Bate, E. Kenneth Todd, Paul E. Perez, Maud Robinson Toombs, and Adele Topper. Bate is assistant to Mr. Gulick, and supervises the editing and distribution of trade paper news, and all press sheets for Universal pictures. He has been with Universal for the past twelve months, and is a New York newspaperman of several years experience. His last newspaper work was as special correspondent with Col. Theodore Roosevelt for the New York morning newspapers. He resigned to enter the army, in which he served overseas as captain in the Sixteenth United States Infantry of the Fifth Division.

Todd is a newspaperman of many years experience. For the past eighteen months he has been an organizer and publicity director for the Salvation Army in the South and Southwest during that organization's country wide drive. He is a newcomer to Universal.

He will handle publicity for New York City newspapers, and also will conduct a nation publicity campaign to be tied up with local exploitation of Universal pictures in various cities and territories.

Perez, who also is a New York newspaperman, will handle special publicity and advertising. In addition, he will carry out various exploitation plans of national scope. He recently came to Universal from the foreign editor's desk of the United Press. Prior to that he was a reporter for the New York Morning Telegraph. During the war he served as a lieutenant, J. g., with the United States Naval Headquarters in London.

Mrs. Toombs has been engaged by Mr. Gulick to prepare and handle all material for the moving picture "fan" publications. She is a feature writer of long experience, having been with the American Press Associations for a number of years, both in this country and in Europe.

Mr. Gulick will continue to exercise editorial supervision over the publication of the Moving Picture Weekly. He will be assisted in this work by Miss Topper, a special writer.

The national publicity campaign inaugurated by Mr. Gulick is based on selected service. The publicity bureau custom of flooding the newspapers of the country with press copy will be strictly avoided. No editor will be snowed under by stories he does not want. By direct and personal contact, Universal is finding out the moving picture news and needs of every newspaper in the country. Just what each editor wants in the way of moving picture news will be supplied to him, and nothing more.

The formation of the New Exploitation Department follows closely upon Universal's recent campaign in all Universal exchanges to establish the system of poster and accessory distribution which now assured every exhibitor of a prompt and adequate supply of paper and other necessities at all times on any Universal picture. F. W. Talbert, Universal's manager of supplies, personally visited the various exchanges, inaugurating this system, which already has gained the praise and good will of Universal's exhibitor-patrons.

The publicity-advertising-poster consolidation under Mr. P. D. Cochrane is in line with Mr. Laemmle's policy of building up the Universal's service to exhibitors and of giving theatre-owners full co-operation in the popularizing and presentation of Universal pictures. It is the follow-up campaign of the fight Mr. Laemmle started last spring to improve the Universal output and to place Universal at the forefront of film production.

A Vitagraph Super-Feature

NOW comes the day when great pictures are made into plays. That's exactly what is going to happen if certain conditions are fulfilled to Allen Holybar's latest, and from all accounts greatest, picture production, "Man, Woman, Marriage," according to the announcement of Al Kaufman, independent producer and President of the Holubar Productions Company. In this stage production Dorothy Phillips will have the leading role, as she has in the picture also, which will soon be released by First National.

The offer comes to Kaufman from the Sewwyns in New York, and Kaufman and Holubar are to journey to the metropolis within the next three weeks to launch the picture in conjunction with First National officials, and to confer with the theatrical producers in regard to its stage presentation.

Sid Franklin, director of the Sid Franklin Productions, of which Kaufman is also president, will accompany Kaufman and Holubar on the trip. Franklin is a present directing "Parrot and Company," in which Sylvia Breamer will appear in the leading role. This production will also be released through First National.

Educational Comedies Score in Boston

Although on account of the double feature plan, Boston has heretofore given little attention to the two-reel comedy, Educational reports that its various pictures are now being given prominent portions on the bills of leading theatres there and receiving attention in the newspapers. The Old South and Modern theatres are giving them special attention, the former having scored a hit during a two-weeks run of a Torchy Comedy and the Modern featuring "A Fresh Start," first of the Mermaids last week.

Chester Comic in Big Run

Grauman's Rialto Theatre Shows "An Overall Hero" Seven Weeks

"AN OVERALL HERO," second of the two-reel Chester Comedies released through Education exchanges, has just broken all records for the West Coast, according to report just received from Los Angeles. This picture ran for the unequalled record of seven continuous weeks at Grauman's Rialto theatre and is said to have been given the most unusual reception ever accorded a comedy in that section.

On the strength of this record, Syd Grauman booked "The Big Show," third of the Chester series, for an indefinite run at the Rialto starting the week of Sept. 26, immediately on the heels of the second picture.

"In making a new record for the Pacific coast, Chester Comedies have simply duplicated their feats in the east. The first of this series was originally shown at the Rivoli in New York and Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld regarded it as so unusual an offering that he used the same picture for another week at the Rialto —something that he had never done before.

"In the case of 'An Overall Hero,' the picture was first shown at the Rivoli and then transferred to the Rialto the following week—thus setting another precedent for these two houses.

"'The Big Show' starts its engagement at the Rivoli this week, thus making its appearance about the same time that it is seen in Los Angeles. We feel confident that it will produce equally notable results on the Pacific and here in New York City.

"Everyone who sees one of these pictures will agree that they are in a class of their own. They will create a word of mouth advertising in any community that will bring attendance long after the usual life of a comedy, It is for that reason that we are advising exhibitors to extend their runs of these pictures to get the full value from them. They can be made features on any program, not only because of their advertising values, but because the once-launched campaign behind them will continue to grow in results.

Pearl White Winner in Two Contests

Not only in one class of the national popularity contest recently held in Great Britain did the internationally famous Fox star, Pearl White, come out winner, but in the final totals, the heroine of "The White Moll," her first Fox special, romped merrily away with the highest honors in two classes of this contest.

The voting in which Pearl White has proved the hold which she possesses on the fans of the United Kingdom was held under the auspices of The Picture Show, a trade and fan publication of the Amalgamated Press, Limited, of London. The contest editor gave his seventy-odd thousand readers a wide margin in the way of selection of favorites, and divided the classes so that all stars would be given an equal start.

From the twenty divisions into which the contest was divided—a majority of which was for male stars and comedy artists—Miss White carried off the laurels in "Who is your ideal screen heroine?" and in "Who is the bravest film actress?"

Combining the totals Miss White received over thirty-nine thousand votes.

Eleanor Fair Is "Going Up"

Forewarned is forearmed, so we are prepared to see the sudden leap predicted for Elinor Fair after the showing of "Kismet," the Robertson-Cole release in which she plays opposite Otis Skinner and gives, it is said, the best performance of her career.

The verdict, it is prophesied, will be "Elinor is 'going up'" but the lively little lady has already precipitated that experience.

Recently, on location in Maine where exteriors for the Eugene O'Brien picture under the direction of Robert Ellis were being shot, Elinor finished her work early, one day and was at liberty to roam. She found the surrounding territory interesting and decided to "give a look." So did an airman, patroling the dense forests in a 'plane, evidently equipped with powerful binoculars. He taxied alongside, and Miss Fair took it for granted she might "go up," if she chose. "It is against the rules" said the mechanician, but that meant nothing in the airman's young life, when a motion picture actress of acknowledged beauty wished to fly. So after what seemed to Elinor a series of unnecessary questions about her heart, she was helped in, and finally deposited at her hotel safe and sound. Now, when admiring friends congratulate Elinor on her predicted flight with impunity she informs them "I'm not 'going up'—I've already gone."

Latest Rolin Comedy Released Oct. 10

For "Fellow Citizens," the new Rolin Comedy which Pathe will release October 10th, Hal Roach the producer built an elaborate cabaret setting, in which "Snub" Pollard creates much mirth, aided by Marie Mosquini, "Sunshine Sambo," the little colored comedian, and a large chorus of beautiful girls. With the new "Vanity Fair Girl" comedies successfully launched, the Rolin Comedies will be released on alternate weeks, giving more time to producion.

Ray Strong in New York

JOHN C. RAGLAND, general manager of Arthur Kane Pictures steps forward this week with an interesting statement covering the bookings on Charles Ray subjects released through First National, made following the initial showing of "Forty-Fve Minutes From Broadway" at the Strand.

In New York City the Charles Ray films are scheduled for runs at Academy of Music, the big Fourteenth Street house, under the supervision of William Fox; at the Audubon, the colossal Fox palace at 165th Street and Broadway; at the Jap Garden in 96th Street; at the Claremont, the well known community picture house at 135th Street and Broadway. Most of the big Keith and Proctor houses have contracted for the work of the star, including Proctor's Twenty-third Street, the Harlem Opera House, Keith's 81st Street, Proctor's 125th Street, Proctor's 58th Street and of the same circuit in Brooklyn, Keith's Greenpoint and Keith's Prospect.

On the same circuit out-of-town the Ray films will appear at Proctor's in Mt. Vernon; Proctor's in Port Chester; Proctor's in Albany and Proctor's in Yonkers.

Among the many exhibitors who are entered on Mr. Ragland's statement as having contracted for the forthcoming Ray productions are the following: In New York City proper, the Dyckman,, Al. Singer proprietor; the Halsey, of the Benedict Amusement Co.; the Heights theatre of L and B. Amusement Co.; the Superior, J. Knester, manager; the Victory of D. V. Picker; the Olympia of the Aetna Amusement Co.; the Golden Rule of Katz and Cross; the Venice of L. Gordon; the Star of the William Fox Amusement Co.; the Regent Theatre, 116th Street and Seventh Avenue and other houses of smaller seating capacity.

Representation on the Ray schedule for Brooklyn covers most of the big neighborhood houses of that borough. Included on the list are the Bay Ridge of the Big Four Amusement Co.; the Linden of the Carleton Amusement Co.; the Comedy Theatre; the Bedford of the Drofdeb Operating Co.; the Grand; the West End of the Miller Amusement Co.; the large Folly Theatre of the Fox Varieties Co.; the Ridgewood of the Woodridge Operating Co. and a long list of smaller houses scattered throughout the borough. In Bronx county, in addition to many houses of similar capacity, the list includes the Empire and McKinley Square, both under the management of Sy Cohen, and the large Crotona theatre, management of the Avenue Amusement Company.

From the Buffalo office the Ray schedule includes a host of picture houses which will show this star's productions in all parts of the upstate metropolis. On the list are the Savoy, management of the Co-Operative Amusement Co.; the Victoria and Regent, under the management of J. H. Michael, the Liberty of McFarlane and Son. In addition, some of the others are the Columbia, the Arcadia, the Broadway, the Franklin, the Elwood, the Academy; also the Flash, of Tonawanda; the Congress, of Saratoga, N. Y., under the management of William Benton.

Keaton Family Is Reunited

THE THREE KEATONS are re-united after a lapse of five years. Father Joseph and Mother Myra and Son Buster—all three used to thrill the audiences of vaudeville show houses throughout the country. Now they are to thrill motion picture audiences throughout the world.

In the old days, when Buster was a youngster, his father organized an act called The Three Keatons and its first contract was with a traveling medicine show. Success of a considerably higher and more remunerative degree soon came and the little troupe visited England and France, where success also awaited it.

About five years ago Buster joined the company of which Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle was the star and Buster made good. So it was decided that the Three Keatons combination be discontinued for good, and Buster's parents returned to their home town, Muskegon, Mich., to live.

Then the war broke out, and Buster enlisted and went to France. After awhile, they returned, and Buster was made a star and given a company of his own, called the Metro-Buster Keaton Comedies.

So Buster wrote back to Muskegon and demanded that his father and mother come to Southern California to live with him. A few weeks ago, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Keaton put in their appearance and now are living in Hollywood, not far from their son's studio.

They visited Buster's studio once, then again. Their visits became more frequent. Then the nearness of the grease paint and the business of acting became too much for them and they asked to be permitted to take part in a scene or two. Their request was met at once, and both were presented with convict costumes and will be seen in "Convict 13," Buster's second comedy, as soon as it is released.

Jose Picks Players

Six well known players, Anna Q. Nilsson, Earle Metcalfe, Allan Forrest, Riley Hatch, George Majeroni and Jane Jennings have been chosen by Edward Jose to interpret the story written by Charles Logue for the first Jose special to be released by Associated Exhibitors through Pathe.

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

Unsell Story Seen on Stage

Eve Unsell, scenarist of many of the most successful productions released under the Paramount standard, who has just returned from London where she has been scenario editor for Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., is the author of a short story entitled "Stigmata," which has been dramatized by Beulah Marie Dix and Evelyn Neilson Terry. The play is to be produced in London at an early date by Miss Terry, who is a niece of Ellen Terry, most famous of English tragediennes.

One of the country fair scenes in "The Stealers," Robertson-Cole's current special feature written and directed by William Christy Cabanne

To Exploit "The Stealers"

R.-C. Plans Comprehensive Press and Exploitation Suggestions on Feature

ROBERTSON-COLE, which shortly is to release "The Stealers," the super-special production which was given its premier showing to the trade at the Hotel Astor on September 17, has arranged for this picture an unusually comprehensive exploitation campaign. This will be set forth in full in the press book shortly to be issued.

In the exploitation section of this book there will be emphasized, in particular, the possibilities of "The Stealers" as a production which will win a much wider audience than the average picture by reason of its appeal to certain classes which seldom if ever attend a motion picture performance.

Among other lines of attack which have been planned, is an extensive teaser campaign laid about the line "The Stealers Are Coming." The exhibitor is shown how the use of this line in newspaper advertisements, and in out-of-door advertising can be made to awaken the attention of the whole community. He is shown how he can use "The Stealers" for a business-builder, that is to say, a picture which will raise the standing of his theatre in his town, and even win laudatory editorial comment from the newspapers of the city.

As a special aid to the exhibitor there are mapped out the plans for a pre-view of the picture to be staged at the theatre before an audience composed of leaders in the town, who comes as the specially invited guests of the management. Because of its foundation on the principle of what can be accomplished through faith "The Stealers" is of special interest to clergymen, Christian Scientists, psychic healers and students of the various branches of theology.

Besides all sorts of religious organizations, the picture is of interest also to civic bodies, and all societies and movements having for their purpose the betterment of the community. Police and city officials are invited as guests, whose good words for the picture will have a wide value to the exhibitor. A plan is outlined whereby it is easy to obtain the endorsement of the guests, and apply them so as to get real box office results.

Copy for the exhibitor's personal endorsement, which most exhibitors will recognize as an effective piece of advertisement, after they see the picture, is provided. Another unusual bit of exploitation suggested is the use of a religious air as part of the preparation for the showing. This is introduced, as told by the press book, in such a way as to perfectly fit the purpose, and tune the mind of the audience for a production which deals in a virile way with human problems.

In addition to these points the exhibitor has traced out for him every detail of the decoration of his lobby and the front of his house, so that his patrons may know that he is providing for them an extraordinary attraction. The usual routine of smaller details which go to make up the comprehensive complement of accessories and exploitation ads, which Robertson-Cole sends along with every one of its super-special attractions, also is listed, and the application of each detail is explained.

"The Stealers" is an attraction away from the regulation type, and this its distributors had in mind when they produced the exploitation campaign which goes along with it, thinking always of the Robertson-Cole principle of not only giving the exhibitor a super-special picture, but every possible aid in showing this production to the public so as to attract a maximum of box office return.

MAJOR Charles H. Bell, who will return to London September 30 on the Mauretania to became studio manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's new London studios, will take back with him a large stock of technical equipment further to increase the efficiency of the Famous Players' British producing units.

Major Bell has been in this country several months studying production methods and studio equipment in both the Eastern and Western studios of the Corporation. He is now completing his investigations and on his return to London will be in the unique position of having made a complete survey of all the larger studios in this country as well as Europe.

With Major Bell will sail Paul Powell, who is going to London to head the third producing unit in the Famous Players' studios.

Seitz's Feature Nears Completion

The final scenes on George B. Seitz's first feature production for Pathe, "Rogues and Romance," will soon be shot on the massive set of a Spanish village he built at Larchmont, New York. June Caprice, who is co-starring with Mr. Seitz in this attraction, and Marguerite Courtot, who has the next leading feminine role, were the centre of the action filmed last week on the big set.

Mr. Seitz began work on "Rogues and Romance" last July. He made many scenes in his Harlem studio before he took the entire company to Algeciras, Spain, to film the greatest portion of the action in the exact atmosphere demanded by the story, which was written by Seitz himself.

Because of the refusal of the Spanish authorities to permit him to film fight scenes, Seitz had to erect the massive set at Larchmont.

Edith Roberts Returns to the West Coast

Edith Roberts, Universal's diminutive star, is on her way back to Universal City after a lengthy vacation in New York City. Immediately upon arriving at Universal's west coast studios she will begin work on a new picture, to follow her recent success in "The Adorable Savage," the South Sea picture adapted from Ralph Stock's popular novel, "Marama," which Norman Dawn directed for Universal.

Waldemar Young Joins F.P.-Lasky Staff

Waldemar Young, ex-newspaper man and journeyman scenario writer, who for ten years was the dramatic critic for the San Francisco Chronicle, has arrived in New York from the Coast to take up his new duties in the scenario and editing department of the Famous Players-Lasky Eastern studios.

Fourth Anniversary of Christie Company : : : :

THE Christie Film Company, started as a small independent single reel producing company four years ago this month, is celebrating its anniversary by passing a mark of four hundred light comedy pictures, most of which have been known as Christie comedies, although several other brands of productions have figured in the four years' work of the Christie organization.

Starting on a very small scale four years ago, the company now figures in a large way among the foremost producers of comedies and also in production of legitimate feature pictures.

The Christies have already produced or have in production half of the twenty-four two-reel comedies called for in their contracts for the present season which started in April of this year and will run into releases for April of 1921. With these new two-reel comedies under way, the total number of Christie comedies produced numbers 220, one hundred and ninety-six of these being Christie single reel comedies which is the brand on which Al Christie established his fame as the leader in polite comedy.

Besides this volume of business, the Christie Film Company is also responsible for 144 Strand and Supreme comedies, production of which was stopped in order to make room for expansion of activity in the Christie brands themselves, and for the occasional feature productions from the Christie studios which will number about four a year.

Dozens of the players who appeared in early Christie Comedies have departed from the studios. Many of whom have since gained fame in other productions. When two well know comedians left the Christie company two years ago, many predicted the failure of Christie comedies now that their chief fun makers were out of the pictures. But the following success of Christie pictures convinced the Christies that they were on the right track, i. e., presenting a certain type of comedy, with particular attention to stories and direction, featuring and popularizing various new players from time to time, but never losing sight of the type or brand. Al Christie, who is supervising director, attributes much of the consistency of his comedies to his directors who have been with him continually for three years. Foremost among these are Scott Sidney and Wm. Beaudine, who next to Christie himself, have produced the greatest number of the Christie pictures.

A scene from "Shuffle the Queens," a Christie comedy released through Educational Exchanges, Inc.

On anniversary week this year, Al Christie is directing "See My Lawyer" the second of his special productions, from the Broadway success by the same name. Sidney and Beaudine and Frederick Sullivan are each directing new two-reel special comedies, while James Clemens, the fifth of the directors, is making a single reel comedy for early release.

Officers of the company have been re-elected as follows: Al Christie, president; C. H. Christie, treasurer and general manager; Fred L. Porter, secretary and vice-president.

Gareth Hughes Engaged for Robertson Film

Gareth Hughes, the 22-year old Welsh actor, has arrived in New York ready to step into the universally beloved role of Tommy Sandys in the John S. Robertson's production for Paramount of Sir James M. Barrie's story, "Sentimental Tommy." The production is now getting under way at Famous Players-Lasky's new studio at Long Island City.

The name of Gareth Hughes suggested itself to Mr. Robertson for the role of Tommy as soon as the latter learned that he was to make the production, but as the young actor was tied up with a starring contract with Metro on the West Coast, there were numerous obstacles which looked as if he could not be obtained.

Finally, a way was found, Hughes was released from his other contract, and he took the first train from Los Angeles to New York.

A REPORT just made by the Ohio Board of Censors reveals some startling things

The report, covering the activities of the board for the year just closed, states that a total of 28,745 reels were viewed. Of this number 24,395 were passed without a single elimination; eliminations were ordered in 4,175, while 175 were turned down in their entirety as being unfit to exhibit publicly.

The following are the figures which R. H. Haines, Associated First National Pictures Corporation, has dug up.

"As every reel is supposed to have 1,000 feet of film on it, it does not require any great amount of figuring to learn that the censor viewed 28,745,000 feet—28,745 being the number of reels. When we went to school we were taught that 5,280 feet make one mile. There has never been any argument to the contrary so we will go on the theory that this is correct, which gives us a total of 5,444 and a fraction miles of motion pictures reviewed by the censors. Few people had any idea of the work demanded of the censor, but take it from me, they work and work hard, too. Why, if the celluloid strips were placed in a straight line they would reach from here to New York then back to San Francisco."

Live Notes from the Studios

CONDUCTED BY LILLIAN R. GALE

ABOUT PLAYERS

Gaston Glass, who has shattered all records in his speedy race for recognition as a screen actor out of the ordinary, has recently gained additional laps and landed in the "featured juvenile class." It must be most gratifying to the young Frenchman, too, to know that he has earned every inch he has gained since he decided to remain in America, following his career as a French aviator in the world war. His popularity, though dating back previous to the Cosmopolitan production, was brought to the surface when he scored in the portrayal of Leon in "The Humoresque," and doubly accentuated when he was seen as Ernesto in Robert G. Vignola's delightful screen version of "The World and His Wife." Upon the strength of these two performances, Mr. Glass was paid the compliment of being selected for the title role of "The Foreigner." It evidenced confidence in his ability, for it was the first of a series of Ralph Connor stories to be filmed for release via First National. No pains were spared in selecting the cast. The sincere effort of Gaston Glass to prove the confidence of the producers, as well placed, it is said, enabled him to portray the role in a most satisfactory manner, so much so that director Henry MacRae requested that he be permitted to retain Mr. Glass for his following picture, "Cameron of the Royal Mounted." And at a salary almost double that he has previously commanded, and with a clause calling for "featuring," Gaston Glass will remain in Canada on location, for the second picture, requiring intense dramatic ability as well as the attractiveness so vital to a "featured juvenile"—"stepping up."

Vincent Coleman, who is playing the lead in "Self Defense" at the Blackstone theatre, Chicago, and Constance Talmadge's leading man in her current release "Good References," nearly lost his life last week in the course of rescuing a boy from drowning in Lake Michigan. Coleman noticed the boy fall from a raft and swam to his rescue. The lad obtained a death grip on the actor's throat and both were in danger until life guards saved them.

In an attempt to conclude at the earliest possible moment the filming of "Three Women Loved Him," the initial production of Messrs. Naulty and Hunting, the company have been working literally day and night. Virginia Lee, who plays a prominent feminine role, and one of "the women," has found life one strenuous shot upon another since her work started in this picture, some weeks ago. The leading masculine role is being played by Robert Gordon.

Vera Gordon, world famous through her work in "Humoresque," who has a principal role in "The North Wind's Malice," a Rex Beach-Goldwyn production

Anna Q. Nilsson, who is seen in R. A. Walsh's second independent production for Mayflower recently turned down an offer to head her own company. A coterie of Swedish capitalists broached the actress with a proposition whereby she would produce pictures in Sweden at the head of her own organization. Miss Nilsson, however, preferred to secure a niche in America's Hall of film Fame.

Among other things which go to make George Walsh a popular young man, other than his abilities of acting and athletics, is his interest in the less fortunate. For instance: Last week he entertained the prisoners at Ossining with a game of baseball, his famous team the "All Nationals" against "The Welfare League Team" of State's prison. During his career as one of our foremost stars, Mr. Walsh has done much to contribute in this manner and help along the unfortunate brother. Miss Estelle Taylor, who has recently been the object of favorable comment for her work in "While New York Sleeps," threw the first ball and started the game.

James W. Morrison has finished "When We Were Twenty-One," in which he played "The Imp," and is returning to the East.

Irene Boyle, who played opposite George Walsh in "The Dead-Line," is now playing the leading feminine role in "The Rider of the King Log," which Edgar Jones is making in Augusta, Me.

Harry Coleman, the promising young juvenile who has recently returned from Europe, has just signed a contract with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to create the role of Corp in its forthcoming picturization of "Sentimental Tommy." This famous story by James M. Barrie will be directed by John S. Robertson, who is well-remembered for his "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde" and numerous other successful screen plays.

Pat O'Malley, the young leading man whose work in "Go and Get It" is proving one of the big features of the picture, will next be seen in Marshall Neilan's newest First National release, "Dinty." This production which has just been completed, discloses young O'Malley in the role of the third assistant district attorney and intimate friend of "Dinty," portrayed by little Wesley Barry.

Mr. O'Malley's next work for Marshall Neilan will be the portrayal of one of the big parts in "Pards," a scenario by Marion Firfax based on Ben Ames Williams' story which appeared in Collier's "Not a Drum Was Heard." In this character, O'Malley further proves his versatility as a hard-riding Westerner, a part for which he is particularly well suited.

From the energetic news hound in "Go and Get It" to the polished third assistant district attorney in "Dinty" and then to the "hard-boiled" Western type of "Pards" offers a variety of characterizations that afford Mr. O'Malley the opportunity of asserting his many accomplishments.

Having returned from Havana, and its outskirts, Ward Crane, leading man to Constance Binney in her forthcoming Realart production takes pleasure in reciting the difficulties encountered in filming exteriors. Because of the stubborn haze which spoils the sun for photographic purposes between ten and three o'clock, it was necessary for the actors to arise at two-forty-five every morning, so that they arrive on location, some sixty miles away, in time for work a couple of hours after daybreak, and before the haze intruded. As a result, there was no enjoying the evening festivities in Havana, about which a great deal is being said.

Incidentally, Miss Binney and Ward Crane figured in the first scene photographed in the Famous Players studio on Long Island, which was witnessed by Mr. Zukor, and a number of other prominent administrative officials of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Edna May Sperl has ended her month's vacation and will soon begin work on the second of the series of five reel dramas which Edgar Jones is producing in Maine. Miss Sperl earned her vacation for she worked steadily for a year in the Northwoods series of two-reelers at Augusta.

After working day and night to complete his scenes in Vitagraph's forthcoming special Tom Terriss Production, "Dead Men Tell No Tales," in which Percy Marmont is co-featured with Catherine Calvert, this sterling actor plunged himself at once into the Hope Hampton production tentatively titled "The Right Way."

Not only is this story an unusual one—it was written by Jack Gilbert, who is also directing the filming of the picture—but affords Marmont a role which, he claims, is perhaps the most interesting of the scores of characterizations which have been entrusted to him on the screen and

Hazel Dawn, who is to return to the screen in a series of features under the caption of Bimberg Productions

during his stage career before coming to the films. It is the part of a rising business man who sacrifices love and honor for the sake of ambition, and brings down upon himself not only the hatred of the heroine but also leads to the death of his own wife and child, who are sunk after embarking in a ship which he had built in record time, but without any regard to its seaworthiness.

The interesting part about this character is the fact of its humanness, since, despite his overpowering ambition, the man is likeable and has a winning personality, s that he gains the friendship of all whom he meets.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

WHILE on location in Maine, for exteriors, with seven members of the Eugene O'Brien Company, Robert Ellis was stricken with an attack which centered about his heart, and which seemed for a few hours would finish the young director's promising career. Due to constant attention and nursing by members of the company, Mr. Ellis' life was spared. He was about to finish his work when the unfortunate happening prevented his last efforts. Mr. Ellis, now convalescent, will continue his directorial duties and finish the picture, interiors now being made in Fort Lee. Convinced that his friends are many and sincere, Mr. Ellis will believe in his own popularity, since callers and inquiring friends kept the entrance and the telephone attendants busy.

There was a representative attendance at the last meeting of Motion Picture Directors' Association, New York lodge, and a motion in order to "start something" to be announced later, assigning well-known "starters" on the committee, which includes Charles Giblyn, J. Searle Dawley, Charles A. Miller and Ashley Miller.

Director Wally Van presumably expects to be voicing via the megaphone again, shortly, since he has forsaken his ideal residence at Long Beach, where he has "locationed" during the summer, and returned to New York for keeps.

Victor Fleming, after many years directing on the Coast, and who directed Douglas Fairbanks in "When the Clouds Roll By" and in "The Mollycoddle," is in New York making preparations to direct the John Emerson-Anita Loos production of "Mamma's Affair," in which Constance Talmadge will be starred.

Another young director! Only twenty-one, and already having formed his own company, will have, also, a youthful leading woman in the personage of Doris Kenyon. With his cast of thirteen principal players, Mr. Johnson has taken himself and company to Knoxville, Ten., where exteriors for "Footsteps," a promising screen play will be filmed.

George D. Baker, director of many notable special features, prophesies the death of the maudlin sex story, which, in Mr. Baker's opinion, has done more to obstruct the progress of the motion picture industry, than any other agency. Speaking of this, Mr. Baker declares: "I believe the silver screen should always be kept clean, free from subjects that play upon the baser phases of life. If a picture cannot be shown to the younger generation, it is not worthy of production." It is true that we do not recall a picture directed by George D. Baker, which has ever touched upon anything offensive to the properties. That his policy pays in the long run, Mr. Baker is certain, and cites such known successes as "The Humoresque," "Revelation" and "Broken Blossoms." "The whole trend of the world thought to-day," said Mr. Baker, "is toward the spiritual and we, of the motion picture industry, should take our cue from that established fact. Another point is that the children of to-day will be the theatre patrons of to-morrow, and it is up to us to gain and hold their present and future patronage by depicting in our pictures stories which illustrate the best in life."

Mr. Baker expects to carry out his beliefs in all of his own productions, which he will head at the completion of his present contract.

John S. Robertson and company are in Elizabethtown, N. Y., where exteriors for "Sentimental Tommy" will be shot, in lieu of actual location upon Scotch country side. In the cast are Gareth Hughes and Faire Binney.

George L. Sargent has finished the direction and assemblying of "The Broadway Bubble," the latest feature in which Corinne Griffith is starred. President A. E. Smith, of the Vitagraph, has been so pleased with Mr. Sargent's production of the story that he is having "The Broadway Bubble" elaborately tinted and toned in order that it may be released as a de luxe Vitagraph special. The production is marked by a double-exposure feat heretofore deemed impossible until it was done by Mr. Sargent. The action in question was a double-exposure of Miss Griffith enacting the part of two sisters before a mirror. The entire action of the two characters being reflected with perfect reality. Mr. Sargent's cast in "The Broadway Bubble" included Corinne Griffith, Joe King, Stanley Warrington and Robert Gaillord.

In Hugo Ballin's first independent production, "An Honorable Gentleman," Rockliffe Fellowes plays the male lead. Mr. Ballin's picture, it is said, is strengthened by the characterization given by Mr. Fellowes, who scored a big hit as leading man for Constance Talmadge in "In Search of a Sinner," with Norma Talmadge in "Yes or No," and others. That he has never played in a picture that was not a success, speaks well for Mr. Fellowes as well as for the director, who sought talent and found a man who has played opposite Grace George, William Cortenay, Mrs. Fiske, and other prominent stars.

Jessen's Notes on Players

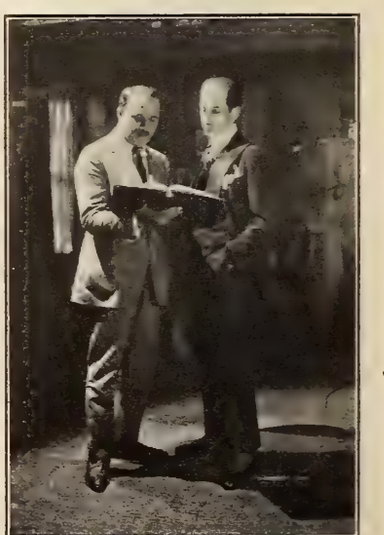
Stuart Holmes, who is credited with having earned more hisses than any man on the screen, is now playing an important part in the Metro production "But Yet a Woman," in which Mme. Doraldina is being starred. The script for the picture had required a rough and tumble fight scene and none of the extras had spared one another. Incidentally Holmes had been given all that the most enthusiastic fan could want the villain to receive in the way of punishment—he was nursing a lame leg, a scratched hand, a bruised neck and a grouch against the world. Just at this time Director John Ince told everybody to go to lunch. There was no response from the villain. The invitation was repeated. Still no response. "I am not hearing anything from that director right now," said the screen bad man. "He'll be sending me in to take another beating if I hear, so I'm going to pretend injury to my ears." Mr. Ince adopted another method of gaining the attention of the villain. He mentioned something about a cellar and immediately the man whose hearing had up until this time been affected, was strangely alert. "I was just asking if you wanted a drop of something from my medicine chest to rub on those bruises," said Mr. Ince—but Holmes again was deaf.

Lee Moran is not neglecting his old musical comedy and vaudeville talent, in spite of the fact that he is busy making a series of comedy features for Universal. Every time a benefit or charity entertainment is planned in Los Angeles or Hollywood, Moran is asked to contribute his services and he always gives a song and dance or a comedy stunt. He participated in three such affairs during the past week. At present Lyons and Moran are at work on their fourth fun feature "Fixed By George," from the pen of Edgar Franklyn.

Paul Powell, who recently finished directing Mary Miles Minter's newest picture, has left for New York, from where he will sail for London. Mr. Powell is to direct a number of Famous Players-Lasky pictures in the England metropolis.

Larry Semon made the rounds of newspaper offices in Los Angeles this week, in order to regain some of the atmosphere which he intends to use in a future comedy. Larry at one time in his life was a newspaper cartoonist and reporter.

Webster Cullison is now busy making a picture for Selig from William E. Wing's story "Danger," in which Franklyn Farnum is to be starred.



Robert G. Vignola Seeking Title

Robert G. Vignola's third special production for Cosmopolitan-Paramount, scenariorized by Frances Marion, from Ethel Watts Mumford's famous short story "The Manifestation of Henry Ort," is rapidly nearing completion. The exteriors are all finished and the director is now rounding up the finishing touches.

This special production has been made under the original title, but will possibly be released under another, for which Mr. Vignola is searching. It is a delicious satire on the ouiji board craze, and the director, having caught the spirit of the story, and having delved into ouiji and kindred spiritual manifestations, will be able to inject the proper atmosphere, which is one of the things for which he is noted.

The exteriors for this special were taken in a historic spot. Respecting the author's psychology, Director Vignola took the exteriors in the locale where the author set the story, the famous old Sands homestead at Sand's Point, Long Island, built in 1668, and which Mrs. Mumford occupies as her summer residence. History makes mention of the fact that this house played an important part in the Indian massacres of pre-revolutionary days.

Mr. Vignola, always adept in selecting suitable casts, has, in this instance selected Matt Moore, George Parsons, Gladys Leslie, Mabel Bert, Van Dyke Brooks, and Henry Sedley.

"The Wind Blew Jack Crosby Into Films"

"'TIS an ill wind which blows nobody good."

Jack Crosby, fast becoming famed as a juvenile leading man, always did believe in practicing the teachings of popular old adages such as "Do unto others" etc., but he has every reason to uphold the above quoted. While Jack Crosby is only one of many who benefitted by the same turn of the breeze, in his particular instance, it affected his entire career to the good.

This all refers to the quibble of about a year ago between actors, actresses and managers. When the wind blew the Actors' Equity strike, and productions under way were temporarily discontinued, it was thought by many, mostly managers, to be an "ill wind." Regardless, it blew Jack Crosby back into pictures, where he wishes to remain. And, he admits, to his liking.

With a contract to open in the Al H. Woods production for the legitimate stage of "The Honorable Abe Potash," as the son of "Abe," Mr. Crosby was already counting upon what expensive presents he would be able to give all his relatives, Christmas. But when the "strike" caused productions to be "temporarily discontinued," Mr. Crosby decided to make the best of time intervening and work in a picture.

It happened Charles Giblyn, director, was casting for "Black is White," a Paramount-Artcraft release. He had "been casting" quite long enough, so he thought, but the delay was centered about finding the right man for the Juvenile lead. It was a part which required opposite requisites—such as youth extreme, youth, and an ability to act like a man with fifteen years of stage experience. But when Mr. Giblyn heard that "Jack" was the actor who had played in a production of the spoken stage, the director had previously seen, there was no quibbling about salary. There was no time for anything except to start "shooting," and that brought about Jack Crosby's return to the screen.

Following came his selection for a prominent role in the Rex Beach production, "The North Wind's Malice," Goldwyn, not yet seen, but promised for release November 1st. And without stopping to take a long leisurely breath came his engagement in "The Marriages of Mayfair," Metro, requiring Mr. Crosby's services for eleven weeks. It was during this time he was selected for the juvenile role in "The Stealers" which lately brought him into emphatic prominence. He was even playing in the initial work of "The Stealers" before he finished the Metro picture, and learned to "steal a snooze" between scenes. "All work and no play" may make "Jack a dull boy" in the main—but it only made Jack Crosby a tired one, though not too tired to accept another engagement right on top of his completed work in "The Stealers." It seems engagements came thick and fast, and without time to wonder "where do I go from here," Mr. Crosby was found working again in the Olive Tell picture, "The Wrong Woman," in which he plays a "he vamp" and proves his versatility.

There is now a production under way at International studio under the direction of George D. Baker—which will be, it is predicted, "greatly fussed over." It is called "Proxies," and at present, being obliged to be on the job constantly, Jack has decided that he only eats "by proxy"—since the $10,000 ball room set, in which he is offered an opportunity to show off to advantage in dress clothes, is only good to look at.

There has been most favorable comment floating about the film world regarding Mr. Crosby's performance in "The Stealers," refreshing the memories of those who have seen him, also, in previous productions and admired his dramatic powers. It is safe to predict that he will keep following the trail of many far-sighted, gifted actors, who, for one reason or another, have forsaken the art of the spoken drama to appear in pictures.

The wind which blew the "Actors' Equity" emphatic stand right up Broadway and closed theatres for many days, blew money right out of managers' hands and scattered it to the same wind. But, it was not altogether an ill wind, since it blew Jack Crosby into film work, and seemingly deposited him in the place where he belongs, and where he expects to stay.

From Whence Come the Laughs?

WE read, continually, about the directors of motion pictures who are able to extract from hardened picture-goers an appreciative tear. Right well do these directors deserve the praise accorded them. But it is only fair to "have a heart," also, for the director who can summons a laugh, and dispel the gloom, for the two reels he is most often accorded.

There are the comedies featuring Buster Keaton, which are co-directed by Mr. Keaton and Eddie Cline; Eddie Cline, who stands pre-eminent to-day as one of the leading directors in the comedy field.

Less than four months after assuming the position with the Comique Film Company, the corporation sponsoring the Keaton comedies, he has become known as one of the best handlers of the megaphone in "the land of slapstick."

"One Week," the first of the Keaton comedies, the honors of which are shared by the agile comedian and Cline, has won unstinted praise. Absolutely new in idea, capably handled and well acted are these comedies being labelled as the equal of any two-reeler released this year.

Cline is no stranger to those who have been attending motion picture theatres. Beginning his career in motion pictures as an assistant at Mack Sennett he was soon to become known as the leading director on that "lot." Exhibitors wanted comedies directed by Cline because they were sure-fires. Leaving Sennett, Cline became affiliated with the Sunshine comedies and handled the megaphone for the star funmakers of that organization.

When the Comique Film Company, through its production manager, scoured the field for a director to assist Keaton on his advent into stardom, Cline was chosen, and he immediately made good, as "One Week" will testify.

Since "One Week," Cline has co-directed with Keaton in four additional two-reelers "Convict 13," "The Scarecrow," "The Hight Sign," and "The Backyard" follow in the order named.

Cline was born and reared in Kenosha, Wisconsin, and the inhabitants of that thriving metropolis still retain vivid memories of him. From Kenosha he migrated to Chicago, where he was attached to the reportorial staff of the Chicago American.

At that time he became intensely interested in motion pictures and selected comedies as the end in which he should strive to make a name—and fortune. He packed the other shirt and tooth brush and departed for Los Angeles. Upon his arrival he became a member of the Sennett staff, serving his apprenticeship under none other than Sennett.

"The making of comedies carries with it a lot of grief," Cline said recently. "It is an arduous task to get new 'gags' and interesting situations. It is our aim to strive for 'something new,' which is like looking for the needle in the haystack. But with unlimited capital and time at our disposal, we are obtaining our objective, as 'One Week' shows.

"Audiences are extremely intelligent. They are almost unanimously opposed to mechanical 'gags' and the tried and proven true laugh getters. They are for the comedian and director who can give them something heretofore not shown. We are striving for this very thing and I believe that we have been successful."

"TRUMPET ISLAND"
A TOM TERRISS PRODUCTION
From the Story by GOUVERNEUR MORRIS

Intensely dramatic and abounding in spectacular scenes. The climax is reached in a honeymoon airplane flight into the center of a violent thunder storm, where the machine is wrecked. The fall of the shattered airplane, and its crash into a tree on Trumpet island, provide thrilling spectacles. There is a love story of rare charm, and the brave struggle of a man against poverty and then against the temptation which come with sudden wealth. Wild orgies in a metropolitan hotel are shown, followed by scenes on rugged and lonely Trumpet Island, to which Richard Bedell fled from vice. The shattered airplane brings Eve De Merincourt to the island.

DOINGS IN LOS ANGELES BRIEFLY TOLD

Production on the West Coast

BY J. C. JESSEN, 412 WEST SIXTH STREET

F. P.-LASKY

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week at the Lasky studio that Frank Urson, heretofore assistant to Cecil B. de Mille, is to become a full-fledged director for Paramount. Wallace Reid will be the first star to come under his direction, but the name of the picture has not yet been made public. The scenario is being prepared by William Parker. Mr Urson has been busy most of the week receiving congratulations from his fellow-workers at the studio.

A plan of alternating certain directors in their work at the Lasky plant has just been announced. Hereafter James Cruze and Joseph Henaberry will alternate with each other in the direction of certain pictures. When Mr. Cruze, for instance, is actually directing, Henaberry will be studying a story and preparing to follow Cruze with the next picture. It is believed that through this plan much waste of time will be eliminated.

"The Faith Healer" under the direction of George Melford has been completed. It is announced that Mr. Melford will start production at an early date on an original story by Hector Turnbull, the title of which is not yet named. Mary O'Conner will prepare the scenario. It is not yet known what stars will have the leading roles in the play.

Cecil B. de Mille is nearing the end of his special attraction, "Forbidden Fruit." It is an original story by Jeannie MacPherson.

BRUNTON

ACTUAL production work was started this week at the Brunton studios on Benjamin B. Hampton's feature, "The Killer," an adaptation of Stewart Edward White's novel. Jack Conway, former Hampton director, is cast in the title-role. E. Richard Shayer and Howard Hickman are the directors. Tod Sloan, famous jockey, has an important part in the picture.

Dustin Farnum has returned to the Brunton studios after a location trip to the big timber country near Fort Bragg.

Work has been completed on Bessie Barriscale's latest production, "The Broken Gate," adapted from the novel by Emerson Hough. Director Paul Scardon is now engaged in cutting and titling the picture.

A special preview of "The Money Changers" was given at the Brunton studio this week by Benjamin Hampton for Upton Sinclair, author of the novel from which the picture was adapted. Among those in attendance were Director Jack Conway, Claire Adams, Roy Stewart, Betty Bryce and Audrey Chapman. The negative will be shipped to New York this week.

The technical department of the Brunton studios has installed a blower system in the studio planing mill which collects all the sawdust produced by a dozen or more lathes, band saws and planning machines. The device is said to be a recent invention and elminiates the work of several men.

Employees of Universal's home office have inaugurated a "Bring Your Lunch" movement

UNIVERSAL

CARMEL MYERS this week began working on her third Universal feature, "The Orchid," under the direction of Marcel de Sano. It is based on a magazine story by Margaret C. Storrs. In the supporting cast are Irving Cummings, Pell Trenton, Lee Kohlman, Victory Bateman, George B. Williams and Alfred Fisher.

E. H. Goldstein, assistant to Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, was a visitor in Los Angeles this week, where he held numerous conferences with Isadore Bernstein, producing manager, and Irving Thalberg studio manager at Universal City. As a result of these sessions production at the big plant will be speeded up considerably, it is announced. New directors, additional stage space and more dressing rooms are to be provided.

Three new productions will be started at Universal within the next ten days. The first of these is, "Out of the Sunset," by George Rix, featuring Eva Novak. The other two will be the "Flip Flapper," to be directed by Rollin Sturgeon, and "White Youth," to be directed by Norman Dawn. Edith Roberts will play the stellar role in the last-named picture.

Elmo Lincoln is filming the final episode of "The Flaming Disk," produced for Universal by Robert F. Hill. Louise Lorraine is playing the leading feminine role.

Under the direction of William Watson a company of Universal players, including Robert Anderson and Joe Moore, left this week for La Jolla, where the opening scenes will be filmed for a five-reel picture called "The Hotel Hermit."

ASSO. PRODUCERS

MARIE PREVOST will share feminine stellar honors with Phyllis Haver it is said, in Mack Sennett's next release for Associated Producers. The title of the picture is "A Small Town Idol," with Ben Turpin as the idol. Miss Prevost will be seen in the role of a sophisticated motion picture star, who comes to the rescue of Ben Turpin when the latter seems down and out.

The Alan Dwan Company returned this week from location at Oxnard, where outdoor scenes were filmed for Mr. Dwan's first Associated Producers' production, "The Forbidden Thing." The picture will be completed within another week, it is announced. As soon as the picture has been cut and titled Mr. Dwan will leave for New York, taking the print with him.

1st NATIONAL

SOL LESSER, Gore Brothers and Dave Bershon returned this week from Bakersfield, where they attended the opening of the new California theatre in that town. It also marked the initial Western showing of Charles Ray's first independent production, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway." Mr. Lesser states that in his opinion the new playhouse is one of the finest in California. Mr. Lesser and Mr. Bershon made the trip to Bakersfield in an aeroplane.

Members of the Marshall Neilan Company will leave next week for Glacier Park, Montana, where the big outdoor scenes in "Pards" are to be filmed. According to announcement from the Neilan studio, Mr. Neilan himself will make the trip in an aeroplane. Before some 500 members of the Fleet Air attachment of the Pacific Fleet, Marshall Neilan this week presented a specially dedicated print of "Go and Get It," to this branch of the U. S. Navy. He did this in appreciation of the co-operation extended him by the Navy in the production of the picture.

King Vidor has just returned from a location hunt in the Santa Cruz mountains preparatory to the filming of Ralph Connor's novel of the Canadian foothills, "The Sky Pilot."

James Kirkwood now finishing an engagement with Alma Dwan in "The Forbidden Thing" is to play a leading role in "Pards," a Marshall Neilan production.

Henry Lehrman announces that his fourth First National comedy which is as yet unnamed will be completed this week. In the cast are Charlotte Dawn, Billy Richie and Al. Ray.

METRO

ORGANIZATION of the Metro Stock Company was announced this week. It is said to be one of the most notable of any stock company in the picture industry. Among those who have signed long-term contracts to appear in Metro productions are Edward Connelly, Edward Jobson, Edward Cecil, Wyndham Standing, Florence Turner, Cleo Madison and Lawrence Grant.

Wallace Beery has been engaged by Metro to play an important part in the French episode of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Mr. Beery will play the part of Lieut.-Col. Von Richthofen.

Cleo Madison has returned from a two-weeks' vacation in the high Sierras.

Viola Dana and the Metro Company engaged in filming the F. Scott Fitzgerald story, "The Offshore Pirate," are cruising the Pacific in quest of adventure as well as filming ocean scenes in her new production. Dallas Fitzgerald is directing.

Edward Connelly has returned to the Metro lot, after a short vacation in the mountains.

VITAGRAPH

TWO new features were started this week at the Vitagraph studios. The filming of "Black Beauty" was begun with human characters after the animal scenes were completed. The other picture is Earle Williams' next starring vehicle taken from the story, "Diamonds Adrift," by Frederick J. Jackson.

Antonio Moreno will finish his serial, "The Veiled Mystery," within another week.

INCE

FOLLOWING an extensive vacation and honeymoon subsequent to her marriage to Frank M. Dazey, well-known author, Agnes Christine Johnston, who won fame as the scenaroist of a number of Charles Ray and Douglas MacLean successes, returned this week to the Ince studios. Married last June on Long Island, Miss Johnston and Mr. Dazey spent several weeks honeymooning in the Catskills.

Shadow rehearsals on Douglas MacLean's latest picture, "One a Minute," were started at the Ince studios this week. Production on the new comedy is scheduled to begin about November 1. A new personality will be presented to the public in Madge Bellamy, the New York actress, who was recently

Two of the players who may be depended upon to make Pathe's new serial picture, "The Phantom Foe," interesting, Warner Oland and Juanita Hansen, both playing leading roles placed under contract by Mr. Ince.

Thomas H. Ince has been appointed by Mayor M. T. Snyder, of Los Angeles, to represent the film industry on a committee which is completing arrangements to welcome home the Southern California athletes who were victors in the recent Olympic Games in Belgian.

HERE AND THERE

MARGARITA DE LA MOTTE, the former B. B. Hampton star, is playing opposite Douglas Fairbanks in the comedian's newest subject, "The Curse of Capistrance."

Work has been completed on the fourth episode of Ruth Roland's serial, "The Avenging Arrow," and the filming of the fifth episode will begin immediately. W. J. Bowman is directing, and Eddie Hearn plays the male lead.

Members of the cast in support of Charles Hutchinson in "The Forbidden Door," were announced this week, and include Vera Sisson, Ruth Langston, Carl Stockdale, Robert Burns, Wally Carson and D. L. Mitsaras.

Wilfred Lucas well known as leading player and director, will play an important role in Bessie Barriscale's next picture, "The Living Child."

Production on Nell Shipman's newest picture, "The Girl from God's Country," was started this week. It is understood that the company will shortly go to Canada to film the big outdoor scenes in the play.

Buster Keaton's fourth two-reel comedy made under the Joseph M. Schenk's banner, has been titled, "The Back Yard." Mr. Keaton is supported by Virginia Fox.

GOLDWYN

REGINALD BARKER finished this week at the Goldwyn studio the taking of "Bunty Pulls the Strings;" Frank Lloyd is filming the last scenes for "Out of the Dark," E. Mason Hopper is on the last stretch of the Rupert Hughes' story, "Canavan," starring Tom Moore and Mason N. Litson has finished "Fans," the eighth of the Booth Tarkington Edgar series.

Several members of the cast in "The Concert," a Goldwyn picture, were announced this week. They are Myrtle Stedman, Lewis S. Stone, Mabel Julian Scott and Frances Hall.

"Bill" Russell as a Policeman

William Russell, the western star of William Fox, makes a distinct departure in his latest William Fox picture "The Challenge of the Law," in abandoning the role of the western ranch hero in which he has become universally popular. His latest production makes him an officer of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, but does not rob him of the rugged character and heroic mould which are so familiar to his work.

"The Challenge of the Law" is a strong, virile tale of the Canadian wilds in the days when fur smugglers plied their illegal trade. It is from the pen of E. Lloyd Sheldon, and Denison Clift made the scenario. The story moves from scene to scene with breathless suspense. It is crowded with dramatic situations and surprises which are free from mere theatrical effects.

The star is ably supported by Helen Ferguson. Some exceedingly impressive scenes have been obtained by Director Scott Dunlap.

Edith Stockton Loaned to Realart

Having recently completed filming "Through the Storm," the third Plympton-Epic Production in which she is featured, Edith Stockton made a hurried trip to Chicago to bring her parents on to New York, where she has decided to make her permanent home. Due to an inadvertent delay, Mr. Plympton's fourth picture has been postponed so that he was enabled to loan Miss Stockton to Realart, which had called on her to support Alice Brady in her current production.

Favorite Film Claims Rights to Serial

Ike Van Ronkel, of Favorite Players Film Corporation, the independent organization recently formed by Mr. Van Ronkel and Maurice Fleckels, with headquarters in Chicago, states that apparently there is some confusion in the minds of certain persons connected with the industry as to the ownership of the rights to the Harry Garson series of five big feature pictures, starring Clara Kimball Young, the first of which is "Hush."

"The facts are," said Mr. Van Ronkel, "that the Illinois and Indiana rights to these features are the absolute property of Favorite Players Film Corporation, and no other exchange or individuals has any right to distribute or release the pictures in the two states."

Talmadge Sisters Go to Spain

Norma, Constance and Natalie Talmadge, their mother, Mrs. Fred Talmadge, and Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Talmadge companies, after having been in Paris for two weeks at the Hotel Crillon, left for Italy. Before journying to Rome, they spent a few days at Deauville, attending the horse races daily.

The Talmadge family is most enthusiastic about their initial trip abroad, as a letter from Norma to her personal representative, Beulah Livingstone, implies: "We are certainly coming back next year and are now busy doing all we can entreating Peg (Mrs. Talmadge) not to leave us flat. She is just crazy to live over here. The other day we went to Malmaison and visited the Chateau with its interesting souvenirs of Napoleon. Ever since, I have been obsessed with the idea of playing 'Josephine' in a picture. Constance wanted to knock the guide down and 'snitch' a lock of Napoleon's hair, to say nothing about one of his magnificent old watches.

"Another day we had a curious experience when we went to Fontainbleau. We saw people running in and out of the Palace dressed in costumes of the First Empire, and we soon discovered it was a French Motion Picture Company, taking exteriors. Some of the players recognized us and were good enough to let us take pictures of them, some of which snap shots I will bring back with me."

Norma will hardly touch American soil before she will have to depart for the Bahama Islands for her next picture.

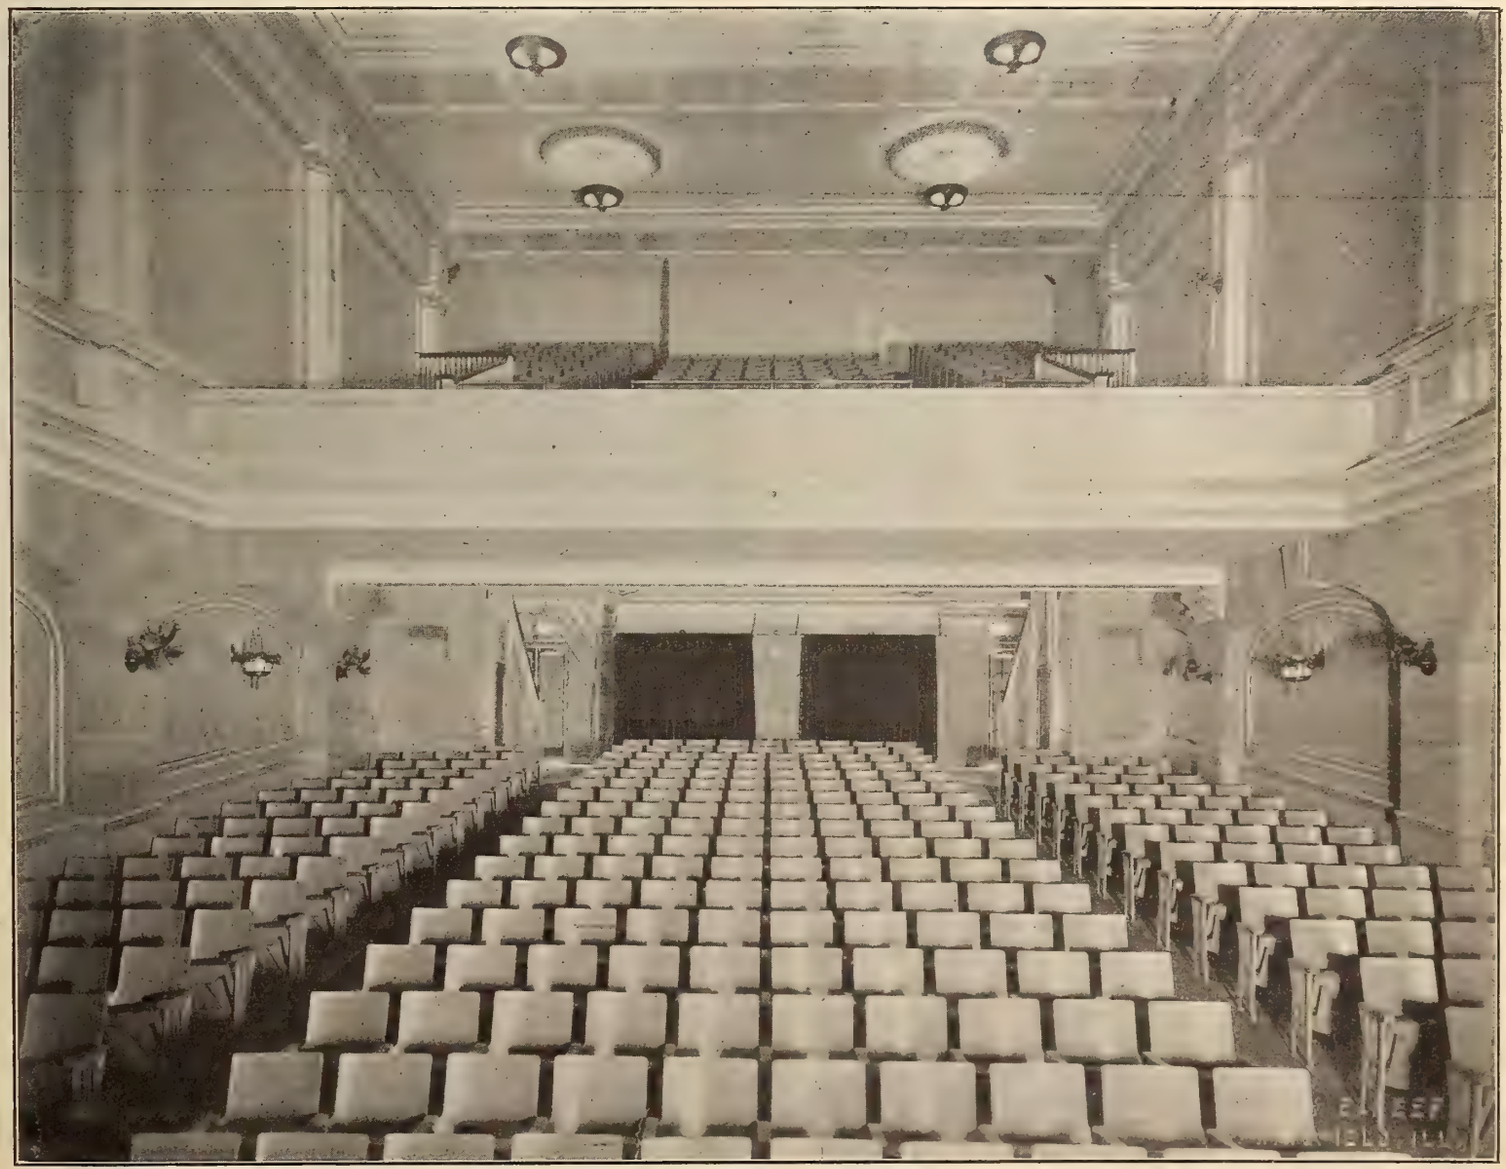
Loper's 600-Seat Lyric Opens in Springfield, Ill.

Nothing Spared to Make $150,000 House Best in Community

THE long heralded new motion picture theatre for Springfield, Illinois, has materialized. H. T. Loper, veteran exhibitor of that city, and owner of the Kimbark theatre, Chicago, opened his new $150,000 Lyric photoplay house on Sunday, August 1. The new theatre occupies the site of the old Vaudette, which was vacated last February after having served the public for fourteen years.

Loper promised Springfield a beautiful picture palace. He has given more than was expected. The new Lyric certainly is the last word in beauty and refinement. The outside is ivory terra cotta. The architecture is in modern French style, and is typically theatrical. A beautiful marquis hangs over the impressive entrance. French doors admit the patron.



The interior is also in modern French style. The decorations are ivory, gold and mulberry velour. Heavy carpets and draperies match the decorative scheme, giving an impression of quietness and refinement. The lighting system is the modern x-ray type of reflected indirect lighting units. The wall panels are lighted with silk-lined hanging baskets, festooned with flowers.

A ten thousand dollar ventilating system keeps the theatre always filled with purest fresh air. The air is washed, cooled and dried and distributed throughout the theatre at the rate of 15,000 cubic feet per minute.

The seats in the new Lyric are grey leather. The same style is used in the balcony as is installed downstairs. The balcony is finished in the same beauty and luxury as the main floor. Each seat is wide and roomy and the rows are placed far apart so that persons coming in and going out will experience no difficulty.

No expense was spared to make the Lyric the prettiest theatre that can be found anywhere. It would be safe to say that there is not a house of its size in Illinois which can compare with it in any respect. The new Lyric seats 600, two-thirds on the main floor and the remainder in the fine balcony.

The screen is placed in a beautiful paneled square, and seems to be a part of

A clean-cut, well arranged theatre—the Lyric in Springfield, Illinois. If the projection room had been inserted in the forepart of the balcony instead of under the eaves this theatre would have passed 100 per cent

No Glare from Lights Over Music Stands in Blue Mouse

Illumination for Orchestra Supplied by Overhead Lighting

THE Blue Mouse theatre, Minneapolis' most recent contribution to houses of the silent drama, will formally open on August 28. Representing a total expenditure of $250,000, it is said to be the most expensive theatre, with a fifty-foot frontage, ever constructed. It has been in course of construction for over a year.

The theatre will be under the personal supervision of Oliver A. Rowe and William Sobleman, two of the oldest showmen in the Twin Cities. Mr. Rowe and Mr. Sobleman have been partners for years. Opening the Palace theatre on Cedar street in St. Paul in 1908, they were later connected with the Alhambra theatre in that city and then built the Blue Mouse theatre in St. Paul.

The Blue Mouse theatre presents the most attractive appearance of any theatre in Minneapolis, with its front composed entirely of white marble. It is the only downtown theatre with its lobby opening directly on the street.

The finest grade Minnesota marble has been used throughout the building. The foyer is tiled, with marble walls and blue and white drapes. Two wide marble stairways lead to the balcony.

Wide, comfortable seats have been provided, so arranged that from any part of the house eye strain and difficulty in seeing the pictures is entirely done away with. Wide aisles with a certain lighting arrangement will enable the patrons to easily find their seats at all times. The seating capacity of the Blue Mouse is 1,750.

Of fireproof construction, the Blue Mouse is said to combine every modern feature which looks to the safety and comfort of the audience and the perfect projection of motion pictures. Specially made mats have been laid on the floors, which will deaden all footfalls.

The architecture of the Blue Mouse is of the French Renaissance style. Interior decorations are of polychrome and blue. Draperies, lighting fixtures and all other interior decorative effects were designed especially for the Blue Mouse under the personal direction of Mr. Rowe and Mr. Sobleman.

Rapp and Rapp of Chicago were the architects for the Blue Mouse. This firm also has charge of the construction of the $1,500,000 New Capitol theatre in St. Paul, which is now nearing completion.

One of the extraordinary features of the Blue Mouse, introduced for the first time in the Northwest, is the unique lighting effects for the orchestra. A battery of powerful lights, located in a loft directly over the orchestra pit, will supply the illumination usually given by lights attached to the musicians' music stands. The arrangement of these lights will make possible the use of various color effects adapted to the plot of the picture being shown.

The Blue Mouse theatre, Minneapolis, has a seating capacity of 1750

In addition to the orchestra, a Kilgren pipe organ of the latest model has been installed at a cost of $11,000. The use of xylophone, drums and other orchestra traps is made possible through attachments manufactured by the Deagan Company of Chicago. The organist may use these effects merely by pressing certain keys in the console.

Ventilation	Typhoon

Four immense fans, located in the loft above the audience, will provide ventilation. These fans will change the air every two minutes.

The policy of the Blue Mouse will be to show only first run pictures, opening on Saturday of each week. The daily opening will be at 10 a. m. The admission will be twenty-five cents.

This Theatre Is to Be Doubled in Size Without Interruption to Business

Seating Capacity of Loew's New Rochelle Theatre Increased by Novel Construction

A NOVEL engineering feat is being performed in connection with the remodeling of the Loew motion picture theatre in New Rochelle, N. Y., in that the structure is being practically doubled in size and without interruption in performances. Since the alterations were commenced a short time ago, performances have continued regularly and yet have not interfered in any way with the new construction work.

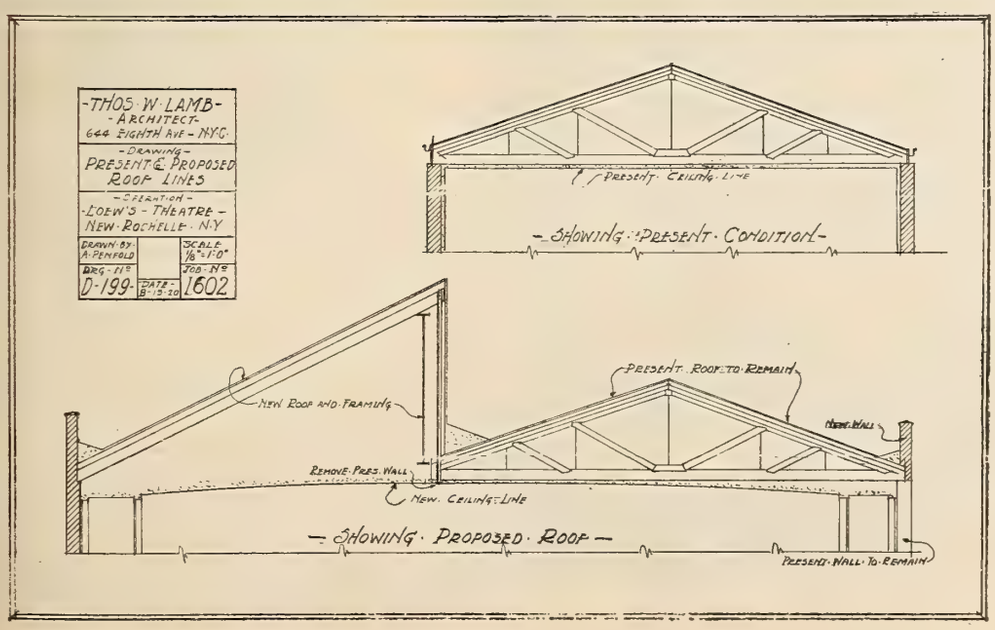
Briefly, a new house is being built around the present structure. How long it will be possible to continue operations without stopping the shows is unknown at this time, but it is predicted that only a few performances will be lost.

The seating capacity of the theatre at this time is 1,150. When reconstructed it will seat about 2,800, one indication of the magnitude of the alteration. The present house occupies a plot 50 feet by 200 feet. To this will be added 40 additional feet in width and the theatre will also be moved near the street.

The steel has been designed so that a truss is to run at the roof line outside of the present theatre wall. When the new portion is completed, this truss will be erected and framing carried over it to pick up the ends of the present roof trusses. The new roof will then be finished and at this stage the wall now separating the old from the new parts will be torn down, leaving an entirely closed building.

All of this work is to be done without shoring whatsoever, which in itself is declared to be an interesting engineering feat. A balcony will then be speedily installed and the new theatre will be ready.

The fact that the theatre is being made larger made it possible to carry out the work as it is being done. New brick walls were erected besides the present one and preparations made for the installation of the steel girders. A new real wall was erected in a slot cut through building.



Several novel features are planned for the new house by Thomas W. Lamb, the architect. All modern conveniences will be provided, including a smoking room and a rest room for women. A mezzanine promenade with an open well will be a feature and there will be provided an emergency room also. From the lobby a marble stairway will lead to the mezzanine, making an easy approach to the balcony.

The interior will be enriched and softened by draperies of the Rose Du Barry Velour. Wall coverings will be of old rose color, and the carpets will be of red, making a most harmonious blending. The chairs will be of red mahogany, offset by a dull green leather upholstering.

The lighting is to be soft, indirect at the sounding board, with a series of elaborate chandeliers carried back on the main ceiling. All are to be three colors on dimmers so that any color effect desired may be obtained.

The design of the exterior will be a combination of Italian Renaissance and the Adam style of architecture. Careful study of the problem has inspired selected bits from the best examples of the works of Robert and James Adams along with the products of Italian masters.

The interior of the theatre, so far as seating arrangement is concerned, will not be changed to any material extent with the exception that more chairs will be added. The increased seating capacity, to a large degree, will come as the result of the construction of a balcony.

The Barcli Theatre, Schenectady, N. Y.

WITHIN the next few weeks a new motion picture theatre will be opened in Schenectady which will be unique in at least one respect, in that it will take advantage of its location and open on two streets. With the main entrance on Barrett street and its exits on Clinton street, the house will be named the "Barcli," using the first syllable of each word in acquiring its name. The house is being erected by Albert Van Voast and will be managed by John J. Walker, an experienced man in the business, and who was at one time connected with the Lincoln theatre in the Electric City.

The house, now in course of construction, is located in the business center of the city and when completed will prove a handsome addition to the houses in Schenectady. The house will accommodate about 1,200 patrons. The balcony will have a seating capacity in the neighborhood of 400. The house is of brick and concrete.

There will be both an organ and orchestra, although the size of the latter is yet to be determined upon. It is expected that the house will be opened for business about November 1.

The exits on Clinton street are so arranged that the house can be emptied in record breaking time and there will never be any jams between audiences about to enter the theatre and those who are leaving. A runway extends from the balcony along the sides of the house, permitting those occupying seats in the balcony to reach the exits without the necessity of any stairs. Particular attention is being paid to the ventilation. The heating will be by steam, with both the direct as well as the indirect systems employed.

Coke to Be Used for Heating

Winter will hold no terrors for the Princess theatre managers this year, according to one of the proprietors, Mr. Yiannias. He stated that this season the theatre will be heated with coke—a mixture of the Indianapolis and Milwaukee gasless coke. He is using coke because tests show that it will not smoke or discolor the interior of the theatre, and in addition will give a uniform heat all over the theatre.

Mr. Yiannias did not procure his fuel until he had satisfied himself that it would do little or no damage to the interior of the Princess, which was redecorated just a few months ago. He is positive that the above-mentioned coke will give him the greatest satisfaction.

With the beginning of damp weather the furnace will be started, so as to prevent even the slightest suspicion of dampness in the theatre.

Fan Installed Behind Box

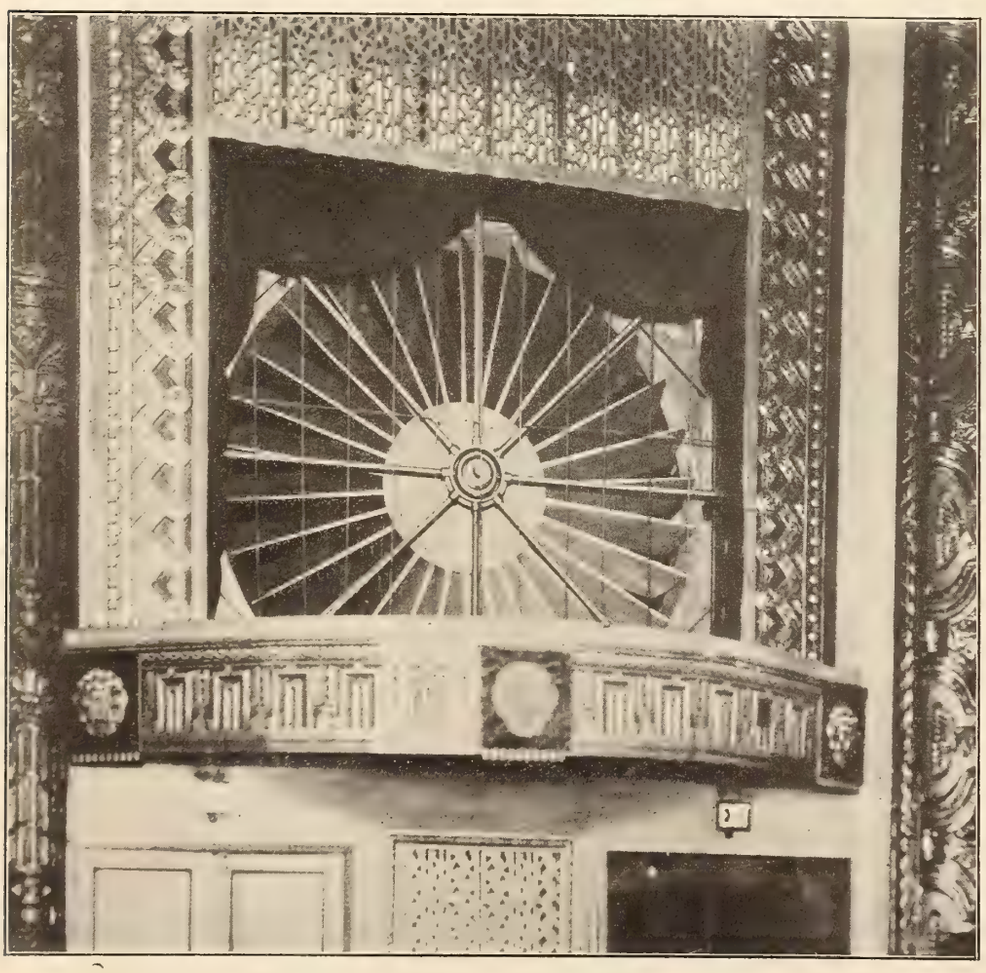
OWING to the variation in the construction of theatres, it is not always possible to install the Cooling and Ventilating System on the roof of a theatre, which is the usual method employed.

Sometimes it becomes necessary to make the installation in the attic space, or perhaps in a room or on a specially constructed platform in back of the stage.

In other instances, installations have been made on the outside walls of buildings, the main purpose at all times being to place the apparatus where it is possible to obtain good, fresh, clean air, and force it into a theatre direct without the additional expense of ducts, where it passes over the audience both in the orchestra and balconies, in huge volumes at low velocity, thus doing away with any possibility of draughts.

Perhaps one of the most unusual of the many hundreds of Typhoon installations is the one in the Pantheon theatre, Chicago. This house was built some two years ago, under plans designed by Mr. Walter W. Ahlschlager, the well known Chicago architect, and in providing for the cooling, ventilation and heating of this theatre, the Typhoon System was installed throughout.

The cooling and ventilating apparatus consists of four Typhoon fans in sizes ranging from 8 to 12 feet in diameter.



For heating in winter, two 8 ft. twin fans are used in conjunction with heating stacks, the other outfits being closed down during the colder months.

In the accompanying reproduction, it may be seen that the 12 ft. Typhoon fan used for cooling purposes in connection with the other units mentioned above is installed in a box at the left of the stage, and while being an unusual installation, is at the same time a very interesting one, as it is in full view of the entire audience.

To add to the novelty of this particular installation, the management has painted this large Typhoon in gold, making a beautiful effect when in operation.

La Jolla Theatre Newly Equipped

The Garden theatre at La Jolla, Cal., has recently been thoroughly renovated and equipped with new features. The entire interior has been re-decorated and new draperies have been hung. A new gold fibre curtain has been installed, and the operating room has been rewired and equipped with two Powers 6-A machines, using Mazda lights. The Garden has a seating capacity of 450, and at present is showing pictures on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights. Its balcony seats are 28 cents and the first floor 33 cents, with a special children's rate of 17 cents. Paramount, Goldwyn and First National pictures are being shown. Charles Welstead, formerly with the Ford automobile people in Detroit, is the proprietor and manager. W. D. Dodge is the operator.

Dubuque Strand Is Well Lighted

THE Strand theatre, located at Twelfth and Main streets, has, perhaps, the most complete and up-to-the-minute lighting system of any motion picture theatre in the city. The house is lighted by means of the indirect system.

The lighting of the theatre proper comes from eight huge baskets suspended from the ceiling. For general or dim lighting, during the showing of a picture, the theatre is illuminated by seven 100-watt lamps and for house lighting the four 200-watt lamps in the center basket and the seven 200-watt lamps in the remaining baskets furnish sufficient light.

The lighing color scheme of the Strand is a beautiful orange-yellow tone obtained by the blending of yellow, ruby and blue plates. This color harmonizes with the decorations of the theatre. The Strand, unlike the ordinary theatre, has a unique side lighting system, due to the fact that the building was formerly a church. A ledge protuding about eight inches along the walls marks the place where the main floor of the church used to be and on that ledge, enclosed in boxes, are the lights. The effect is most pleasing and completely takes away the flat appearance of the walls that would otherwise exist.

The inner lobby of the Strand is also lighted by means of the indirect system, but in the first lobby the drop lights are still used. It is the intention of the manager, however, to change them in the near future.

For the fall season, Mr. Burlingame, the manager of the theatre, has had the lobbies decorated with varied colored leaves and flowers of autumn. He has selected just the color tones that harmonize perfectly with the mahogany and white decorations. The Strand is the only theatre in Dubuque to go in for the decoration of its lobbies to a great extent and the fact that the theatre always presents an artistic appearance as well as good pictures, goes far towards establishing the Strand as Dubuque's premier theatre.

Grounds in Charge of Lobby Display

In order to meet the growing demands for artistic lobby display frames and give the best possible service to exhibitors, the Consolidated Portrait & Frame Company of Chicago has completely reorganized its lobby display department, which hereafter will be in personal charge of Preston W. Grounds.

"Theatre owners every day are realizing more and more the box office value of an attractive lobby" says Mr. Grounds "and to this end are installing high-class display frames and other accessories which will add to the beauty of their house.

"The Consolidated Portrait & Frame Company now is prepared to furnish frames both for easels and wall space which will meet the demands of the most exacting manager and in order to insure prompt delivery, has greatly increased both the space given to this department in the plant and the personnel of the department.

THE THREE BIG REASONS

For the Popularity of NEWMAN METAL FRAMES In Non-Polish Finishes

1. Beauty—Our frames harmonize with the very finest furnishings. Elaborate period styles can be had, but the less ornate numbers are preferred by most houses. We are making a specialty of artificially weathered finishes which do not require polishing. Any desired finish can be accurately matched.

2. Utility—They can be used to display posters, photos, cards, etc., in the lobby or on the sidewalk. We build our frames in units to occupy every bit of wall space, or furnish them rounded to fit corners. Racks and easels can also be secured.

3. Permanence—Atmospheric changes have positively no effect on our metal frames. Exposure to rain signs the death-warrant of a wooden frame; a can of bronze paint won't bring it back to life. But Newman Frames are instantly rejuvenated with the aid of a soft cloth.

To Be Run as a Community House

THE Grand theatre of Lincoln, Illinois, which has been idle for some time, was taken over recently by Matthew Reinhardt and completely remodelled with new and up-to-date equipment. The interior of the theatre has been redecorated and a new heating plant installed.

Main floor layout of Grand theatre

Balcony floor plan of Lincoln Grand

A fireproof projection room has been added and equipped with two new Simplex projectors and a spot light together with a Hertner transverter.

A portico has been added to the front of the building with an electric sign displaying the name of the theatre. The theatre is located in the center of Lincoln, covering a lot 60x110 feet, and has a seating capacity of about 650 persons.

From late reports it is understood that the theatre has been again purchased by the Lincoln Amusement Company, who will operate the theatre as a community house under the managership of L. J. Wilkins.

HIGHEST QUALITY COATED FABRICS

Do You Know Why So Many of America's Theatres are Being Equipped with Duratex Better Upholstery?

Duratex Wears Longer, Looks Better and Gives Greater Seating Comfort

SHREWD theatrical managers and proprietors specify Duratex Better Upholstery because:

Duratex will outwear two ordinary upholsterings. And that alone means a tremendous saving figured over a period of years:

Duratex is artistic and retains its beauty permanently. Duratex is made in a variety of rich colors and positively cannot be told from the finest grained leather:

Duratex is soft, smooth, restful and never becomes sticky. It will not soil the daintiest of clothing.

These unequaled advantages together with the fact that Duratex is absolutely water-proof, therefore washable and sanitary, make it a decided choice for theatrical use.

Let us estimate your Duratex needs. We will gladly send samples and figure cost of equipment for any theatre.

the architectural idea. The orchestra has ample room and is arranged in the manner approved by the large metropolitan houses.

The projection room is in the balcony. Plenty of room is also a feature here. Operators are provided with every comfort and convenience. The manager's office is located under the balcony and is reached by a private stairway. It is large enough to allow a private projection room, where all pictures will be shown before they are booked.

Another good-sized room gives space for paper, advertising material and accessories.

The new Lyric is absolutely fireproof. The theatre is so arranged that the exits will permit all occupants to leave in a few seconds. There are exits in front and in the back of the house, which opens on three sides. All of the strict fire laws were lived up to—and more—in the building of the Lyric.

The new Lyric has the distinction of being the first theatre in Springfield that was built solely for motion pictures. All of the others now operating were either built for vaudeville or were intended for some other business before being transformed into photoplay houses. The location of the Lyric is on Fifth street, near Monroe, a location that could scarcely be improved. It is said that more people pass Fifth and Monroe than any other corner in the state, excepting the city of Chicago.

Plan and perspective views of Five Points theatre, Cleveland, Ohio

Mr. Loper has in the Lyric the realization of a life dream. When the old Lyric was opened across the street some thirteen years ago as a five-cent theatre, Mr. Loper had visions some day of owning a building built solely for pictures, and to embrace everything in the way of comfort and beauty that could be obtained at any price.

Harry Loper, son of the owner, will be the Lyric manager. Herbert Walters is his assistant. Geo. Killius is the musical director. G. L. Pehlman is publicity manager. Bernard Wilson and Al Attora are the chief operators.

Mr. Loper has received the praise of the press and public in his new venture and its success is already assured. Visitors to this city will remember with pleasure the beautiful theatre at Fifth and Monroe.

Helmle and Helmle were the Lyric architects. They are known far and wide as the designers of the Franklin Life Building, one of the show spots of Springfield.

Operating Advantages of GE Compensares

1. Steady strong arc.
2. Easily operates two arcs at the same time for change-over.
3. Quiet arc strike and quick settle-down.
4. Self regulating arc voltage.
5. Current stays at set value.
6. Current easily raised and lowered.
7. Cannot be damaged by short circuit.
8. Fading made easy.
9. Not affected by changes in current conditions.
10. Quiet in operation.

Protect Your Pictures Against Variations in Supply Voltage

Variations in voltage, so frequent on the average commercial lighting circuit, are a decided handicap to the motion picture exhibitor who prides himself on the flickerless, even illumination of his screen.

With a GE compensarc, normal fluctuations in supply voltage are so taken care of that steady projection is assured.

The GE motor generator compensarc has a horizontal shaft which gives freedom from vibration and is consequently silent in operation.

Compensarcs are safe, easy to operate, efficient, economical and reliable—GE offices or distributors everywhere for prompt deliveries and service

Practical Electricity—XXVIII
Study Lessons for the Projectionist

The D. C. Motor

In the previous lesson the action of commutation was described and the reason for sparking at the brushes explained as due to a distortion of the magnetic field.

The effect of this distortion can be somewhat eliminated by a shifting of the brushes back against the direction of rotation of the armature, however, this will not take care of conditions for all changes of load. Thus in order that the field may be maintained more uniform for all differences of load the use of the interpole has been introduced. This practice consists of including small field coils placed between the main field coils, with windings connected in series with the armature. The motor windings showing the interpole connections are shown by Fig. 92. The object of the interpoles is to assist in the reversal of the current in the coils connected to the segments under the brushes. Since these coils are connected in series with the armature the current passing through them is dependent on the load placed on the machine, so that a commutating field is produced which adjusts itself automatically for a change of load.

One of the necessities for good commutation is the use of the proper kind of brushes. For low voltage machines it is possible to use metallic brushes with satisfactory results. However, with a voltage of 110 volts and greater it is best to use carbon brushes, since this type of brush has a high contact resistance which tends to improve commutation. Due to the high resistance of the carbon brush the current that will flow as a certain segment leaves the brush is throttled and the greater amount of current will flow through the segment having a large contact area with the brush. Thus at the time of breaking contact between the segment and the brush the current flow has been reduced such that there is very little sparking, since there is a very small change in current in the connected coil.

The carbon brush has the advantage of wearing much smoother and since it is self lubricating produces a better surface on the face of the commutator. Brushes, except in cases where the direction of rotation is to be changed frequently, are set at an angle. The brushes are supported in individual holder and the pressure on the commutator made adjustable by means of a spring. Provision is also made so that the current is conducted to the brush by means of a rigidly attached lead instead of through the spring and brush holder.

The separate brushes and brush holders are mounted on a brush holder arm, the number and size of brushes depending on the amount of current to be conducted. Several small brushes are used to make up each set in order that one brush may be removed for adjustment or replacement without necessitating the shutting down of the machine. Also should there be any unevenness of wear to the commutator, the separate brushes will adjust themselves to this wear, while one broad brush would make poor contact and cause bad sparking.

The torque developed by a motor is expressed by the following equation, which states that the force on a conductor carrying current in a magnetic field is proportional to the current and the magnetic field.

$T = \text{a constant} \times \phi \times I_a$ where T is the torque in pounds at 1 foot radius ϕ is the flux per pole of the motor, and I_a is the armature current. The constant mentioned above depends upon the construction of the machine.

Power of a motor—Power is defined as the rate at which work is done, or it may be considered as the result of the work divided by the time in which it is accomplished.

Work may be considered as the overcoming of resistance through a certain distance, or is the product of the force times the distance through which it acts.

The unit of work is the foot-pound, which is, that work required to move a weight of one pound through a distance of one foot.

The unit of power is the horse-power and is equal to 33,000 foot pounds of work per minute.

Horse power is therefore expressed by the formula

Thus the mechanical output of a motor is dependent upon the torque and the spread at which the motor is operating, and may be expressed:

The efficiency of a motor is the quotient of the output divided by the input and is given by the equation

$$\text{Efficiency} = \frac{\text{H. P. output} \times 746}{\text{Watts input}}$$

Although the direction of rotation of a D. C. motor can be changed by reversing the direction of the current flow in either the armature or the field, the most common practice is to reverse the armature current, which may be done by means of a double throw switch as shown by Fig. 93.

The losses present in an electrical machine consist of the mechanical, iron and copper losses. The mechanical loss is that necessary to overcome the friction of the bearings and brushes, and also the resistance of windage or air friction. For a given machine these losses increase with the speed but at constant speed are practically constant regardless of the load.

The hysteresis and eddy current losses are known as the iron losses of the machine. The hysteresis loss is that due to the reversal of magneticism of the small particles of the iron as the armature revolves from one pole to the next. The eddy current loss is that due to local magnetic circuits set up within the armature itself and which are not useful in increasing the torque of the machine.

The copper loss is that required to overcome the voltage drop in the armature, which is required to cause the armature current to flow. This copper loss occurs in the form of heat and in order that excess heating will not take place it is necessary to so design the armature that a current of air will circulate around the armature windings.

Dear Sirs:

Notwithstanding unusual conditions the projection at the premier presentation of Babe Ruth in "Headin Home" at Madison Square Garden, was perfect in every detail.

Madison Square Garden is over three hundred feet long and the screen used 26 x 37 ft. but the projection was excellent. The services rendered by your company were highly satisfactory and I shall be glad to use Power's Projectors whenever the opportunity presents itself.

Very truly yours,

A History of Stereoscopic Projection and Methods used to Solve the Problem

A Reprint of a Paper by C. F. Jenkins Delivered Before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers

STEREOSCOPIC motion pictures, that is, motion pictures projected in such manner that the optence sees them in true simulation of all the wonderful depth, perspective and solidity of the real scene itself, has been the problem of photographers since Daguerre made his first twin "tintypes." Its practical solution has engaged the attention of the most brilliant minds, but remains unattained. By practical method I mean commercially useful, or profitable perhaps I should say. And this probably means sterescopic vision without eye aids. It seems to be a much more difficult task than motion pictures in natural color.

Now that motion pictures have attained world-wide acceptance, the large financial return possible on the introduction of any new thing the public approves, warrants a correspondingly large appropriation for investigation and experimentation. For this reason it is believed that this problem will be taken up by motion-picture engineers sooner or later with sufficient financial backing to insure that persistent investigation which most nearly guarantees success.

It is likely, therefore, that a report of experiments made by the writer, covering a period of years, some of them original and some of them an effort to carry the work of others nearer the goal, may be worth recording.

Doubtless it will be conceded that stereoscopic picture projection will never be publicly acceptable, and therefore, profitable, uptil they are attained without requiring each individual of the audience to hold some sort of a device before his eyes. Better yet, the pictures should appear stereoscopically whether viewed with one or with two eyes.

Several different methods have been employed in attacking the problem. All those I shall describe in detail produce stereoscope motion pictures on the screen; and the results of some of the methods are really beautiful, and in some scenes, as, for example, looking at a forest across a wooded ravine, a true impression is obtained, which cannot be secured in any other way, and is very striking.

Perhaps one of the simplest methods, though not the best as to results, consists in projecting the separate picture frames of a film alternately through red and through green tinters, alternate frames having been made through right eye and left eye camera lenses, that is, left eye frames occur between right eye frames throughout the length of the film. The red and green of both the filters and tinters must be complimentary and the composite screen picture must be viewed through corresponding red and green filters. These color filters may conveniently be glass or gelatine, and supported in spectacle frames, for example, although in 1898 a circular paper fan was used with two openings therein through which the eyes looked at the screen picture, these being covered with colored gelatine. The cost of these fans was met by selling the advertising space thereon to a local merchant. These color filters before the eyes select the view for each eye, that is, they permit the right eye seeing only the right eye picture and the left eye seeing only the left eye picture, and a stereoscopic picture is the result. The picture is seen in stereoscopic relief, but only in monochrome, not in colors, as one might at first suppose. Both the filters and tinters may be any two tints; the right shades of red and green, red and blue, blue and yellow, or any others that are complimentary; that is, any two which laid over each other are no longer transparent.

yzers before the eyes, the right eye being in crossed relation to the left eye analyzer. This method has the same two objections as the first mentioned method, namely, (1) a 75 per cent. loss of light, and (2) requiring a viewing device.

A third method secures a 100 per cent. efficiency of light on the screen, but still has the objection of a viewing device. This consists of an opera glass through which the screen picture is viewed and having therein a reciprocating shutter, electrically actuated, to cut off the view of first one eye and then the other in synchronism with the alternate projection of the right eye and the left eye picture frames. This synchronism is obtained by electrically connecting the opera glass of each observer with a commutator on the sprocket shaft of the projecting machine. The pictures obtained are really very fine, especially if selected to bring out most effectively the striking value of plasticity and perspective.

Questions and Answers

16. Give explanation of motor generator sets and their efficiency.

Motor generators are either D.C. or A.C. motors connected mechanically directly to a D.C. generator. The efficiency of a motor generator set is about 70% yet a great saving is obtained by their use due to the fact that a rheostat wastes from 35% to 50% of the current in heat. A motor generator set also does away with the excessive heat sent out by rheostats.

17. What should be used in place of fuses?

Link fuses and not cartridge fuses should be used in a booth.

18. Explain why carbons burn. Which carbon is positive wire connected to?

Heat is generated by the passage of current through the carbon electrodes and the carbon is volatilized by this heat. The positive wire should be connnected to the top carbon.

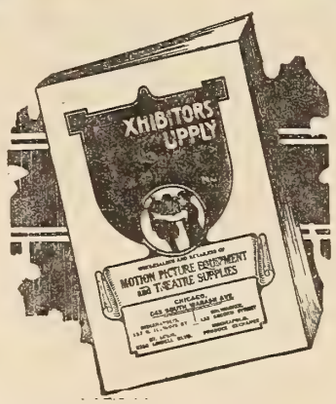
19. Give the lateral and longitudinal position that carbons should be set in, and why.

Most of the light from an art is emitted by the crater of the positive carbon and in order to obtain the most light the crater must be formed in such manner that it will face the center of the condenser. Various settings have been tried and there is none which can be used as a standard in every case.

Different settings should be tried out by the projectionist until that setting is found which produces the best results.

20. How many volts drop across A.D.C. arc? (a) How many volts drop across an A.C. arc? (b) Why the difference?

The drop across a D. C. arc is between 45 and 80 volts.



The drop across an A.C. arc is between 35 and 50 volts.

This difference is due to the fact that an A.C. arc cannot be drawn out like a D.C. arc because of the cooling effect of an alternating current. An A.C. arc can be drawn out and broken much easier than a D.C. arc.

21. If the illumination of a given size picture calls for example: 30 Amperes and you know the voltage to be 110 volts D.C., set forth the equation necessary to find the ohmic resistance of the rheostat needed, set forth the equation for similar conditions on A.C.

A D.C. arc drawing 30 amps. required about 52 volts drop, which means there must be 58 volts drop in the rheostat. From Ohm's law the resistance necessary to cause a drop of 58 volts when 30 amperes are flowing, is approximately 2 ohms.

For an A. C. circuit drawing 30 amps the drop is about 40 volts, requiring a rheostat of 1.3 ohms resistance.

The instances noted below go to show the speed with which news items must be covered and the difficulties encountered in order that the news film may be obtained.

The recent Wall Street explosion, which took place at 12.01 p. m. on Thursday, Sept. 16, was reported at the Pathe News office at 12.03. At 12.05 two cameramen were on the way to the scene of the accident with complete equipment and the incident was covered from all angles. The first negatives of the scene were received at the laboratory by special messenger at 2 o'clock, the camera men remaining on the job for further shots, and by six o'clock that evening 30 prints were on their way to the New York theatres to be thrown on the screen that evening. Also the same night several hundred copies were sent to the surrounding cities, so that twenty-four hours after the event occurred it was being shown on the screen in Boston, Philadelphia, and Washington.

During the Olympic games, cameraman Ercole was the only man to make a flight over the games for the purpose of taking news reels, and while in the air dropped leaflets extending greetings of the Pathe News to King Albert and the Belgian people. Ercole obtained a remarkable panorama of the stadium crowded with people who had gathered to watch the games.

During the Mexican revolution, cameraman Aultman was sent to Mexico City when it developed that trouble might break out at any minute. When General Obregon entered the city with the victorious Revolutionary troops, Aultman was the only cameraman on the ground, and obtained some wonderful photographs of the entry of the troops into Mexico City. Aultman was beset by adherents of the Carranza faction and had great difficulty in getting his film out. He was finally obliged to make a special trip to El Paso in order to get the film off in safety.

Synopsis of Paper on Studio

The latest addition to the list of papers to be presented at the forthcoming convention of the S. M. P. E. is one by Mr. J. R. Manheimer on the subject of the Power Equipment of the New Famous Players Studio at Long Island City. A synopsis of the paper follows:

1. POWER PLANT
   - a. Description of high tension central station incoming service lines.
   - b. Description of 7600 volt motor generator installation.
   - c. High and low tension switchboard control.
   - d. Transformer equipment for general lighting and power.
   - e. Details of the flexibility of design and provision for expansion.
2. HIGH CAPACITY FEEDER SYSTEM FOR DIRECT CURRENT STUDIO EQUIPMENT
   - a. Description and photographs of car bus bar feeders.
   - b. Reasons and advantages of this type of construction as compared to conventional cable and conduit system.
   - c. Comparative costs of various types of feeder systems for studios.
3. STUDIO SWITCHBOARDS AND PLUGGING BOX EQUIPMENT
   - a. Description and photographs of automatic remote control switchboards.
   - b. Description of new Monitor control station for remote control system.
   - c. Description, advantages and criticisms of Famous Players-Lasky overhead runway system and monorail system for surplus portable cables and "top lights."
   - d. Description and advantages and criticisms of the Fox Film Corporation's floor and wall system.
   - e. Description of systems in two other large projected studios in the East.
4. DESCRIPTION OF AUTOMATIC TELEPHONE SYSTEMS EMPLOYED
5. DESCRIPTION OF FIRE ALARM SYSTEMS
6. SIGNAL SYSTEM FOR LOCATING PRINCIPALS ABOUT THE PLANT, ETC.
7. LABORATORIES
   - a. Motor generators for printing lamps and cartoon cameras.
   - b. Description of Electrical Distribution System.
   - c. Notes on exhaust system for punchings, etc.

The First Annual Conference on Music and Motion Pictures

Advance Notice in Last Issue Brings International Response—Foremost Authorities Enthusiastic Over Idea

SOMEBODY had to send out the call for the Musical-Motion Picture Conference. The NEWS felt that there was a distinct need for a move which would attempt to bring together the best new ideas in picture-music and music-picture work—to work out the growing problems, establish plans for standardizing and equalizing effects; for settling national musical questions, such as the tax; for discussing the means of booking musical features, the kind, cost, etc.

The NEWS sensed the need for the Conference, realized that comebody who was more or less disinterested in any one phase of the newly organized industry of picture-music should be sponsor, and felt that whatever effort and expense were necessary in launching would be hard to place elsewhere—

So the NEWS issued the call.

Was the country ready for such a get-together meeting?

Did the industry feel that the NEWS had rightly analyzed the situation?

Was there sufficient matter of moment to warrant the calling together of the important managers, conductors, producers, musicians and others with an interest in musical picture matters?

Here is the Country's and the Industry's Answer:

Go to It! We Want It.

With only one dissenting voice, the industry has voted: "Yes."

Of their own free will and with enthusiasm they have approved the NEWS' suggestion, have indicated that they will be with the conference and will give their best support to its proper development.

Read the letters. We quote the only dissenter, who may be right, by the way; but we cannot attempt to quote all the supporters. We are using only those received up to three days after the last week's issue appeared! How many others will be received before this issue gets into type we can't figure.

John H. Kunsky, director of a famous chain of theatres, says "No." He writes: "I do not see where a conference of the nature mentioned would be of any benefit, and would not be interested."

Samuel Rothapfel, who first made music for pictures so important, writes in his usual splendid way.

"I am thoroughly in accord with your ideas and will help you in its execution in any way that I can, but would much prefer if possible to remain in the background. I will, however, gladly detail Mr. Rapee, my conductor, to be at your service at any time that you may require.

"Allow me to congratulate you on the good work that you are doing and wishing you every success."—Samuel Rothapfel.

Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion theatres wrote as follows:

"I have read with great interest regarding the Motion Picture Musical Conference, and am very favorably impressed with the idea. I will certainly do my utmost to make it a success. Will you please get in touch with me to explain more fully the details of your plan?

"With kindest personal regards, I am.—Hugo Reisenfeld—Managing Director."

(Editorial Note: Further discussion with Mr. Riesenfeld and his representatives brought forth the fact that the theatres and workers of the Riesenfeld interests will do anything and everything to make the idea a big success.)

Erno Rapee, conductor of the Capitol theatre, wrote:

"I will be happy indeed to cooperate with you on any plan you may deem wise to try. Couldn't I see you soon, and where? Let me know."

Here is the word of the Manager of the leading theatre in Providence, R. I.:

"Regarding a Photoplay Musical Conference, the idea seems very good and has wonderful possibilities.

"The standadrization of music for films, in the writer's opinion would be impossible except as a cue to organists and leaders, for as you know, very few interpret all music alike. Another thing, different localities would naturally call for different versions for the theme of the picture.

"There are very few houses in the country today outside of the key cities that make any attempt to harmonize their music with the pictures, and the writer can say he will be glad at any time if it is possible to cooperate with you to this end."—Chas. H. Williams, Mgr., Strand theatre.

Harold Franklin, head of the Shea theatres, is recognized as one of the best visioned men in the industry. Read this report:

"Your plan for a Motion Picture Musical Conference should strike a responsive chord amongst all who are interested in the development of music for Motion Pictures. It will be a privilege to attend such a conference."

The head of the Brooklyn Strand theatre, Mr. Hyman, is a hustler. Here is his point of view. (By the way. did you read my article last week in which I told of Mr. Hyman's wonderful presentation of Charles Ray's "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway"?)

"Your idea for a group assembly of those interested in music for the motion picture and its attendant possibilities, in my opinion, is a forward step, and you may count upon me for full measure of support.

"I shall be glad to lend my time to such an undertaking for music in the theatre needs the whole-hearted attention of all of us, its practical application to the motion picture and the theatre in general. Many a picture has been ruined by its musical setting, and I should indeed be pleased to join with a cooperative body with the standardization of picture music as the pertinent aim.

"Motion picture managers could learn much, I feel, from such an organization as you propose. The Strand is, indeed, open to any who might care to study anything along the line of music as we apply it.

"Please don't hesitate to call upon me in this matter, or for anything that calls for the betterment of the profession."

B. E. Cornell, manager of the Eckel theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., writes:

"We have carefully noted contents of the News and think the conference idea very good.

"Kindly notify me when you deicde to hold the meeting and I will be there, as am very much interested."

John C. Freund, the oldest and foremost authority on music in America, founder of Musical America, the Music Trades and popular and venerated figure wherever music is known, writes:

"I shall be most happy to be of any service whatever in the movement which I consider of vast importance for two reasons:

"First, we are only in the infancy of our appreciation of what music can do for us, not so much as to what we can do for music.

"Second, the tremendous popularity of the films affords an opportunity for propaganda which cannot be over-estimated. With sincere appreciation of the enterprise of the Motion Picture News."

Artur Bodansky, foremost orchestral conductor in America, of the National Symphony Orchestra, Metropolitan Opera House, etc., says:

"I am sure this idea will work out, as everything else did that you began."

Edwin Franko Goldman, conductor of the Goldman Concert Band (which was heard by half a million people this past summer in New York), writes:

"It will give me great pleasure to attend the conference which you are planning to hold toward the end of October or the beginning of November. I will be glad to assist in any way possible."

Joseph Breil, the man who made the first orchestral score for pictures (Cabiria, Birth of a Nation, etc.), said:

"I shall be glad to become active in the project, for I believe it will tend to clear the atmosphere of many clouds that have thus far befogged the vision. Your idea to bring about a standardization of music for the film is a tremendous one—very difficult of achievement, considering that so many musicians, orchestra leaders and composers, neglect continuously to study the theatre, and consequently fail to grasp dramatic values in music. (It is this conception of theatrical values that established forever Wagner and Puccini in the operatic world. And there is no reason why it should not be made equally important in the adaptation of music to the film.) It can be accomplished, if the men appointed to help in its establishment, will be sincere and not keep both eyes on the dollar mark while the tongue utters platitudes. The development of an organization to bring together musicians, managers, publishers and others is likewise a big thing, and pointed in the right direction.

"As you say there are 'big things to be done in this direction,' and I am heartily in sympathy with it. You may count on me as one of your most enthusiastic supporters. I will be glad to have you make an appointment with me to talk over some of the points which I think should be covered in this conference, so that when the affair opens, we will be able to know what it is all about, and what we plan to do."

C. M. Tremaine, head of the National Bureau of the Advancement of Music (which represents the piano and player piano industries and which is in touch with scores of newspapers all over the United States), tells this:

"I am greatly interested in the plan proposed and hasten to assure you of my hearty sympathy with it and the pleasure it will give me to cooperate. The development you have in mind for motion picture music and musicians is one to which I want to give more than merely my passive support, and I shall be glad to take a conspicuous part in furthering it.

"I expect to send out a story about it in the near future. Also, if you want me to and I have time, I will write a special article for the Motion Picture News strongly endorsing your idea."

Felix Feist, the wide-awake vice-president of Goldwyn, says that he will be there in full attendance if it is evolved during his time in town.

Nat Finston, formerly conductor of the Capitol theatre and now head of the Goldwyn music, says:

"Your idea of a get-together of producers, managers, musicians, is a good one. I believe, greater will be the results from a closer co-ordination of the people actively engaged in the 'movie' sphere, than has yet been attained. There seems to be a need of a sort of exchange periodically of ideas for the running, managing, producing, scoring of film which seems to me would put the whole 'game,' the country over, far, far ahead."

Maybe it would be said that Samuel Finkelstein is not an ardent supporter. Not yet, but wait. He represents all the musicians of New York City. He is head of the musical union. Here is his letter. Read it for yourself:

"I should be pleased to attend the conference or any meeting that may be designated, if ample time is given, to be present for the discussion and welfare of any proposition; but I fail to understand at this time the important value of this conference, and what way the manufacturers of instruments are connected with the Moving Picture Films, or where the connection of the publisher enters into the matter. However, I shall not discredit anything that may contain a progressive idea in your mind, though I cannot see the value of it. I am not conversant with the situation that you wish to place for all interests concerned, but I assure you that I will be a willing and interested listener at the start; the issue will then decide the question as to prominence. Kindly acquaint me of your future action."

Haensel and Jones are managers of musical artists of international reputation. Fitzhugh Haensel, the head of the corporation, says:

"While I hardly feel that I could be of value to you in your plan, still I shall be more than glad to attend the conference and see what develops."

A. L. Abrams, of the American Photo Player Company, wired to say he would be there or would have a representative. Dan Barton, head of the Bartola Company, says the "Idea is a very good one, and I will be glad to give you all the cooperation possible." Mrs. David Allen Campbell, editor of the official organ of the women's musical clubs, "The Musical Monitor": "I am greatly interested in a Motion Picture Musical Conference—and I'll call in all our women to help."

Here is a splendid letter from the big house of Lyon & Healy:

"In our opinion there is a real need for the movement which you outline. Anything that has for its purpose the educating of exhibitors to the need for better music—music that is in keeping with each and every scene on the screen—is a step in the right direction.

"Although at this early date we do not like to promise definitely that we will have a representative on the ground, let us assure you that anything within reason that you may adopt in this direction has our moral support and if we can arrange without too great a sacrifice to be represented at the conference you mention, you may count on us.

"We hope you will keep us apprised of what further steps you are taking."—E. J. Exter; Lyon ú Healy.

Another is here from Marr & Colton (organ manufacturers).

"We think your scheme of a conference of all parties directly interested in the music problem for Motion Pictures an excellent one. You can be assured of our support in this matter and we will gladly do anything in our power to make it a success.

"The structural outline of the organization as stated is excellent and we believe that this can be enlarged upon and made to be of great benefit to all parties concerned. Assuring you of our interest in this matter."—W. C. Arnold.

Joseph W. Stern, musical publisher, considers the plan "feasible, and will decide a little later if we can join with you."

M. Witmark, also publishers, have said they would doubtless join. Rudolph Wurlitzer, head of the important house bearing his name, says that he is for it, and has asked his New York manager, Mr. Ryan, to look further into the plan. Mr. Ryan himself has indicated his interest in the conference.

For those who missed last week's issue, we reprint a part of the article.

There is the matter of the Music Tax.

There is the ever-prominent matter of cue-sheets.

There is the newly developing call for musical features—prologues, interpolated songs, etc.

There is the possible need for a Musical Circuit of Theatres, with a special kind of an agency or agencies to handle it.

There is the matter of standardization of Descriptive Music—the need for making it easy to select the right kind of music for every kind of scene, mood, emotion, etc.

There is the question of the kind of music to use—popular, classic, etc.

There is the matter of developing specialized conductors, men who understand the picture technique.

There is the matter of educating music publishers to picture needs, and educating picture people to the matters already offered by publishers.

There is the matter of the kind of permanent instruments to be used; questions of accoustics.

There is the matter of competition and alliance with other musical activities.

There is the matter of How to Let the Public Make the Most of the Music and Make the Most of the Public who want the Music.

These are only a few of the matters which the manager, conductor, musicians and many other factors must think about.

Then it must not be forgotten that certain experiments have been carried on.

Riesenfeld and Rothapfel have made extraordinary successes and have developed a "Technique"—as have many other pioneers in other cities.

Dozens of important conductors have come into being with their fine ideas and successful experiments.

Andreas Dippel, on the other hand lost a fortune in his music-picture experiments.

Vast schemes for many present growing musical needs are on foot or are in the course of development.

Many have ideas and theories worthy of attention.

These and many other present treasuries of information could be brought before the industry through the medium of a conference.

To bring the matters to a head, the News, as mentioned before, decided, after conferences with all of its editorial departments, to Issue the Call.

Tentatively (and positively unless otherwise changed) here are the details of the Conference.

It will be held in New York City.

It will be held in the last of November or the beginning of December.

It will last not less than two days or more than four days. Headquarters to be announced.

All correspondce for the time being to be sent to Charles D. Isaacson, Music Editor, Motion Picture News, New York City.

"The Story of Carmen"

DUE to the development of the big plan of the Musical Conference, we shunted off the main story of the department, in the very midst of our discussion on "visualizing music"—that is, finding the story description in the music. We started to tell our "Story of Carmen," and published as far as the end of the first act.

We will now continue the "Story of Carmen," (going on from the end of first act):

It is the inn of Lillas Pastia, at the end of the dinner hour. A dance is on, the sound of castanets and guitars and tambourines. Gypsies whirl about. Carmen sings of the gypsies, "Tra la la, when I hear the gay guitar, cheeks now flush and jewels shine, round and round in merry maze, love beguiled, faster, faster let me swing, reason lost at last, madder and madder the dancers become, yelling and screaming."

They are about to close the cabaret when the approach of the Escamillo is heard. Now, he is the greatest bullfighter in all Spain, and in Spain he is honored above all men. He is brawny and egotistical, and expects homage. "I want bright eyes. Attend, on your guard, the toreador is here. Think of me in the ring, when the bull advances fast, do I swerve? No, no, honor to the toreador. Carmen, will you love me, I know you not. But you shall."

Now the inn is deserted except by the gypsies and Carmen. They tell her that she is wanted to go on an expedition, a very profitable one—smuggling. She surprises them when she says that she can't go because she is in love with a dragoon. But I think I can bring him with me. Jose enters, tells Carmen he has been in prison for two months for his crime of letting her free. But it is all right for love of you, Carmen.

"Only now were some officers here and they made me dance," says Carmen, which makes Jose jealous, but she tells him she will dance for him. The trumpet recall is heard in the distance. Jose is about to leave, reluctantly, but Carmen will hear of no such thing. "What? Here am I tiring myself trying to dance, thinking he loves me, and he wants to go. Take your sword and go; you do not love me. Go; I will not have you." "Ah, Carmen, how wrong you are. Look," and from out his uniform he takes the faded bunch of flowers. "This you threew to me, and all through these long months in prison, night and day, they have conjured you up in my imagination. They held out the hope that I would meet you again. I love you." "If you love me, then come with me to the mountains, up there, where we never will be parted."

"Why Carmen, to do that would be to be a deserter—such infamy! I could not do that." "Then you don't love me. Go." Jose pauses but a moment and says: "Then I go. Farewell. I cannot be a deserter." He is about to leave when the officer comes in, sees what's happening, and strikes Jose. There is trouble immediately, and then Jose sees that now he is disgraced. He promises to go to the mountains, where all is free—with his Carmen. The curtain falls.

Now picture a wild, desolate scene up in the mountains. Jose is gazing down to the plains below. "Of what do you think?" asks Carmen. "Somewhere there is an old woman who thinks I am an honest man; my mother." "Better go to her," says Carmen, who has begun to tire of this jealous, tense man. "Go from thee. If you say that again I'll kill you."

"What matters. If fate wills it. Let me see what the cards say. I will shuffle. What is this, spades, death? I will shuffle again." But no matter what she does, the cards register doom, death. "Death," she says. "Well, so be it. Carmen will defy it."

Now, in the meantime, Micaela has been sorely tried. She has been following the guilty Jose. She has a duty to fulfil. Jose's mother is dying and she must carry the message to him.

She leaves, frightened at a shot, and Jose is accosted by Escamillo, who confides to him that he is in love with one Carmen, who thought she cared for a dragoon, but is tired of him. "Is it so," asks Jose, "then the lover will kill you." A duel, but Carmen stays the hand of Jose.

"You saved my life, Carmen," says Escamillo, "at least we'll meet again, and it is allowed me to invite all who love me to watch me in the ring at Seville."

"Carmen, beware," says Jose, "I am weary of suffering; don't try me." It is then that Micaela arrives, and begs Jose to return to his suffering mother. "Go quickly, Jose, this life is not for you," urges Carmen.

"You tell me to go, you Carmen. Ah, you seek other lovers, the toreador. No, I will not go. Micaela leave me. This accursed woman has ruined my life. I love her, and we cannot separate."

"Then one word more, my last," weeps Micaela. "Your mother is dying, and will not be able to see you."

"Dying, dying, you say? Then, then I leave. I leave you Carmen, but we meet again." And as they go, Jose and Micaela, the toreador's song is heard. Jose pauses, Carmen watches his departure—and he is gone. The Curtain drops.

Music
makes Films talk

CHARLES D. ISAACSON, in Motion Picture News, points out that "music is the voice of the film—not the human speech, but the speech of the action, the mood, the emotion, the spirit of the ensemble."

And no matter what the mood, emotion or spirit of the film you show, its impression will be enhanced if you accompany it with an which renders every type of music with the effect of a full orchestra—although only one man is required to operate it. You will find an Estey in the Capitol Theatre, New York, and in houses with a seating capacity as low as 300.

Let us tell you how successfully and economically an Estey can be built in your theatre, and demonstrate the effect it will have on your popularity, your prestige, and your box-office receipts.

The Complete Plan Book

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

" Hell's Oasis "

(Five-Reel Feature, Starring Neal Hart—Pinnacle Productions, Incorporated)

THIS screen version of William L. Roberts' powerful stage play, "The Fighting Parson," is the vehicle for Neal Hart's first appearance as star of a five-reel out-of-door feature, and in some of the strong situations Hart shows qualities as an actor which promise much for his future popularity. As the hard riding, hard-fisted cowpuncher, who protects the little salvation army lass from the vileness of the gambling hall proprietor and later becomes the fighting parson in one of the wickedest and wildest mining camps yet portrayed on the screen, Hart is in his native environment and acts with a naturalness and ease one would expect from a man brought up as he was, as a western ranch rider and sheriff.

After a promising opening, the picture drags slightly and Hart has a tendency to underact rather than play his part to its full strength. In the closing scenes, however, there is plenty of stirring action and thrills, and the star is given an opportunity to show himself as handy with his fists as he is with a "six gun" in a terrific man to man fight, which is one of the strong features of the production.

Locations were well chosen and some fine desert scenes bring us a breath of the genuine west. Even more riders and extras were used than were really needed in some of the village and dance hall scenes, although they gave an air of activity to the streets of the cow town rarely seen in a western. Betty Brown is charming in the role of the little evangelist, the girl for whom Mr. Hart risks his life. The other parts are capably played.

A good picture with a high moral lesson, it should please audiences and the personality of Hart, combined with the popularity of the book, "The Fighting Parson" offer excellent exploitation possibilities.—L. H. MASON. (Reviewed in Chicago).

" Love's Battle "

JOE MOORE and Eileen Sedgwick do some very good work in this production, but are handicapped by a rather poor story.

The plot is written around the rather trite theme, "Circumstantial Evidence," and shows what may happen to the men or women who are its unfavored children.

In this feature the heroine loves a young man, who is unfortunate enough to be in the vicinity of a hold-up and rushing to give his assistance is, in the series of events which follow, accused of murder and sentenced to be hung because he was found by the sheriff in a dazed condition lying on the body of the murdered man. His condition was the result of an encounter with the robbers.

The heroine in a last effort to save her loved one enters the district attorney's home, holds him up, and tries to force him to sign the hero's pardon.

When she finds that he is deaf to her entreaties, she tries the old trick, "yelling for assistance," and at the same time throwing her arms about the attorney's neck.

The latter's wife and the police, who answer the call for help, believe the prosecutor guilty of an atrocious crime and are about to deal harshly with him when the girl confesses her scheme.

This arouses the attorney to action with the result that the young man is saved in the "nick of time."

The picture will interest.—FRANK LEONARD.

" The Wonderful Chance "

(Selznick)

H. H. VAN LOAN has given Eugene O'Brien a splendid opportunity to display his talents in this production and the result is a very fair picture.

The story creates interest from the start and although weak in spots, develops to a strong climax, with suspense playing a prominent part.

The plot is entirely different from the usual run in which O'Brien has appeared. Instead of unfolding a story in which the love interest is strongest, Van Loan has switched about to a different angle and allowed romance to take second place.

The star is seen in a dual role alternating between an English lord and a crook.

He gives a splendid characterization of the Englishman, acting with a naturalness that is really a pleasure to witness, but when he reverts to contrast, his crook portrayal is not so convincing.

Lord Birmingham, upon his arrival in this country is seized and held by a band of crooks. "Swagger" Barlow, an ex-convict, impersonates him and succeeds in getting away with it.

Barlow visits the crooks in their den, and is surprised to find the Englishman there tied hand and foot. He promises to liberate him provided he will not disclose his (Barlow's) identity to a young society girl.

His lordship agrees, is released and goes to the home of the young girl. Although he corresponds with his predecessor, his eyes are not the same.

In the big scene when the police lieutenant is called upon to distinguish between them and finds that he cannot, the girl decides to take the one whose eyes most appeal to her. And the eyes are those of Barlow.

The cast includes Tom Blake, Rudolph De Valentino, Joe Flanigan, Warren Cook and Martha Mansfield.

" Dynamite "

(Mermaid Comedy—Educational)

THERE has been real ingenuity expended upon "Dynamite," the latest Mermaid comedy—ingenuity of idea, ridiculous tomfoolery which is riotously funny, and captions. Loud and frequent guffaws greeted this piece at the Strand, New York. Which is not strange considering the bright spots it contains. It has to do with a very timely subject and an explosive one. Powder. A foreword advises us that the manufacturer is blown ninety miles and his last words were: "I leave the papers to my son, Ben Zeen, and my daughter, Maggie." Things aren't going well at the powder plant and when word comes to Ben to journey hither, the scene discloses him at the fishing hole, baiting the fish to jump out of the water so that they might be clubbed into submission. Hilarious hokum and it scores.

Ben arrives looking every inch the dunce. And he fears neither fish, face, powder, nor bug. Becoming thirsty he gargles some nitroglycerine and when he sprays it the spots furnish smoke. A hen wanders in, eats some powder and immediately lays a few explosive eggs. When she is tossed out of the window—well let X mark place where body was last seen. A walking delegate named "I Doubleyou" comes to start up some agitation. Which is occasion to start the grand chase with people, walls, and powder going up in smoke. The conclusion pictures the old man and daughter, Maggie, being rescued from a terrible death only to get the scare of their lives when simple Ben knocks over some T. N. T. There they are seated a-top a telegraph post.

The titling is as snappy as the action. Indeed "Dynamite" explodes a lot of laughter. It lives up to its name—something chock-full of dynamic jazz. Lloyd Hamilton is the chief funmaker and he plays his part with a fine sense of burlesque.—Length, 2 reels.—LAURENCE REID.

" Chase Me "

(Sunshine Comedy—Fox—Two Reels)

"CHASE ME" falls a little below some of the rip-roaring Sunshine comedies that have made their appearance. While there are many scenes that will draw forth mild laughs, it has not the spontaneity, nor the originality to get over very big. The bathing girl scenes are not over-emphasized, but there are some attractive chase scenes. Roy del Ruth directed.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"The Seven League Booters"
(Educational)

THERE are snows, and snows, but the kind of snow which must have offered inspiration to poets and authors of books who have written about it, is the kind of snow which "packs" in Switzerland. It is not the kind which flies. At least it does not fly in the picture. But it is "packed" like anything and the atmosphere, though not of melting heat, cannot be very piercing, since little children indulge in play and sport in less than bathing suits and perhaps have never seen a knitted toboggan headgear.

This offers great entertainment for juvenile picture fans and appeals to the adult in making one long to be a child again. It does not matter to the adult in Switzerland, however, when he wants to "slide" down a toboggan on his "tum," as the title puts it. He forgets all about being grown up and takes as much pleasure in the out-of-door sport as the younger set, which throng the scenes of the snow clad hills. The titles are typical "Hilliker" ones and the photography the usual commendable work identified with Chester Outing pictures, the haze, usually so noticeable in "snow pictures," being entirely eliminated.—LILLIAN GALE.

"June Madness"
(Vanity Fair Comedy—Rolin-Pathe)

HAL ROACH, who is responsible for Harold Lloyd's meteoric flight to popularity and Snub Pollard's debut as a star, has come forward as the sponsor of a new type of comedy—one which features six pretty girls. "June Madness" is his first effort and it provides fifteen minutes of quite snappy entertainment. Thus he adds a note of variety. The ladies of the ensemble do not act like amateurs. Really they conduct themselves with all the assurance of a Ziegfeld chorus and are quite as good looking. The idea which they pick up and nourish and play with is the tried and true pattern of the summer hotel which is infested with ladies but carries nary a specimen of the opposite sex who might be called young and breezy. Oh, yes, a few old "wheezes" are about.

But the youth of the land is missing. Finally, a dapper fellow arrives who is hired as a hotel clerk upon his promise not to fall for the ladies. But they compromise him. They all work the fainting trick or resort to some feminine whim to gain his attention or affection. "June Madness" is directed by Fred Niemyer and offers Eddie Boland as the summer man. Interest is held mostly by the pulchritudinous appeal. The girls will bear watching. They won't need comedy when they slip on the bathing suits.—Length One Reel.—LAURENCE REID.

(Educational)

"JUDO" is not the name of a horse, nor of a dog, but of the kind of athletics taught in Japan, and what is similar, or perhaps a part of their famous "Jiu-jitsu." In the picture the professor first announces to the students the kind of stunt he will teach, that lesson. Learn all about it before attempting to wrestle with a son of Japan, or the proverbial "grease spot" will fade away. "A Judo expert knows how to temporarily paralyze his opponent" explains the title. But when properly equipped, each wrestler, has that same knowledge. It makes a merry little fight, described, by the picture, as the most graceful wrestling a la mode. We learn that every method of attack, when two opponents meet, has a counter method of defeat. They both try the counter method, but to avoid more than necessary broken bones, the entire floor is covered with a thick matting, and as every male child of Japan, is said to be brought up in the art, a break more or less by the time he is of age cannot make much difference. But there is a moral to the cleverly planned ways of throwing each other about, based upon three principles, the foundation of the teaching. The first two are regarding the clutches, but the third, like we know about here in America, is the chide "keep your temper." It is obvious, if one lost it, he would immediately lose the fight, too, so despite being wrung out like the house-wife's dish rag, the Japanese gladiator comes up smiling. "Time—shake hands."—LILLIAN GALE.

"Profiteering Blues"
(Century Comedy—Universal—Two Reels)

A TRIPLE marriage ceremony forms the crux of this comedy directed by Fred C. Fishback—a ceremony with the principals applying the w. k. hokum while they are being spliced. There is the fat couple. Ditto the slim one. And a laugh is a sure proposition with such contrasts. The "profiteering" of the title enters when the happy people endeavor to secure accommodations at the hotel. "Nothing doing," says the clerk. The result is they are chased out of the park for spooning on the benches.

The only original trick is revealed when one finds them occupying hammocks in a grove—the hammocks being placed like berths in sleeping cars. The fat man or the fat bride breaks through as the spectator anticipates and falls upon the ground or on the slim people. That's about all there is to the "Profiteering Blues." There is not much comedy in it. One may call it just a filler. The exhibitor who plays it can make it fairly interesting by having his musicians interpret it with jazz music. Any kind of "blues" selection would help it a great deal. Bud Jamison heads the cast.—Length 2 reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Brave Toreador"
(Mutt and Jeff Cartoon—Fox—One Reel)

ONE of the funniest of the Mutt and Jeff series that has been shown in several weeks. Our two friends are in Spain, and plan to gain admittance to a bull fight on one ticket. Mutt scales the wall, planning to open the door later and let Jeff enter. But Mutt has lowered himself in to the bull pen and a ferocious animal chases him out into the arena. The crowd shouts in joy for they think a new toreador has arrived. Mutt breaks all speed records with the man-eater close at his heels. But the bull shows more speed and sends him flying out of the arena. The animal is especially well drawn and his antics are the funniest thing in the reel. Jeff is thrown by his disconsolate pal into the area and falls on the bull's back. Thereupon the little fellow mistakes the man-eater for a harmless cow, and when the latter shows fight, Jeff proceeds to punish him severely. He pounds the maneater and kicks him, and eventually hurls him out of sight.

It should prove one of the most popular of these cartoons—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"The Big Show"
(Chester Comedy—Educational)

THE BIG SHOW" is a study in the heyday of childhood. And the fact that it perpetuates the circus which is always enacted in the backyard or in the barn will stir up pleasant memories with the elders as well as with the children themselves. It may be that circuses not being so plentiful now, the kids, seeing this comedy, will go home and imitate as best they can. Of course it has its greatest appeal with those under fifteen. Unless one hasn't entirely forgotten one's youth. The director hasn't overlooked a single trick. Indeed, he has added several new ones. The kids in this picture are fortunate to possess the ape, who carries on most of the comedy.

The children are seated before the stage and the acts occur. They are all in imitation of the circus. The "monk" plays the piano and cuts up several didoes. Naturally there is not much humor found in the piece because it is obvious the children were put through their paces. And children are not at ease when they are conscious of their efforts. However, there are one or two bright bits—such as the parrot who walks to a telephone and informs the monkey that the child wonder is buried by a mountain of sand. The ape hurries to the rescue. And it is a race whether he will dig the youngster out quicker than a poodle or three. The picture is interesting because of its novelty. Animals and kids make it an acceptable filler.—Length, 2 reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Schooner Skagway"
(Educational)

EVER been to Juneau, the capital of Alaska, where, once, during the Klondike boom, the "Grand Hotel," was some grand place? You can see it all in the Robert C. Bruce film geography of Alaska locations, which are reached via "The Schooner to Skagway" and see what happens after the yearly rain fall, which deposits ninety inches of water, thereabouts, and leaves things floating. Incidentally, the schooner comes in close proximity to the remains of a disaster, the ill fated "Sophia," which, with 370 passengers, was lost in the frigid waters, seventy of which bodies were never recovered. There is a deal of information to be gained by witnessing the travels of the schooner, and probably the most comfortable way to become cognizant of the interesting things we did not know, which, following the schooners trail, we learn about.

The titles, a bit long, are none the less clear, and render the sequence easy to follow.—LILLIAN GALE.

Dead Men Tell No Tales

"NOMADS OF THE NORTH"
(First National)

Colorful Backgrounds and Vivid Action in This Picture

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD'S "Nomads of the North" is a fitting sequel to "The River's End." One may call it a well planned, absorbing, and suspensive melodrama with the elements of nature providing a good deal of its moving moments. It is not so involved as its forerunner, therefore its story is more easily followed. The action is told in a straight-forward way and is perfectly timed to blend with the wonderfully picturesque shots of primeval nature. No one is quite so adept as Curwood in telling a story of the Canadian northwest and capitalizing it with vivid personalities.

The picture revolves around the conflict of two nomads with a Mounted Policeman who is assigned to the task of 'getting his man." But this same conflict is dwarfed by a larger one which depicts the characters battling for their lives in a colorful forest fire. This scene is truly eloquent, for it shows man in his extremity willing to forget, through a friendship born from fighting nature's elements. David Hartford has collected some marvelous backgrounds which are given full emphasis here. He seems to have as keen an eye for the pictorial as he has for the dramatic values. A rainstorm in which the lovers escape in a canoe is exceptionally graphic, and the backgrounds of river, mountain, forest and lake lend an atmosphere which is not only in keeping with the story, but bring to the spectator the feeling that he might be an actual participant. Such is realism as it should be.

The characters here will be easily recognized. They tell nothing new. That remains for Mr. Hartford. It is the old story of the Mounted Policeman who is forced to hunt down a man wanted for murder, and who reluctantly executes his orders because of his admiration for the wife of the "murderer." There is the stern factor, and his scapegrace son, who is determined to have his revenge upon the pair for frustrating his matrimonial plans. And when he perishes in the forest fire, the Mounted destroys the evidence and says, "I'll report you as the victim in his place." Two other nomads have a conspicuous place in the action—a dog and a bear. And none of the scenes which present them are out of place. The animals supply a note of humor. When three years have elapsed they are shown fully matured. Another realistic stroke. The acting is intrusted to the skillful hands of Lon Chaney, Betty Blythe and Lewis Stone. All give vivid performances. This is a great audience picture.—Length, 6 reels. —Laurence Reid.

By James Oliver Curwood.
Directed by David M. Hartford.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

James Oliver Curwood's story of the Canadian Northwest, "Nomads of the North," will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. All who remember "The River's End," as a model of its kind, will discover in the new feature a subject of the same quality. The action is melodramatic and depicts the conflicts of simple inhabitants of the North who are forced to fight for their lives with their fellow men and with the elements of nature. The picture offers several exciting situations and carries the utmost in suspense.

From the day that Raoul flees with Nanette, to escape the law, down through the pursuit of the lovers by the Mounted Policeman, the scenes rivet the attention through their vivid composition. In the end, the officer appreciates the manly qualities of Raoul and permits him to have his freedom. The acting is in the hands of competent players among them being Lon Chaney, Betty Blythe and Lewis Stone. All give vital portrayals. David M. Hartford has provided a most graphic and artistic production.

PROGRAM READER

Who isn't fascinated with a James Oliver Curwood story? Remember "The River's End?" "Nomads of the North" is a story cut from the same identical pattern, which means that it carries vivid characters, truly picturesque atmosphere and moves with a power that is intensity itself. So come to the ———— theatre next ———— and see the most amazing forest fire ever revealed on the screen. See the marvelous backgrounds of forest, mountains and streams. See Lon Chaney, the "Frog" of "Miracle Man" fame, Betty Blythe and Lewis Stone giving life to three of the most vital characters that ever adorned a story. You will be thrilled. An hour in the theatre which will be remembered.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up this feature big. Don't neglect a single point in your exploitation. The author and the players certainly mean something to your patrons. Play up Curwood's other stories which have found their way to the screen. Tell of the past performances of the players. By all means stress the fact that this picture carries the most wonderful scenery, the most startling thrills that ever graced a picture of its kind. The title is a winner. Feature the picture as a vivid and vital melodrama of the Canadian Northwest by an author who knows his subject matter. Use atmosphere for your lobby and prologue.

CATCH LINES

James Oliver Curwood's picturesque story, "Nomads of the North," is coming to the ———— next ————. Don't miss it. The treat of the season.

See the forest fire, the marvelous rainstorm, the antics of the cub and dog, the fight between man and beast, and action which vibrates with thrills. See "Nomads of the North."

"MADAME X"
(Goldwyn)

Tremendous Drama Faultlessly Acted and Skillfully Produced

COMBINING Pauline Frederick's exceptional emotional talents and her skill at screen expression with the powerful dramatic qualities of the famous stage play, "Madame X" has been productive of a picture that can be justly hailed as one of the notable film events of the season. The production builds carefully to its great climax, the trial scene where the son defends his mother on the charge of murder, neither knowing the identity of the other, and never for a moment can be termed uninteresting.

Those looking for an opportunity to carp might justly claim it to be a vehicle for Miss Frederick, complain that the story is not a pleasant one, that it lacks much that the stage version which its wonderful lines possessed, and comparisons may be made with the Pathe production in which Dorothy Donnelly was starred, but no one can gainsay but that it is Miss Frederick's greatest achievement and a gripping skillfully constructed drama that has neither technical nor histrionic faults.

The star has been surrounded by an exceptional supporting cast and nothing in the way of production has been left undone. It will appeal to those who appreciate acting, rather than action, and should find great favor with those who are tired of the sugar coated story with its trivial romance and stereotyped sequences leading up to the live happy ever after ending. As for Miss Frederick, in her long career she has never been given greater opportunities, which is ample proof that "Madame X" is a very much worth while picture. Certainly from an exploitation angle the picture is exceptional. The fame of the play and the star's acknowledged emotional ability make it a most attractive offering. The atmosphere of the locale of the picture, France, is perfect, and Miss Frederick's characterization of the unhappy wife is a revelation.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Madame X," the most famous play of the last twenty years, with its great theme of mother love, has been adapted to the motion picture by the Goldwyn Corporation with Pauline Frederick in the title role, and will be presented for a ———— days' engagement at the ———— theatre beginning ————.

As the wife and mother who made the one great mistake, that ended in a court of justice on trial for her life on the charge of murder, Miss Frederick has the greatest dramatic role of her entire career, and never has she achieved so much in an emotional part or taken advantage of the opportunities presented with more personal glory.

"Madame X" as Miss Frederick plays it is a revelation in screen portrayal and one of the finest dramatic pictures ever produced and the most notable film event of the year. Having a theme that is of universal interest and possessing dramatic incident that is seldom equalled, the picture grips and thrills in every sequence as it builds slowly but surely to the great climax, the great trial scene where the son defends his mother, neither knowing the identity of the other.

In her many years as a stage and screen star Miss Frederick has had many fine parts but none which equals that of "Madame X."

PROGRAM READER

Pauline Frederick, acknowledged to be one of the best emotional screen stars, is to be presented at the ———— theatre in the famous stage success, "Madame X," for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

In this picture Miss Frederick has the role of the wife and mother who left husband and child for the love of another and who drifted from a home of comfort to the court room on trial for murder with her own son as the attorney for the defense. In the scenes leading up to this climax, one of the greatest in dramatic power ever conceived. Miss Frederick displays a talent for character acting which is marvelous. As the drug addict she is at her best and also has displayed a wonderful faculty for makeup.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill the title calling attention to the fame of the play, mentioning the big stage success it was and promise that Pauline Frederick has the best role of her career. Dwell on the dramatic worth of the trial scene, and the theme, mother love. We would also give a little synopsis of the story since this is a vehicle for acting. For newspaper displays use a cut of the star in straight and character makeup with strong selling talk as to the production's merit. As a prologue suggestion the prisoners' box of the trial scene and a woman playing the rol of "Madame X" artistically lighted would be effective. The defense speech of "Madame X's" son could be read from off stage with a jury on the bench and characters of the play on the stage. In fact the whole act of the original play could be staged as most of it consists in pantomime and the big speech referred to.

CATCH LINES

Pauline Frederick, America's most distinguished emotional artist in the greatest role of her career, the unfortunate woman whose very name had been lost and who went on trial for murder under the title of "Madame X."

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last twenty weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of Motion Picture News which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to May 29, 1920.

"THE JAILBIRD"
(Ince-Paramount-Artcraft)

Rather Obvious, But Fairly Diverting

WHILE this comedy by Julien Josephson is unoriginal in theme and characterization, it is made fairly diverting through the cleverly arranged introduction and finale. In fact its highlights are contained in the first and fifth reels, while the body of the picture is of such obvious design that it drags considerably. Lloyd Ingraham, who directed, has provided a novel touch by introducing his chief character "breaking" jail through simply walking out with the crowd on visitors' day. The scene is highly amusing and the director must have appreciated its value because he duplicates it in a way for the finale. The result is "The Jailbird" is lifted above the mediocre class.

The convict is a "trusty" who is employed in the warden's office. He has six months to serve before he can join his pal. When the visitors arrive he calmly walks into a clothes-press, changes his garb for a suit of the warden's and passes out unnoticed when the crowd makes its exit. The fact that this must be a first-class prison, since it employs a warden and that all visitors are checked up as they pass in and out, should not be taken too greatly at its face value. Dramatic license is a healthy factor in any play. And many will overlook the slip in the spontaneity of the scene and the humor which it generates.

From this point to the finale the picture takes a "flop," since it relies upon a deal of exaggerated hokum. The jailbird journeys to a distant village, inherits some property and lives up to the tricks which placed him in the pen. He promotes a fake oil stock and with the savings of the hard boiled natives is about to decamp when they advise him that the well is gushing genuine oil. It's a study in reformation, for the hero mends his ways through the influence of a pretty girl's smile and confidence. And he goes back to serve out his sentence, entering his erstwhile abode on visitors' day and changing his suit while the warden is out of the room. This finish is refreshing after scenes of pointless by-play in which crude types wander on and off and exclaim, "By heck!" The romance doesn't have much of a chance for the picture is more Douglas MacLean's than it is Doris May's. No fifty-fifty arrangement here.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Douglas MacLean, formerly a co-star with Doris May, but now elevated to the ranks of single stardom by Thomas H. Ince, appears at the ———— theatre next ———— in "The Jailbird," an original photoplay by Julien Josephson. This offering is a brisk and joyous comedy which is admirably balanced with a thread of homely philosophy. It takes up the case of Shakespeare Clancy, alias "The Kid," who finding that he has six months to serve, breaks jail on visitors' day by changing his uniform for that of the warden's and walking out with the mob. A chance arrives for him to inherit some property in a distant village—said property consisting of a mortgaged printing plant and a small sum of money.

With his prison pal, he conceives the plan to mulct the inhabitants out of their money by promoting a fake oil stock. He drills into a vacant lot, part of the estate and with the earnings of the villagers is about to decamp when they run after him and declare the well is gushing oil. The jailbird has a change of heart after taking the savings of a young girl interested in him and he promises to come back after being absent for six months. He is determined to serve out his jail sentence and re-enters on visitors' day. The picture carries a deal of interesting touches and is well acted by a competent cast.

PROGRAM READER

He "broke" jail on visitors' day by calmly walking out with the mob. Then when he inherited some property he was still determined to live by his wits—fair means or foul. With his prison pal he launched a fake oil stock and gathered in the money. But the oil well proved to be the genuine thing. It took a pretty girl's smile and her charming manner—her confidence in him to make him decide to go straight. See the jailbird ————. Come to the ———— theatre next ———— and see Douglas MacLean in "The Jailbird," a picture which presents an interesting line of homely humor. Doris May is the leading woman.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have Douglas MacLean as a star alone. While Doris May is in the cast, Mr. MacLean has the principal acting role. Feature the author. Julien Josephson has written many stories for Charles Ray, Lloyd Hughes and others. Bring out that it was the starring team, MacLean and May, who appeared in one of the finest pictures ever released, "23½ Hours Leave." Use stills of the star in his prison garb. Treat it as a human and homely little comedy which is well balanced. Bring out its fine climax and play it in a humorous fashion. Feature the star as a comer—a young man who is rapidly making his mark.

CATCH LINES

He had six months to serve. But he wanted to gain his freedom. What did he do? Did he make a get-away? And did he reform? See Douglas MacLean in "The Jailbird."

The visitors came to look over the jail and the "trusty" walked out with them. Did he come back? See the human photoplay "The Jailbird," with Douglas MacLean.

"UNCLE SAM OF FREEDOM RIDGE"
(Harry Levey—State Rights)

Propaganda Picture Doubtful as to Entertainment

MARGARET PRESCOTT MONTAGUE, who wrote this story, announces that it is "a protest against any small and mean partisanship" and also that it is "a plea for the League of Nations." It is, therefore, an admittedly propaganda production, aiming to sway sentiment and assuming that the failure of the treaty was a disgrace and a dishonor and "a betrayal of everything our sons fought for," as one subtitle reads.

Its merits as propaganda are secondary to its entertainment values from an exhibitor's standpoint, and as it has been produced with meager expenditures, and is sadly lacking in action, its power to draw the public is doubtful. The tragedy of the old man who loses a son in the war and who later, half-demented by the delay of the United States to enter the League of Nations, kills himself as an atonement for the sins of his country, is practically unrelieved by action, humor or romance. While showing no battle scenes, the picture visualizes those tense days at home—the rush to enlist, the anxious waiting for news from the front, and the enthusiasm of Liberty Loan and Red Cross drives. It is the general opinion that the time is not yet ripe for the picturing of America's war days.

There is, however, some genuine pathos and points of appeal in the picture. For instance, the old mountaineer, induced to act as "Uncle Sam" at a rally meeting receives word of his son's death immediately before his appearance on the stage. As the war ends he sees the desertion of America's ideals. Finally, mentally harassed, he comes to believe that he actually is "Uncle Sam"—the crushed and shackled spirit of his country. So he kills himself as a sacrifice, and the neighborhood accepts the sacrifice and dedicates itself to a higher patriotism.

The story opens in 1935, with an old friend telling the story of Uncle Sam to a newspaper reporter. Wm. D. Corbett plays Uncle Sam with fair success, but Helen Flint does not give a finished performance. George Macquarrie stands out in the cast.

"Uncle Sam of Freedom Ridge" will appeal to the League of Nations devotees and will catch popular favor to some degree by its flag-waving and strong patriotic flavor, but it is not a strong audience picture.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Uncle Sam of Freedom Ridge," adapted from one of the most talked of stories of the year, has been made into a photoplay and will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. Margaret Prescott Montague, authoress of the story, has touched upon a theme, so deep, so universal, that when her work was first published in book form it attracted the attention of many well known literary critics as a vivid description of America's war time ideals and the dangers of their desertion by America now that the war has ended.

The story is laid in the mountains of the South. "Uncle Sam" is an old man who has lost a son in the war and who lives only to see the realization of the ideals for which his son died. He has earned the name of "Uncle Sam" because in Red Cross and Liberty Loan rallies pageants he has always taken the part of the symbolic figure of the United States. But he never lives to see his dreams come true, for peace has brought a resumption of the struggle of individual souls, and a loss of united idealism.

The picture has been well produced with an excellent cast. It is expected to win as much favor as the story, which President Wilson described as a most remarkable and truthful tale.

PROGRAM READER

"Uncle Sam of Freedom Ridge," one of the most remarkable stories of true Americans and true American ideals ever written, will be the feature attraction at this theatre on ————. The picture is adapted from Margaret Prescott Montague's story of the same name, and it presents, in an entertaining form, the ideals of America in the Great War. It goes further than this—it urges that those ideals be not forgotten, but form just as great a part of our every day life as they did in those days of trial and worry when American boys were risking their lives—and sacrificing them—for the cause of perpetual peace. All this is presented with a view towards entertainment. There is romance, humor and pathos just as there was in Miss Montague's story from which it was adapted.

SUGGESTIONS

When you book this you have a chance to arouse discussion. It is propaganda, so intended, and you can tell your patrons so. It is not, of course, partisan propaganda, and it should not, under any circumstances, be so advertised. The following catch line, or one similar, will hit it off: "A picturization of the ideals for which America fought—a plea, through the screen, for a speedy ending of petty squabbling, and an entrance into the League of Nations to end all war." This will certainly draw some business. There are street stunts and lobby displays easily possible from the title and theme of the picture. "Uncle Sam" can parade the streets or else be in the lobby.

"HELD BY THE ENEMY"
(Paramount-Artcraft)

Civil War Romance Looks Good as a Picture

WILLIAM GILLETTE'S stage play, 'Held by the Enemy," may be founded upon an ancient formula, but there is no denying the fact that he knows something of situation and climax. It comes to the screen with all its charm and romance and incident and conflict, thanks to a good scenario by Beulah Marie Dix and creditable direction by Donald Crisp. Civil War romances have been done time and again on the screen and they invariably follow the familiar pattern which shows a Yankee hero falling in love with a Southern girl, with both carrying out the conflict, torn by romance and duty.

This picture doesn't vary in one single incident from its forerunners. What keeps and holds the interest is the wealth of incident, the action comprising a series of well constructed and melodramatic scenes, the glamor of that vital period in the history of America, and the spirited acting of a quartette of players. Indeed, Agnes Ayres in crinoline costume looks as if she might have stepped out of an old miniature, and her performance is rich in charm and sympathy. Jack Holt as the Yankee officer plays with manly restraint, and Lewis Stone as the Confederate husband, who commits the supreme sacrifice in order to grant his wife happiness with an enemy, is splended. This actor always carries something in reserve. He commands attention through superb dignity and poise. Wanda Hawley in an ingenue role makes a fetching picture. The comedy relief is intrusted to her and Walter Hiers.

The action is based upon this conflict of love versus duty. And a breath of suspense comes when one wonders how the wounded Confederate will be eliminated. One anticipates a series of court-martials for the heroic Yankees and the equally heroic Southerner. Duty compels the officer to search his sweetheart's home for the rebel and respect for her feeling compels him to forget the fortunes of war. A minor conflict is enacted by a villainous Yankee officer, who, discouraged in his effort to win the spirited girl, stoops to vengeance. His scenes also provide measures of suspense. "Held by the Enemy" may be of heroic design, but it is interesting. The public would not accept it in any other fashion. There are few battle scenes. The picture carries too much romance and atmosphere for their introduction.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

Directed by Donald Crisp.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A romance of the Civil War will be shown at the ———— theatre when the pictorial version of William Gillette's play, "Held by the Enemy," appears next ————. Upon the stage the offering met with popular favor because of its dramatic quality. Carrying a fine flavor of romance, the conflict of North and South, the lesser conflict which is born from love and duty as expressed by a Yankee officer and a Southern belle, and providing moments of real interest through the incident, action and atmosphere, the play is destined to become quite as popular in its new shape.

Around this romance, which is colored with the strife of the period and the glamour attached to it, revolves the action. The play has been adapted by Beulah Marie Dix, who has given it a nearly perfect scenario. Donald Crisp's direction is praiseworthy in the manner in which he has appreciated the dramatic values and provided appropriate backgrounds. The interpretation is taken care of by a cast of competent players headed by Jack Holt, Wanda Hawley, Agnes Ayres and Lewis Stone.

PROGRAM READER

The Civil War is far enough removed in the background of history to cast a glamour over it and yet it is recent enough to make us feel at times as if we were actual participants. This is by way of explaining that William Gillette's celebrated play of the Civil War, "Held by the Enemy," has been adapted to the screen and will make its appearance on the ———— screen next ————. Our patrons will be lifted out of their environment through this fine old play which is ever young. It tells a tale of a wonderful romance between a Yankee officer and a Southern girl, and attending this sentiment is an assortment of highly colored situations which carry the utmost in appeal. An all-star cast interprets it.

SUGGESTIONS

Make use of the fact that four well known players compose an all-star cast for this adaptation of William Gillette's play. Feature the author and tell that he is an accomplished actor as well as a playwright. Bring out that it offers a Civil War romance which emphasizes the attending conflict. Make use of the sentiment —the conflict of love versus duty which is carried in the breast of the hero. Play up the title and go after the older patrons—those who remember the play. Go after the G. A. R. and the Confederate veterans. Use atmosphere for your lobby. Have your musicians play the old songs such as "Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny," "Swanee River," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground."

CATCH LINES

See "Held by the Enemy," a picture version of William Gillette's celebrated play. An all-star cast enacts this throbbing romance of the Civil War.

"THE MASTER MIND"
(First National)

Melodrama of Interesting Quality

IT is the custom to expect a great deal of a Barrymore. The heralded name, alone, is of significant value. Lionel Barrymore, in "The Master Mind," it follows, paves the way to expectation. The reward is the portrayal of an intensely interesting if illogical story, with Mr. Barrymore in the title role.

The "master mind" is one that should have started dominating with telepathetic power, before the cause of the trouble started. Since the "master mind" had the power to bring about his revenge in a satisfactory manner, the source of the dissatisfaction should have been controlled, in the same way, in the beginning. But then, there would have been no story. Perhaps it would have been better so, since it is, except for interest, lacking as screen material. In only one or two instances does Mr. Barrymore live up to the name. There is plenty he might have done, to insert action. Instead, the action is told less convincingly in titles. The story, regardless, creates an intense curiosity in the first reel, and as the plot develops, it includes several surprising twists and unusual situations.

It cannot be said that the most is made of the opportunity, yet the discrepancy is not sufficiently evident to enhance the value of the picture to any great extent. It is melodrama, of melodramatic intent, rather than picture entertainment including every possible opening for eye-pleasing photography. In fact, an emergency call to strengthen the continuity and improve the photography might have made "The Master Mind" a decidedly better picture than it is. In the absence of these, however, it pleased a most critical audience, among the spectators, the writer, who witnessed a round of applause when the final fade out announced "the end."—Length, 7 reels.—Lillian Gale.

Photographed by T. L. Griffith and R. R. Schellinger.

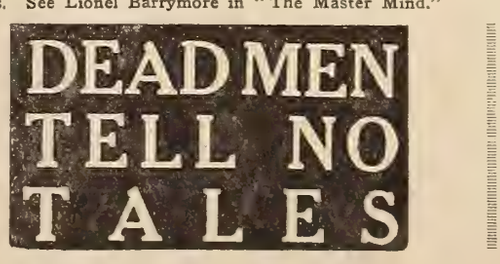
PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Lionel Barrymore, the talented star of stage and screen, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in an adaptation of Daniel G. Carter's play, "The Master Mind." This offering provides the virile star with ample opportunity to reveal his histrionic gifts and he takes fullest advantage of them. Mr. Barrymore appears as Henry Allen who resolves to take revenge upon the District Attorney for sending his brother to the electric chair. He maps out an elaborate revenge, and harbors his hatred for five years. Then he strikes but only after giving his enemy due warning.

But when the opponent is in his power he feels that his efforts are fruitless against a higher command than man-made vengeance. The girl who has been his instrument in mapping his revenge pleads and appeals to his better nature and he is forced to acknowledge his defeat. This play scored a sensation on the stage and as a picture it is filled with those tense situations and climaxes which keep one in suspense. Mr. Barrymore is supported by a competent cast. The backgrounds are rich in atmosphere, the photography being excellent.

PROGRAM READER

Lionel Barrymore, the emotional star of stage and screen, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in what is considered a worthy successor to "The Copperhead." This subject is "The Master Mind," an adaptation of the play of the same name by Daniel G. Carter. It affords the star with abundant opportunities to display his remarkable histrionic skill. He portrays a vengeful figure who conceives the plan to defeat his worst enemy because of the latter's heartlessness in sending his brother to the electric chair. How his plans mature, and how he is eventually defeated is told in action of tense dramatic moments. The picture is a triumph for the star. Don't miss it.



SUGGESTIONS

This picture carries a good title which can be worked up with enthusiasm. Make use of the fact that as a play it created a sensation. Tell that it is an ideal vehicle for the display of Mr. Barrymore's histrionic skill. Tell that it treats in the psychology of a man's mind—of a man's soul. Bill it as a fascinating melodrama. Tell that it deals in mental telepathy—in the degeneration and regeneration of a man's soul. Play up the Barrymore name. It means much to the public. Use stills. Bill it as Whitman Bennett's first contribution for First National.

CATCH LINES

See the eminent star of stage and screen, Lionel Barrymore, in "The Master Mind," a play of deep passion, romance and hatreds. A play to make you think.

He was determined to execute his revenge. Did he succeed or did some one frustrate his plans. See Lionel Barrymore in "The Master Mind."

"THE PREY"
(Vitagraph)

Alice Joyce Has Highly Involved Story Here

IT's a highly involved story which Alice Joyce has in "The Prey"—a story which provides her ample acting opportunities which she takes care of with her customary vitality and charm. But it is not a sympathetic role by any means. A woman who sells herself to the highest bidder, even after he is condemned in her heart cannot command sympathy, even though she is forced into matrimony to save her brother from jail. The fiance is of a heroic mould—a figure who would bring unhappiness to his beloved through sheer determination of living up to justice. And sympathy cannot be extended to him either.

This character is represented as the district attorney whose ambition is to break up a gambling syndicate and punish its leader. He will not listen to the entreaties of the girl's father who is involved. Realizing his plight he commits suicide. And fuel is added to the fire. The misunderstanding grows deeper, with the result that the distressed woman marries her hated nemesis. Once in his power, the scalawag adds insult to insult, taunts her on every occasion until, becoming desperate, she flees to her erstwhile fiance. Such a course is just what her husband desires, since he can compromise her and humiliate her more deeply than ever. Most of the scenes comprise this game of "give and take," and while the action is fairly interesting at times it doesn't bear a very healthy quality. The evil man's day of reckoning comes when he conveniently dies of apoplexy.

This figure is really the most convincing in the picture. He plays his game with cool, calculating deliberation. The cards are all stacked in his favor. He has forced the girl to become his prey through the indictment of her brother. And he, seemingly, has the district attorney at his mercy until he is eliminated for the sake of bringing light out of darkness. "The Prey" is complicated, but due to a good continuity the scenes are easy to follow. But such stories of society, high finance and intrigue have lost some of their appeal through having them peopled with stilted characters. The heroine here tastes bitter, drags for four reels. The hero is relegated to the background until such time as he is needed for the happy ending and the picture belongs to the villain. L. Rogers Lytton gives a sinister touch to the interpretation. The offering is adequately lighted and photographed.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Prey," an Alice Joyce production, which will be shown at the ———— theatre on ———— of ———— week, gives the star many excellent opportunities for the display of her talent, charm and her power to portray emotion. Miss Joyce enacts the role of a young society girl romantically in love with a young attorney. The opening scene presents a party being given the girl by her father. After the guests have gone she is acquainted with the fact that her fiance is persecuting her father. The result is the engagement is broken.

The story certainly gives Miss Joyce plenty of emotional opportunities. As Helen Reardon she is forced to realize that either her father or her fiance is a person unworthy of respect; to feel that her lover is ungrateful; to learn that her brother is in disgrace and danger of prison; to consent to a marriage distasteful to her; to be filled with disgust for her licentious husband; to discover that her true lover's devotion to her had led him to permit her to misjudge him and in the end she finds happiness after all. "The Prey" is a tense drama of human emotion, misunderstanding and courage. Prominent in the supporting cast are Henry Hallam, L. Rogers Lytton, Harry Bentham. Calder Johnstone adapted the story while George L. Sargent directed.

PROGRAM READER

The many admirers of Alice Joyce will find unusual interest in the announcement that her latest picture, "The Prey," permits the emotional star to display her art and charm at their highest expression. In selecting Joseph Le Brandt's dramatic story of society, finance, politics and romance as an Alice Joyce special production, Vitagraph made a happy choice. It is hard indeed for an affectionate woman devoted to her father and deeply in love with her fiance, to decide which of the two is wrong in a vital matter where both cannot possibly be right. Such is the predicament of Alice Joyce in "The Prey" which comes to the ———— next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have a star who has an established following. Play up the fact that she will appear at your theatre in a story peculiarly suited to her emotional capabilities. Bring out that her art has matured—that she has no superior in enacting roles which call for the utmost expression of feminine charm. Play up the title and feature the picture as a tense drama of society, intrigue, misunderstanding and courage. Bring out that it carries every element necessary to hold the interest. Feature the other players. Use teasers and briefs for newspaper space. The star, her charming personality—Miss Joyce is your best bet. Tell them that the star is coming to the ————. And you will have a good patronage.

CATCH LINES

If you were the district attorney would you prosecute the husband of the woman you loved? See Alice Joyce in "The Prey," a picture of tense situations.

"SUNSET SPRAGUE"
(Fox)

Having Enough Thrills, It Makes a Good Western

"SUNSET SPRAGUE" should be well received, for it does all that it is supposed to—it provides plenty of action and plenty of thrills. The story is complicated as well as being familiar, but it is not too trite to be particularly in disfavor. Buck Jones is the star and he keeps up the good work of his former production with the result that he will not lose any of his admirers.

The high spots in the picture are a good fist fight and some thrilling action along the side of a high cliff, where Jones and the villain are engaged in a pistol battle. Jones throughout is made the bashful, but none the less chivalrous, son of the West. It is an attractive role, and Jones looks the part. His clean-cut personality makes him a fine screen type for Westerns.

The story concerns an orphan girl, whose father has been murdered immediately after he struck a gold mine. The location of the mine is unknown. The star makes the acquaintance of the girl's uncle, who is going to her protection in the land of lawlessness, and it soon becomes a two man job to protect the niece, for the villain is trying to frighten her into leaving her homestead. Jones incurs the enmity of this villain when he looms up as a rival for the girl's hand, and also on account of a fight which originated over the shooting of a dog.

The scenes on the mountain side form a sort of anti-climax, for the heroine is not concerned in them. Later he rescues her from the villainy of the heavy and another battle ensues.

Patsy de Forest plays opposite the star in a satisfactory manner. Others in the cast are Edwin Booth Tilton and Henry J. Herbert, who plays the villain. The production is well directed by Thomas N. Heffron and Paul Cazeneuve.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

THE CAST

Sunset Sprague.....Buck Jones
Rose Loring.....Patsey De Forest
Mace Dennison.....Henry J. Hebert
Lolita.....Gloria Payton

Photography by George Schneiderman.

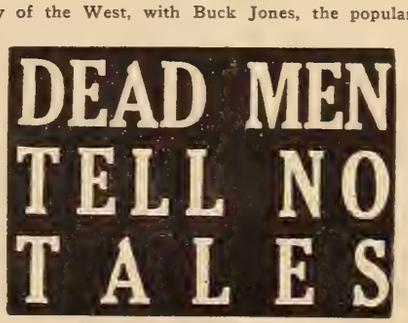
PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Buck Jones, the popular cowboy star, will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— in his latest production "Sunset Sprague." This is a story of the attractive West, and its attractive men. Jones plays the part of "Sunset" Sprague, a rugged type of man, who finds his love in the vast desert in which he lives. Riding alone one day, he aids a man who is being attacked by a bandit. The two become friends and Calico Barnes, the rescued man, tells Sprague that he is going to protect his niece who has been left alone in a country of lawlessness.

The task of protecting the girl proves to be a two man job, and Sprague willingly does his share. From then on the picture is one of thrilling action. Buck Jones is a typical Western hero and his part in this feature is one that suits him perfectly.

In the supporting cast are such players as Patsey de Forest, one of the prettiest leading ladies in filmdom, Edwin Booth Tilton, Gloria Payton, Henry Herbert, the most villainous hero on the screen, and Noble Johnson. The directing is the work of Paul Cazeneuve and Thomas N. Heffron.

PROGRAM READER



Buck Jones, popular cowboy actor, will be the star in "Sunset Sprague" which will be offered to the patrons of the ———— theatre on ————. "Sunset Sprague" is a story of the West, and one, it is predicted, that will find great favor among all lovers of actions and thrills. For it is replete with both and also contains that essential ingredient for a movie feast—romance. Patsey de Forest plays opposite the star, and is fast winning a reputation as being the most attractive leading lady in picturedom. The remainder of the cast is perfectly capable.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up Buck Jones in this production. He has a large following by this time and his admirers are sure to come to see him. Build up that the atmosphere of the production and promise plenty of action and thrills. You can get a teaser campaign from the title which may help. Western street stunts will attract attention, and can be well done with good types. You might have a lariat throwing competition for the boys on the stage during one night of the run, which should be mentioned in copy and which will create interest. Use plenty of stills showing close-ups of the star in your lobby.

CATCH LINES

A thrilling story of the West, with Buck Jones, the popular cowboy-actor in the leading role.

"GUILTY OF LOVE"
(Paramount-Artcraft)

Star Gives Splendid Portrayal of Mis-Led Girl

IT'S too bad Dorothy Dalton didn't have a stronger story in this production for her splendid portrayal of the principal role is so convincthat one cannot help but admire her acting.

As the young girl who accepts a position as governess in a wealthy family, only to be misled by the son, whom she finally compells to marry her at the point of a pistol, she saves the picture by her naturalness.

In the lighter scenes she is subdued and adds contrast in the heavier moments when she is dramatic and emotional.

Although the plot runs along smoothly for three or four reels and is interesting, it switches about to the old cut and dried themes that we have witnessed many times. For instance, when the heroine leaves her husband after forcing him to marry her, she accepts the same old position as teacher in a country school. And then in the same old way the hero follows her to the little schoolhouse where he tells her he cannot live without her.

She consents to go to his home only on condition that she act as mother to their child. And after many talky scenes they are brought together by the baby.

Although the picture slows up considerably during the last two reels, it has a certain attraction backed up by the star's acting and a good supporting cast.

It will interest, but that is all.—Length, 5 reels.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Dorothy Dalton in an intensely human drama of domestic life, "Guilty of Love," a Paramount-Artcraft production will be the attraction at the ———— theatre next ————.

The story which is an adaptation of Avery Hopwood's stage success "This Woman-This Man" gives Miss Dalton an excellent opportunity to display her emotional ability for the picture abounds in strong dramatic moments.

The star has the role of a New England maid who, impovished by the death of her father, secures a situation as governess in a rich family. Falling in love with her employer's brother, her youth and innocence get her into difficulties, for the young man after returning from a trip abroad learns that she is about to become a mother.

A forced marriage is the result—and then the heroine disappears. Years later the husband discovers her teaching school in a small country town.

She surprises him in her home and orders him to leave, which he refuses to do unless he can take his son with him. But just then a dramatic series of events occur which brings the estranged couple together and they agree to start all over again.

PROGRAM READER

"Guilty of Love" is Dorothy Dalton's latest Paramount-Artcraft production. This feature should interest you because it is an intensely human drama of domestic life and one that grips and draws your attention from beginning to end.

It is taken from the stage success of Avery Hopwood, "This Woman-This Man," the author being one of the best known writers of stage plays in the country.

To verify this one need only glance at a few of his latest successes.. "Fair and Warmer" had a run of two seasons on Broadway, New York, "Seven Days" was another big hit and his latest "The Gold Diggers," starring Ina Claire, scored another ten strike.

In "Guilty of Love" Miss Dalton plays the role of a young girl, who, impovished at the death of her father, secures a position as governess.

An unfortunate love affair with her employer's brother follows, and finding that she is about to become a mother compels him to marry her at the pistol's point. And then she goes away.

Years afterward the husband discovers her teaching school in a small country town. A dramatic series of events follow in which the estranged couple are finally brought together. And all because of their loving child.

SUGGESTIONS

This feature will interest but it will not create any unusual havoc. It has its strong moments but they are not of the kind that will startle or greatly excite.

Play up the star as strongly as you can and run stills of the production in convenient places.

If your patrons care for authors play up Avery Hopwood, for he is one of our best playwrights. Mention some of his familiar plays, among which are "Fair and Warmer," which had a long run on Broadway, "Seven Days" another big hit and "The Gold Diggers," which is said to be his best.

Also play up the cast among whom are Edward Langford, Augusta Anderson and Charles Lane.

"THE LIGHT WOMAN"

RATHER an old story about a virtuous young girl, in love and engaged to the son of a rich man. The son, in the midst of sowing his wild oats is spending copious quantities of father's money, purchasing jewels and laboring under other heavy expense in connection with his attempt to satisfy the "other woman." For there is "another." She is much older, sophisticated and is playing with the son of the rich man, causing him to shamefully neglect his fiancee, until, as she thinks, there offers an opportunity to get closer to the bank roll, by ensnaring the father, himself, with her "vamp" charms. And, in the words of Robert Browning, such is the way with "The Light Woman." The screen play is founded on his poem of the same name. Therefore, we would scarcely expect anything startlingly new.

This is a picture which will lend a hand in pleasing the patrons of theatres, where said patrons are fond of seeing the "end" of the villain or adventuress. One where virtue triumphs superbly at the last and brings about the usual happy "clinch." It is not a picture which will hold more than ordinary interest, there being a noticeable evidence of the absence of respect for detail.

Some of the sets deserve favorable comment and while of no particular strength, the cast has been carefully assigned their respective roles.—Lillian Gale.

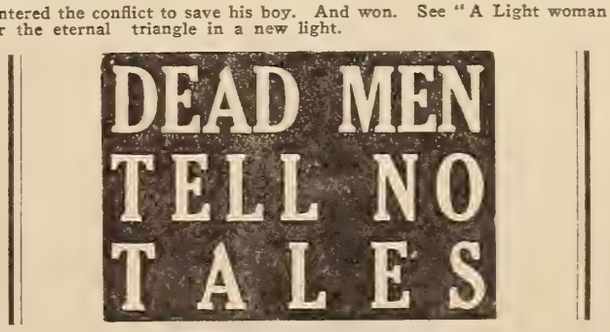
PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"A Light Woman" is the name of the American picture which comes to the ———— theatre on ———— of ———— week featuring Helen Jerome Eddy. This is an adaptation by George L. Cox of Robert Browning's poem of the same name, and tells a story of the subtle power of a woman"s charm-misused, with the inevitable disgrace of a man who cannot withstand her spell, and of the strength of another man to resist her influence. The author was not describing a vampire, but simply a "light woman," a type which has a wide range of appeal.

In the photoplay Miss Eddy, as the ingenue, makes an ideal foil for Claire DuBrey in the siren"s role. Charles Clary, in the role of the older man, gives a polished performance, while Mallam Cooley is the youth who reforms in the nick of time. "A Light Woman" is a story based upon an age-old theme, detailing effectively that youth will have its fling regardless of the consequences. The fight of the father to discourage the youth and outwit the siren forms the basis of much interesting drama. George L. Cox adapted and directed the feature. His backgrounds are entirely appropriate and his continuity is a work to be praised.

PROGRAM READER

An unusually strong cast of talented players headed by Helen Jerome Eddy will appear in the American production of Robert Browning's classic poem, "A Light Woman," which is to be shown at the ———— theatre next ————. The cast includes Charles Clary, Hallam Cooley, Claire DuBrey and others—names which are familiar to ———— patrons. The story gives these players unusual dramatic scope since it is based upon the age-old theme of a youth, who, determined to taste the fullness of life regardless of the heartaches of his devoted parents and his adoring fiancee, finds himself the willing victim to the seductive charms of a beautiful siren. The picture is rich in conflict since the father is equally determined to save the youth. George L. Cox adapted and directed the offering.



SUGGESTIONS

Bring out that Robert Browning's poem is the inspiration of this feature. You might print the poem for leaflet display. Treat it as a drama based upon an age-old theme, the determination of youth to taste life's pleasures regardless of the consequences. Tell that the picture offers a deal of dramatic conflict and depicts in glowing colors, the eternal battle of the sexes. Mention the players, telling that Miss Eddy, Mr. Clary and Miss DuBrey are well known and popular players. Tell that George L. Cox is the adaptor and director and that he has produced a picture which is entitled to everyone's earnest consideration. You might stage a prologue in harmony with the theme. Have a dancer lightly garbed execute some classical dances. Or a group of children dressed in white blowing soap bubbles.

CATCH LINES

Youth was determined to have its fling, but experience came to the rescue and saved him. See "A Light Woman," a picturization of Robert Browning's poem.

He entered the conflict to save his boy. And won. See "A Light woman" and discover the eternal triangle in a new light.

UNDER NORTHERN LIGHTS (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST....JULY 31
"Interest and incident strong in this one."—M. P. News.

UNTAMED, THE (FOX) TOM MIX.....SEPT. 4
"First class western melodrama with star in likeable role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew well during week, but picture replaced Saturday by Pearl White in 'The White Moll.'"

VILLAGE SLEUTH, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) CHARLES RAY.....SEPT. 25
"Ray scores again as country yokel."—M. P. News.

WALL STREET MYSTERY, A (ARROW) GLEN WHITE.....JUNE 5
"Love interest lacking in average detective story."—M. P. News.

WEEK-END, THE (AMERICAN-PATHE) MARGARITA FISHER...AUG. 21
"Typical Hamilton story well produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture with week much below the average in receipts."

"Good Hookum and farce comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A splendid picture. Played it two days to average business." An enjoyable farce comedy that seemed to please. Big business one day." "Rather good comedy. Can't kick about the business." "Average picture with usual audiences."

"Wally Reid and motor truck shine in this one."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One hundred per cent entertainment. Story, cast, photography, direction, in fact every bit of it was just good stuff." "Audience liked popular star, Wallace Reid, in this picture. We played to big business for entire week." "Great picture. Drew large audiences." "Picture was excellent. Drew well all week. Exceptional crowds." "Extra big in every way. Everybody liked the picture and it held up for the entire week. Reid a great favorite." "Wallace Reid held and still holds the Sunday record for the greatest amount of business in one day. Receipts were $3,590 Sunday." "Picture fair with box office receipts ranking the same. The star constituted the highest drawing card." "Held feature over for second week to big business. We regard it as Wallace Reid's best picture." "One of the best Reid pictures and a better puller than 'Sick Abed.' Fans remarked on better appearance of star without feminine make-up and mannerisms revealed in 'Sick Abed.'"

WHILE NEW YORK SLEEPS (FOX) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 7
"New York's night life graphically depicted in three separate stories."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Better than average business."

"A Stevenson novel, vividly portrayed by Tourneur."—M. P. News.

WHISPER MARKET, THE (VITAGRAPH) CORINNE GRIFFITH..SEPT. 4
"Despite bad cutting, this picture is thoroughly interesting."—M. P. News.

"A strong, well-acted drama for a high class audience."—M. P. News.

"Good audience picture with great child role."—M. P. News.

WOMAN'S BUSINESS, A (B. A. ROLFE-JANS) OLIVE TELL.....AUG. 7
"Only average interest here, despite attractive theme."—M. P. News.

WOMAN'S MAN (ARROW FILM CORP.) ROMAINE FIELDING..JULY 31
"An exciting story full of incident."—M. P. News.

WONDER MAN, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) GEORGES CARPENTIER.....JUNE 12
"Picture carries interest and a colorful personality."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Did not do very good business on account of quake scares and hot weather." "Audience turned away first three days. Filled house remainder of week. One of the best attractions of the season." "Not considered good because too much rough stuff and audience disappointed with acting."

"Rich production and good acting save this one."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good production to big and average business for one week." "They liked this one and it went over big." "Played this feature two days to big and average business. It went well and is a good feature."

WORLD OF FOLLY, A (FOX) VIVIAN RICH.....JUNE 26
"Hackneyed story fails to create interest."—M. P. News.

YES OR NO (FIRST NATIONAL) NORMA TALMADGE.....JULY 17
"Two ordinary stories in one with star playing dual role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One week to good business and satisfaction despite extremely hot weather." "An excellent picture to big business for one week." "Went big and played to good business for one week." "Drew well its entire run because of star, Norma Talmadge. She was not at her best. The story was only ordinary." "Drew fair patronage. On the whole, was not given favorable press criticism." "Good business; star the drawing card. A fairly good picture." "Stood them up for greater part of seven days run. Norma Talmadge real box office magnet for this house. Audience enjoyed picture." "Very good; two days to big and average business."

"Flashbacks" on Earlier Releases

"The Adventurer" (Fox)—"A good picture to big business for three days."

"Youthful Folly" (Selznick)—"A dandy—went big."

"High and Dizzy" (Pathe)—"Lloyd greatest drawing card this summer. Stood them up for five days."

"Sink or Swim" (Fox)—"Patrons did not like this one."

"Dangerous Days" (Goldwyn)—"Fair—subject matter a little passé."

"Silk Husbands" (Equity)—"Drew well for two days. Only ordinary audiences thereafter."

"The Law of Yukon" (Metro)—"Large crowds for first four days and last day. Much favorable comment on the part of the audience."

"The Lost Battalion" (W. H. Productions)—"Broke all house records for me for two days at advance admissions."

"Alice Lake" (Metro)—"A splendid production that pleased. Big business one day."

"The Last of the Duanes" (Fox)—"A good Farnum western. Big business one day."

"The Spite Bride" (Selznick)—"A good Olive Thomas picture. Average business one day."

"The Great Sinner" (James K. Hackett)—"A poor picture. Production rather antique."

"The Triflers" (Universal)—"A pleasing little picture with competent star. Big business one day."

"The Willow Tree" (Metro)—"Has popular star and unusually artistic production but story is lacking in interest. Patrons did not seem to like it."

"Don't Ever Marry" (First National)—"A splendid farce comedy. Direction and continuity A-1. Acting, settings and photography also good, making the whole a smooth running production. Extra big business one day."

"Passion's Playground" (First National)—"An excellent production—better than most others with this star. Big business one day."

"A Damsel in Distress" (June Caprice)—"An enjoyable light production that pleased. Big business one day."

The Extravagance of Cheapness

The important thing about any purchase is not what you pay, but what you get for the purchase price. The "cheap" purchase is usually the most extravagant.

Simply and briefly: The relation of first cost to final economy is the important thing.

Producers, distributors and exhibitors generally concede that Rothacker Prints are the most desirable from the standpoint of screen brilliancy, security, service and general satisfaction. As a matter of fact, the many savings in Rothacker Prints and Rothacker Service soon cancel the slight difference in first cost over less beautiful and less durable prints.

There are many who still believe that Rothacker Prints are "too expensive," but actually this is not the case. You will probably be very much surprised to learn how little more Rothacker Prints really cost.

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

THIS industry is steadily approaching business economy and efficiency. One of the reforms this year will be the placing of trade advertising only after a careful test has been made, by the advertiser himself, of circulation value. Thousands of dollars can be saved for a few hundred. Make your test.

"A Picture that Will Be The Talk of America"

CECIL B. DeMILLE'S production "Something to Think About," opened Sunday, October 3rd at the Rialto Theatre, New Haven.

AFTER the performance, P. B. Maxon, manager, sent the following telegram:

> "All house records, including the exceptional one made by 'Humoresque,' were broken tonight with Cecil B. DeMille's 'Something to Think About,' which I believe will be the talk of America in a few months.
> "It is the most amazing and inspiring thing I have ever seen."

Although this picture has only begun its march of triumph, sufficient returns are already in to justify the prediction that it will break all motion picture records everywhere, including those set by previous DeMille successes.

It Beats "Humoresque"

DURING the first week of the New York showing of "The Restless Sex" there were 18,484 paid admissions. This breaks all records for the theatre, including that set by "Humoresque," which was 17,859. And this in a theatre which seats only 670!

"Will be a best seller just as the novel was. The 'Ball of the Gods' belongs to the famous spectacles of film history. The picture really deserves a laurel wreath."—Evening Mail

"Moves with variety and unfailing interest." —The Sun

"Miss Davies revealed an unusual dramatic range. The eyes are intrigued by the beauty of the film, and the 'Ball of the Gods' is one of the most brilliant bits ever put on the screen. The picture marks the arrival of Miss Davies, one of the most beautiful of stars, as an actress of dramatic range." —Evening Telegram

All of which goes to show the wise exhibitor that "The Restless Sex" is one of the season's triumphs.

Your whole town will see it and talk about it.

"I'M going back to the city. I can't give up the life."

This note from her—and nothing else. After he had taken her from her cheap theatrical boarding house—taken her into green fields and the open country—and given her a real untarnished love.

WHAT did it mean? Why did she turn her back on the life that had opened out to her?

It is a heart-filling idyll that ends in a happy smile. A story of suffering that ends in joy. That moistens the eyes and warms the heart.

And a box-office winner because it is real and true and wholesome.

INFORMATION

What Will Service Cost?

Singing and Musical Acts, Artists and Attractions.

In the flood of inquiries received since we announced the opening of this Exchange, the above is the predominating question.

The answer is, for the average city and the average theatre, right around $250 per week, plus a fee of $10 per week for booking service.

The next question is, "What will I get?" It is a fair question, deserving a frank answer.

Holders of Manhattan Booking Exchange contracts will get a continuous booking of high class singers; singles, duos, trios and quartettes; of instrumental singles, duos, trios and quartettes; and of novelties, such as miniature jazz orchestras, etc. They will get this booking in full or split-week service, consistently and continuously, during the life of their contract.

And then the question: "How do I know you can furnish this service?"

Look us up; investigate us through this publication; through your film exchange, your bank, or any source you wish to use. You will find that we have the resources, the connections, the men of ability, and the knowledge essential to rendering this service. If we don't "deliver," we lose. Anyone can lose money—we expect to make it—for you as well as ourselves. That's our motive.

Exclusive franchises in each city—if you haven't filed your application may we suggest immediate action?

Do I Need This Service?

Do My Audiences Want Singing and Musical Acts, Artists, Attractions?

Maybe not—but there seems an overwhelming belief that you and they do. Let's see what it means:

This service means, under prevailing theatrical conditions, that the theatre with this service will be the musical center of the town; that it will be here that the "hit" songs will be heard first. Here will the concert artists sing, here will there be novelty.

Manhattan service is the best in the world of its kind—it has contracts already with the talent needed in this particular field; it is operated by experts in this type of work; men qualified to "deliver." No "opposition" can possibly compete with you in the standard of entertainment offered. A broad statement, but a true one. Time will prove it.

Are your audiences any different from others? The world loves music—rallies to song. Here in New York city, the outstanding successes in the motion picture world are the Rialto, Rivoli, Strand, and Capitol. Take a cue from them.

Perhaps you are playing to capacity now. Fine. But does it mean nothing to be the leader; to be the first to introduce the new thing? "Good will" is a fickle thing. Better keep it if you can. Let it always be said that your house is the leader.

Remember this—we don't want to serve you unless it means profit for you. Our contract is, we think, the fairest ever devised for theatrical bookings.

If you haven't applied for this service—a telegram is what the wise showman would send.

Is My House Properly Equipped?

How Much Stage Room, Lighting Equipment, Dressing Rooms, etc., Needed?

Stage Room: Four feet into clear in front of screen is sufficient. If there are no "entrances" from the sides of stage to this space, our representative will show you how to arrange showings.

Lighting: You need a spotlight, usual house lights, and if possible a first border light and footlights should be arranged. You need the various colored mediums for the spot, and variously tinted lamps for border and foots. Again, our representative will give the necessary assistance and advice with respect to these items.

Dressing Rooms: You should have two; they should be clean, pleasant and tidy. Your artists will appreciate and work the better for pleasant surroundings. In fact, we do not care to book where we are not assured of such surroundings for them, and courteous, considerate treatment throughout engagements.

Orchestra: A piano alone, an organ alone, or up to any sized orchestra. But no matter how many or how few musicians, let them be real musicians. They will have real singers to play for, and just anybody that can play won't do. Whether you take this service or not—too much importance cannot be laid upon the necessity of having whatever music you offer, played right—not just pounded out.

On all questions of presentation you will find our representatives informed, ready to help, anxious to advise. They are qualified experts—that is why we have employed them. They are not anxious about the "next train out" until they have thoroughly done their job with you.

There has never been as complete a service scheme devised in this particular line—the live showman will recognize that—and will get his application for the service in to this office QUICK!

Public Interest in Basil King Drama Causes Longer New York and Chicago Engagements.

So great has been the sucess and public appreciation of "Earthbound," the screen version of Basil King's drama now running at the Astor and at the Playhouse, Chicago, that the engagement of the picture has been extended in both cities "Earthbound" opened at the Astor on August 10 for what was originally scheduled to be a run of three weeks, but so wide has been the appeal of the picture the public has shown increasing interest during its metropolitan stay

"Earthbound" is one of the finest contributions to the screen, and Samuel Goldwyn deserves not only the congratulations, but the support of the motion picture public for his foresight and courage in producing a picture so far out of the beaten track carrying as it does so true and fine a message Whether one agrees with Mr King's theory or not it is beautiful and uplifting, and those who have the interests of the screen at heart feel that the subject is one that is befitting its dignity

THE STORY IN SKELETON FORM

Three college chums write their own creed, which claims there is no sin, no God, no eternity, and every man for himself. During manhood's estate the two pals live their lives despite marriage obligations. But the third, Harvey Breck, achieves a more wholesome philosophy, and escapes the earthbound theories, believing more in the spiritual forces of right thinking and clean living. He cannot, however, convince his friends. Daisy, the voluptuous loving wife of Jim, makes violent love to the unwilling Dick, whose wife and child suffer mentally from neglect. Dick prepares to elope with his pal's wife, and Jim kills him on the stairs of their clubhouse. But Dick's spirit cannot rest—it is earthbound until his sins are forgiven. "Earthbound," a photo-play by Basil King, produced by the Goldwyn Picture Corporation, is very likely to have an extended run at the Astor Theatre, where it has scored a substantial success

Mr King's story deals with life beyond the grave. It is presented with dignity and intelligence An outraged husband shoots down his best friend who has betrayed him The ghost of the slain man starts to walk and appears in nearly every scene throughout the remaining five reels The handling of this phase of the story is interesting, and some remarkable effects are produced by the cleverest sort of trick photography.

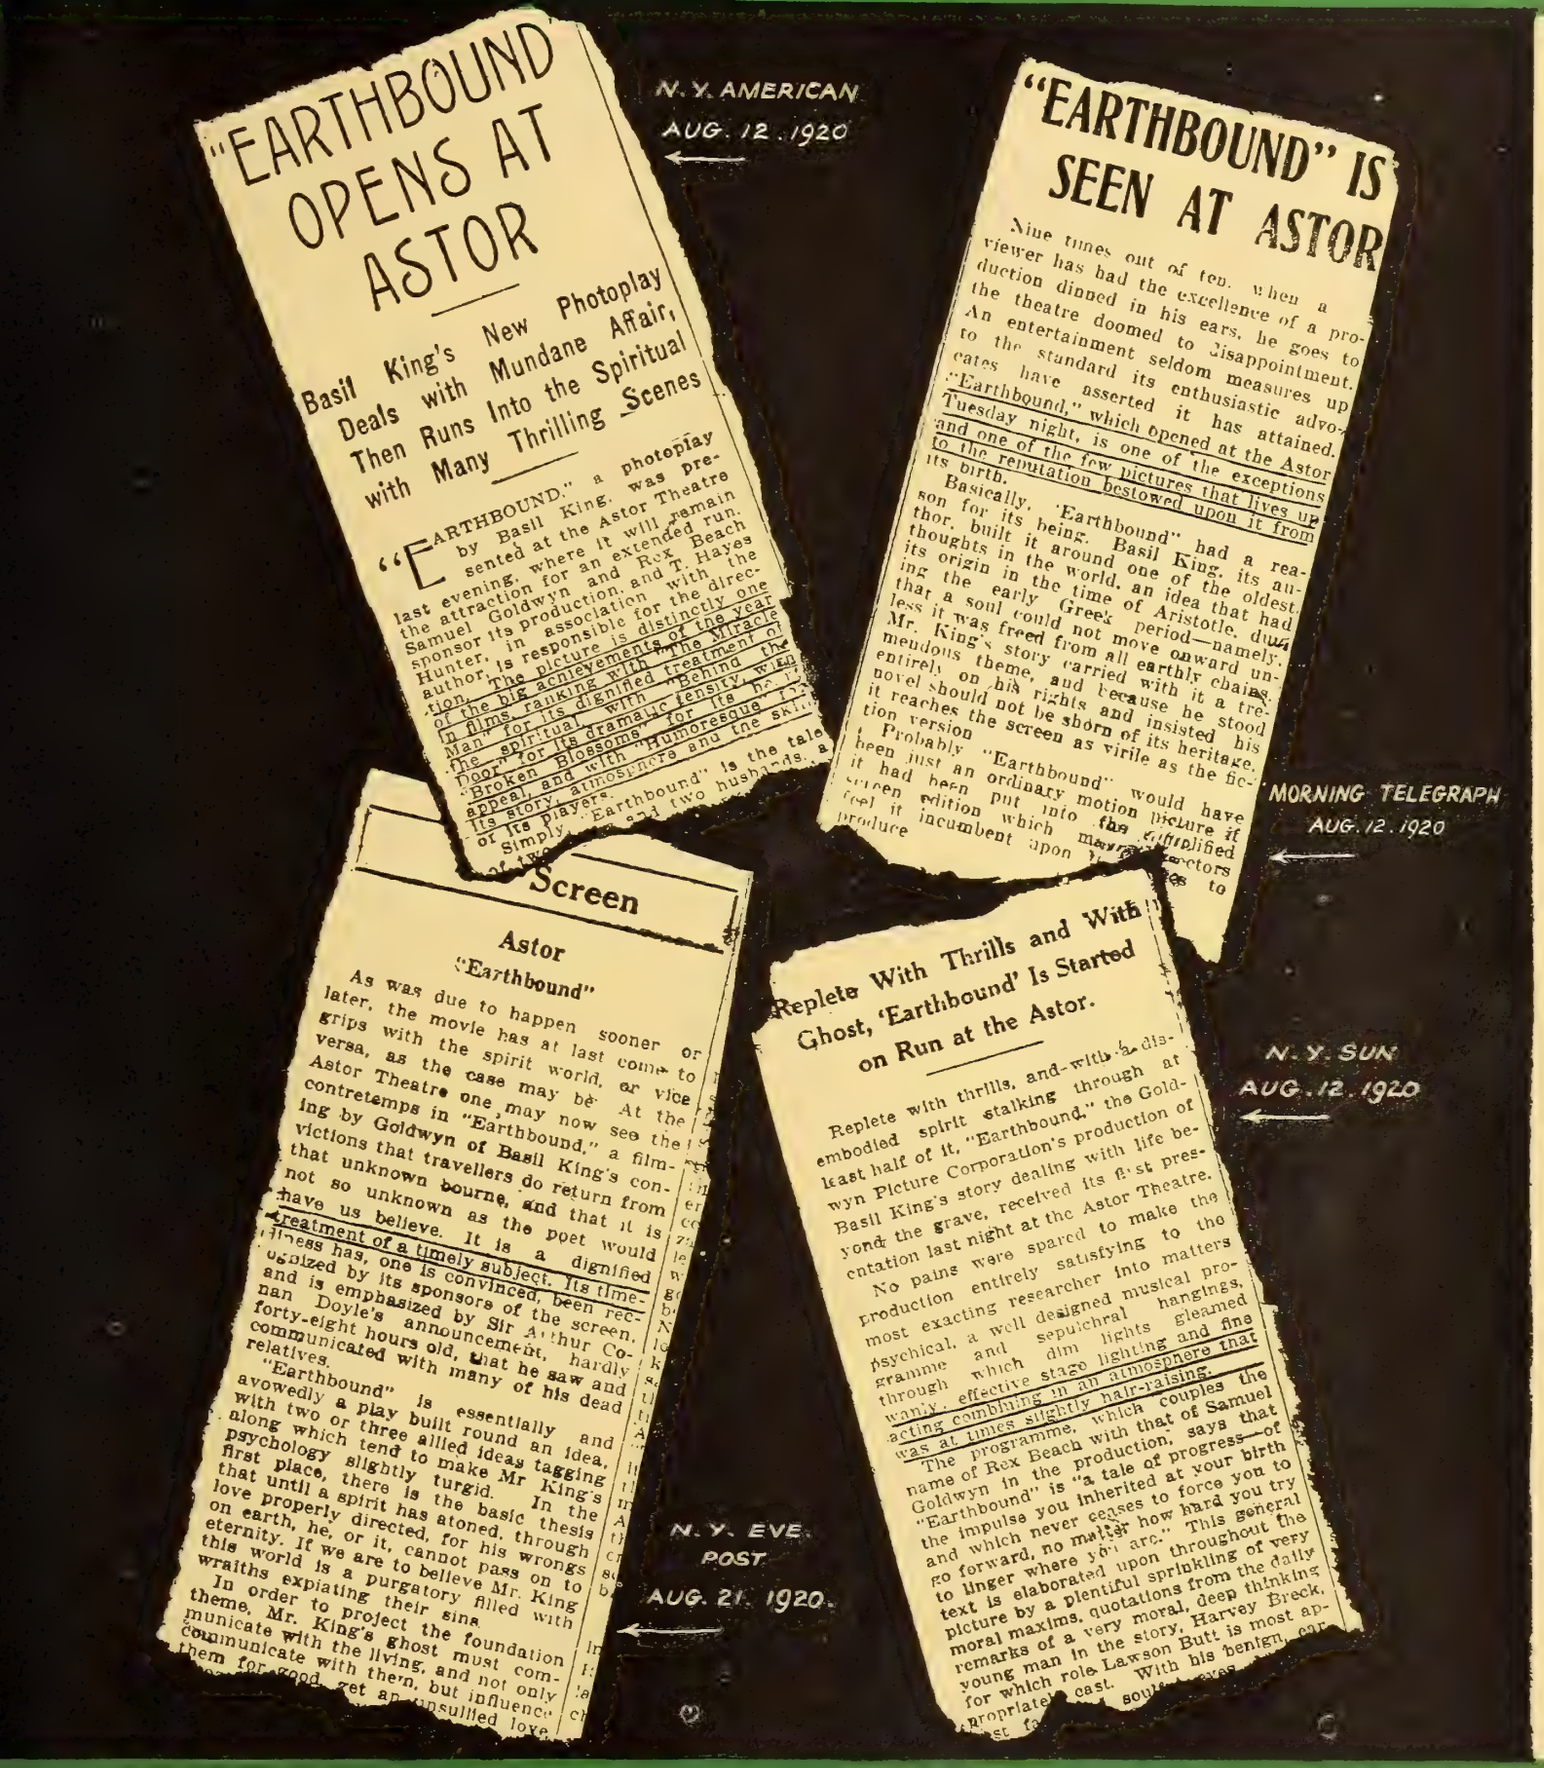
"EARTHBOUND" GIVES MARVELS IN MOTION PHOTOGRAPHY ART.

In "Earthbound," Basil King's photo-drama of the unseen world, presented for the first time last night at the Astor Theatre, perfection in photography to date is seen. "Earthbound" is a story of progress—of the impulse inherited at birth and which never ceases to force one to go forward, no matter how hard one tries to linger, presented in a most picturesque manner by Samuel Goldwyn and Rex Beach. The photo-play was directed by T. Hayes Hunter and gives unusual opportunities for technique in motion pictures.



The drama is an absorbing one in which some excellentt acting is seen. The creed of two Harvard men "No God, No Love No Future Life" serves to show that their ideas were faulty and that love is the predominating factor in life, for as one of the lines reads, "Love misused puts all creation wrong."

The return, in image, of "Dick" Desborough, played by Wyndham Standing, to guide his wife, child and friends, even the college chum who shot him, in the paths of love, is one of the inspiring parts of the picture. Basil King's New Photoplay Deals with Mundane Affair, Then Runs Into the Spiritual with Many Thrilling Scenes

"EARTHBOUND," a photoplay by Basil King, was presented at the Astor Theatre last evening, where it will remain the attraction for an extended run. Samuel Goldwyn and Rex Beach sponsor its production, and T. Hayes Hunter, in association with the author, is responsible for the direction. The picture is distinctly one of the big achievements of the year in films, ranking with "The Miracle Man" for its dignified treatment of the spiritual, with "Behind the Door" for its dramatic tensity, with "Broken Blossoms" for its [illegible] appeal, and with "Humoresque" for its story, atmosphere and the skill of its players.

Nine times out of ten, when a reviewer has had the excellence of a production dinned in his ears, he goes to the theatre doomed to disappointment. An entertainment seldom measures up to the standard its enthusiastic advocates have asserted it has attained. "Earthbound," which opened at the Astor Tuesday night, is one of the exceptions and one of the few pictures that lives up to the reputation bestowed upon it from its birth.

Basically, "Earthbound" had a reason for its being. Basil King, its author, built it around one of the oldest thoughts in the world, an idea that had its origin in the time of Aristotle, during the early Greek period—namely, that a soul could not move onward unless it was freed from all earthly chains. Mr. King's story carried with it a tremendous theme, and because he stood entirely on his rights and insisted his novel should not be shorn of its heritage, it reaches the screen as virile as the fiction version.

Probably "Earthbound" would have been just an ordinary motion picture if it had been put into the [illegible] screen edition which [illegible] feel it incumbent upon [illegible] produce

"Earthbound"

As was due to happen sooner or later, the movie has at last come to grips with the spirit world, or vice versa, as the case may be. At the Astor Theatre one may now see the contretemps in "Earthbound," a filming by Goldwyn of Basil King's convictions that travellers do return from that unknown bourne, and that it is not so unknown as the poet would have us believe. It is a dignified treatment of a timely subject. Its timeliness has, one is convinced, been recognized by its sponsors of the screen, and is emphasized by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's announcement, hardly forty-eight hours old, that he saw and communicated with many of his dead relatives.

"Earthbound" is essentially and avowedly a play built round an idea, with two or three allied ideas tagging along which tend to make Mr King's psychology slightly turgid. In the first place, there is the basic thesis that until a spirit has atoned, through love properly directed, for his wrongs on earth, he, or it, cannot pass on to eternity. If we are to believe Mr. King this world is a purgatory filled with wraiths expiating their sins.

In order to project the foundation theme, Mr. King's ghost must communicate with the living, and not only communicate with them, but influence them for good, get an unsullied love

Replete With Thrills and With Ghost, 'Earthbound' Is Started on Run at the Astor.

Replete with thrills, and with a diaembodied spirit stalking through at least half of it, "Earthbound," the Goldwyn Picture Corporation's production of Basil King's story dealing with life beyond the grave, received its first presentation last night at the Astor Theatre.

No pains were spared to make the production entirely satisfying to the most exacting researcher into matters psychical, a well designed musical programme and sepulchral hangings, through which dim lights gleamed wanly, effective stage lighting and fine acting combining in an atmosphere that was at times slightly hair-raising.

The programme, which couples the name of Rex Beach with that of Samuel Goldwyn in the production, says that "Earthbound" is "a tale of progress—of the impulse you inherited at your birth and which never ceases to force you to go forward, no matter how hard you try to linger where you are." This general text is elaborated upon throughout the picture by a plentiful sprinkling of very moral maxims, quotations from the daily remarks of a very moral, deep thinking young man in the story, Harvey Breck, for which role Lawson Butt is most appropriate [illegible] cast. THERE is a whole picture in those four words, spoken towards the end of one of the most heart-touching photodramas ever screened.

"Mother—I've come home!"

Instinctively, you know the story—and you know, as a showman, that never before have your patrons been so eager for a real home-and-mother play—for a story that would touch every heart—for a cast that could play such a story to perfection—for a production that would satisfy in every last faithful detail.

It was Mother Love which made "The Heart of Humanity" the one great outstanding triumph of its year—Mother Love and the acting of DOROTHY PHILLIPS and MARGARET MANN—and it is Mother Love and these same two splendid players which make "ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN" the picture of the hour today.

From small-town to big city goes the action of "ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN"—from the shabby little parlor of a village blacksmith to the mighty stage of the Metropolitan and back again. And when you have come back—back home with Aurora Meridith, the gorgeous songbird whose voice will never charm the world again—you will have run the gamut of human ambitions and passions in an unequalled drama of Mother Love whose appeal for you personally, no less than for your patrons, will live forever.

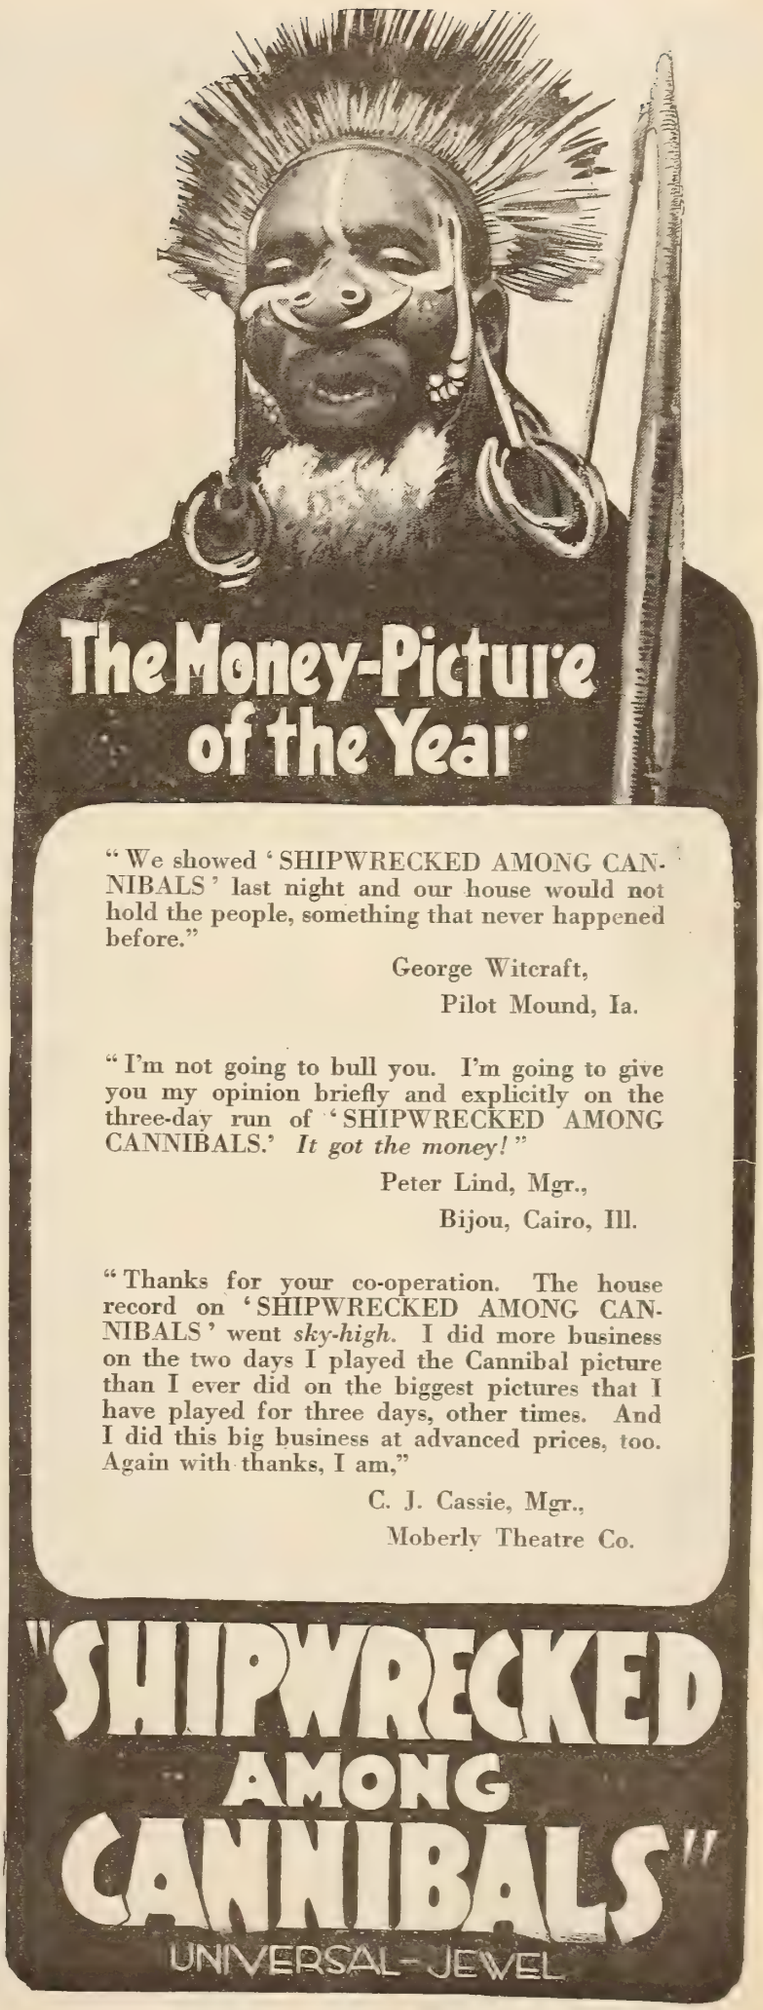
"ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN"

Reason No. 3

WHY "The Devil's Passkey" is the one great dramatic achievement of 1920

THE hour is midnight—the place, the Paris apartment of Warren Goodwright. They sit there—Goodwright's all too pretty wife, and the man who, Paris, says, is her lover—the candles flickering down to their sockets, the conversation halted, the wine untasted. Down in the dark street below the echoing footsteps of Warren Goodwright, the author who knows that two people have ruined him forever, the poor cuckold who now will take his just revenge, are coming nearer—and nearer—and nearer. And they know that he is coming.

Inevitable! That's the word! The oldest art of the dramatist—the art of the oldest dramatist—the art of the youngest of those dramatists who will never grow old—the art of Von Stroheim. You know that the woman is not guilty—yet you concede that there is no way in which the husband can know what you know—and you can not see what can prevent a terrible catastrophe. Why not view this remarkable picture and try to figure out the probable ending of this situation?



Carl Laemmle offers Von Stroheim's Universal-Jewel Master-Play

PHOTOPLAY Magazine declared that "Kiss Me Caroline," the first of the New Christies, was the best comedy of the month.

We repeated this to you and asked you to watch the rest of them—told you that they would be better and better.

Every NEW Christie comedy is just a little better than the one that went before—because they have behind them the inspiration of exhibitor success, appreciation of audiences, praise of newspapers everywhere.

A PERSONAL GUARANTEE

By HARRY A·SHERMAN

CONCERNING my announcement of the formation of SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS CORPORATION, I cannot urge the Independent Distributor too strongly to consider the profit-making possibilities, which the plan offers him·

I have two productions now ready, and a third well on the way toward completion, which I will match against the best attractions on any program now in the field for bona fide entertainment and box office value·

SHERMAN PRODUCTIONS

featuring JOSEPH J. DOWLING
"The MIRACLE MAN of the screen"

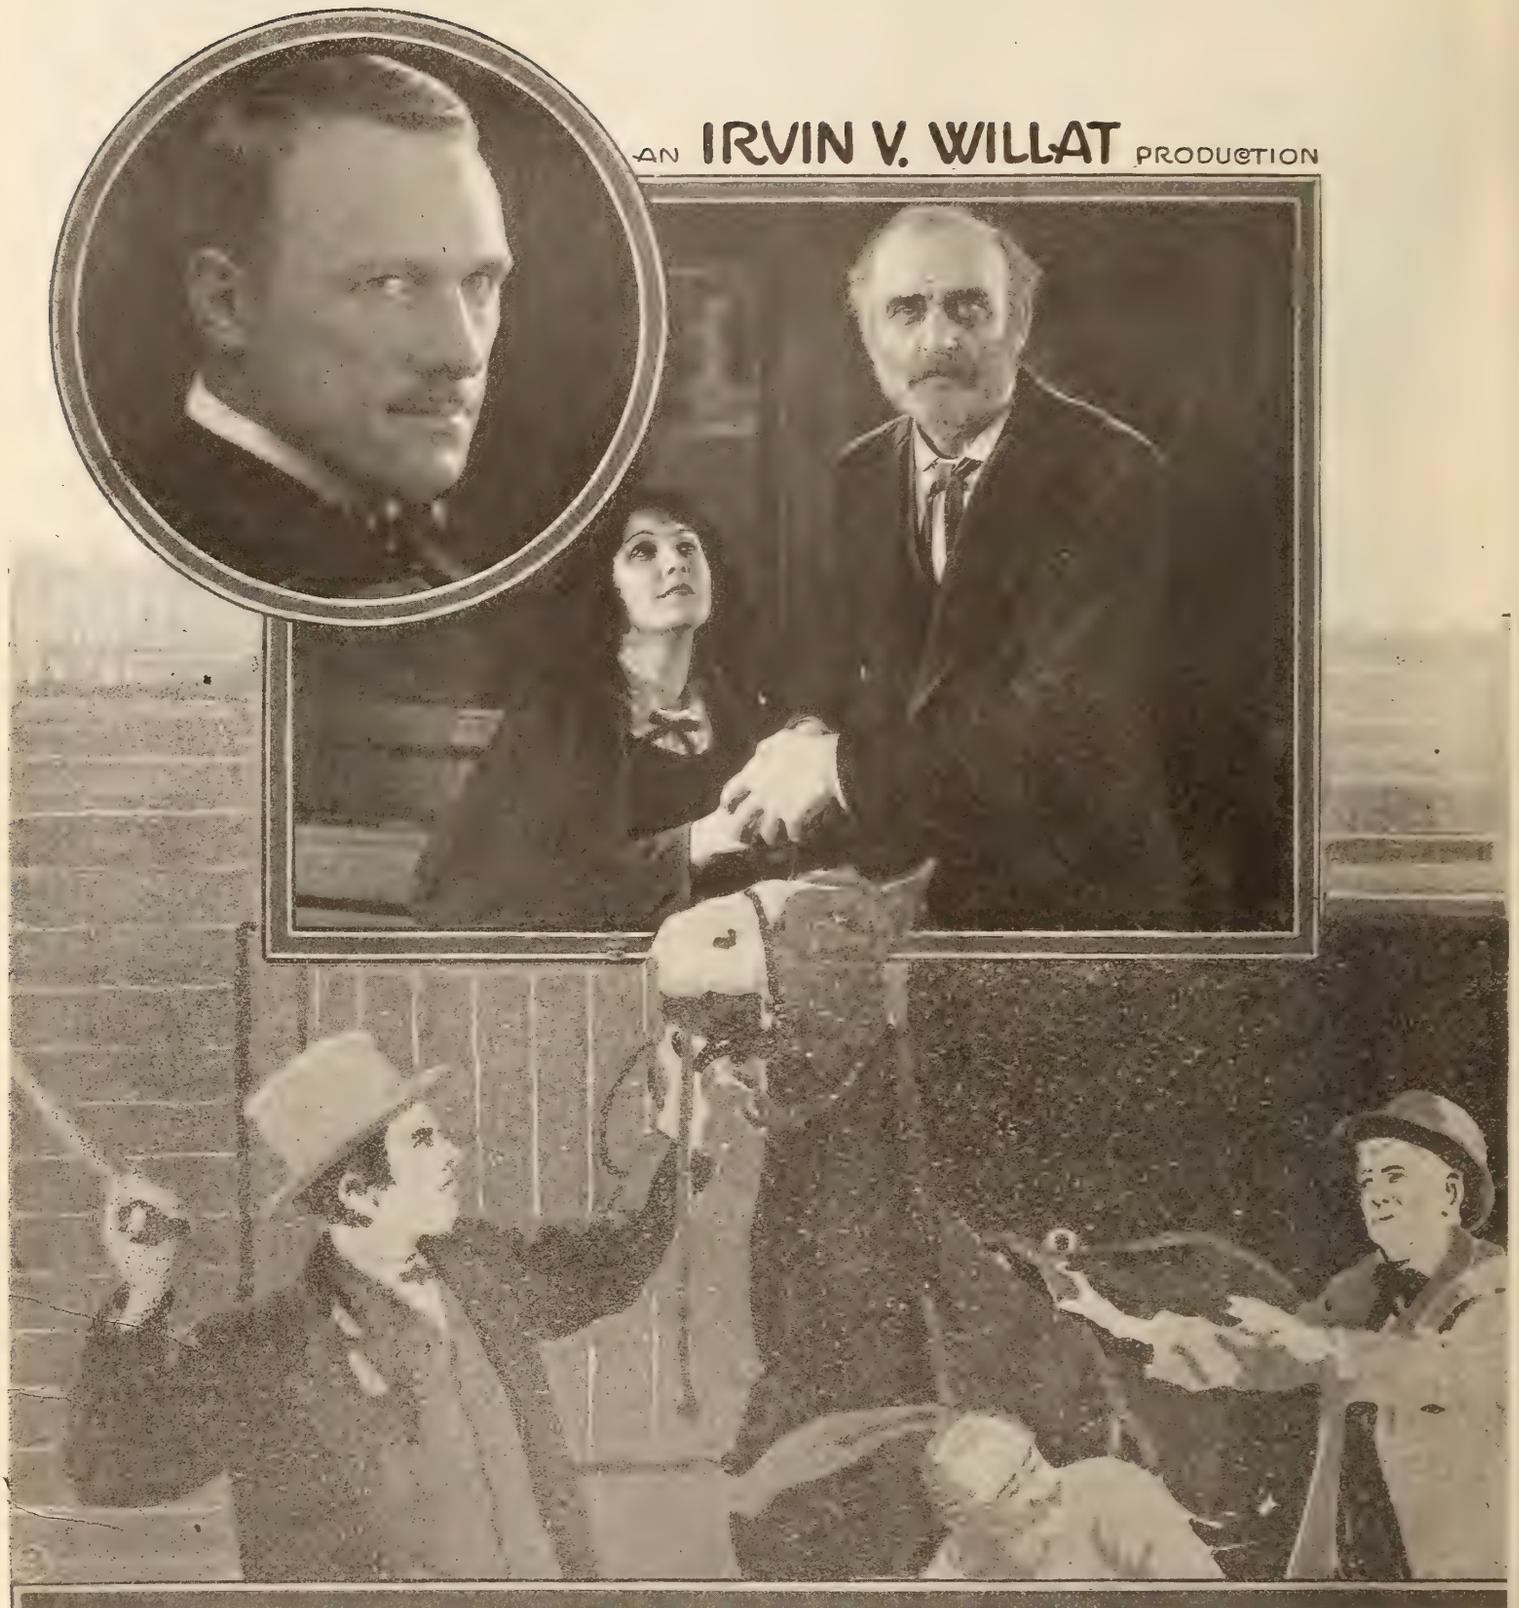
All that your audiences hope for in a Southern picture

You may offer this picture to your patrons with the utmost confidence. It must please them, for aside from the fact that it is splendidly produced and enacted, it has innumerable points of appeal. There are certain things that they expect to find in a Southern drama; it's got them—plus!

First—ROMANCE—Charmingly is presented the love-tale of Phillip and Luzelle among surroundings that delight the eye.

Second—CHIVALRY—Their hearts will warm to the gallant old Colonel whose life is dedicated to the service of another.

Third—ACTION—A fierce-fought feud furnishes many a thrill and there is a rare display of horsemanship on spirited mounts.



Fourth—ATMOSPHERE—So real, so true, that it will almost seem to transport them from their seats to the very heart of the blue-grass country.

It's "The Greatest Southern Drama Ever Screened"

A popular star in a powerful picture, splendidly produced.

"The House of Whispers" furnishes Kerrigan with the best vehicle he has ever had.

William P. Sheridan, a world-famous detective, who was for twenty-three years in charge of the Bureau of Identification of the New York Police Department, says:

"Experienced detective though I am, accustomed to unraveling complicated plots, I must say that "The House of Whispers" had me baffled right up to the very last few feet of film. It is without a doubt the greatest picture of its kind I have ever seen."

HANSEN IN FOE WITH WARNER OLAND

Persecution, relentless and ferocious.

The girl and her whole family suffered it, constantly, inexplicably.

Who was doing it and why was more than they could answer. Suspicion pointed to a member of their own household, but no sooner was he apparently caught red-handed than he partially proved, at least, his innocence.

Strange footsteps in the hallways, with the maker unseen; a sinister figure in a fur overcoat whose eyes only were visible; spying eyes and listening ears; of all these they were conscious always. And often one of their number would disappear, forcibly removed by one of their numerous but unknown enemies.

A great mystery serial with the finest feature production, the finest of feature casts, and action, thrill, action, all the time!

A Message to the Exhibitor Who Thinks "Serials Are Not Classy Enough for My House"

There are some exhibitors who are not "sold" on the value of Pathe serials.

They are wont to say "serials are good, I know, for many houses, but my audiences are high class; they don't want them."

That may have been true, Mr. Exhibitor, several years ago, but did you know that Pathe serials have made just as big an advance in quality as the best features of today have made over those several years ago? Why assume that serials have stood still while all other classes of production have advanced? Your house is better, your presentation is better, your exploitation is better. Do you think that while everything else has progressed the Pathe serial producer has stood still?

Pathe serials today are feature productions, feature casts, feature stories and feature stars of the best quality. Your audiences will admit it and flock to them, if you'll let them!

Prove it for yourself; ask the nearest Pathe exchange to screen for you the first five episodes of "The Phantom Foe."

REALART TAKES THE RISK!

Keeping Up the Average

THE baseball player whose name is listed with the leaders is the one who bats and fields consistently, day after day, throughout the playing season. If he slumps in any series, his fall is reflected in his final averages.

It's the same in motion picture production. The company that makes the high average for the season is the one which pays careful attention to detail with each individual picture and which has the proper physical equipment.

Realart has secured and will hold a very high average with its productions. Its studio equipment is the finest obtainable. Infinite care is taken in selecting titles and supporting casts.

A Realart production is synonymous with the best obtainable in every component part—star, title, continuity, cast, studio equipment.

Investigate and you will sign up for a Realart Franchise.

NEAL HART BOOKINGS SWAMP EXCHANGES!

NEW DIRECTOR TO BE NAMED FOR NEAL HART PRODUCTIONS

Man Who Made Best of Mix, Fairbanks and Carey Hits a Possibility

"The best director in the country at any cost.

Eddy Eckels, the electric spark of the Independent Films Association, Chicago, shouted these words as the California Limited pulled out of the Dearborn Station for Pinnacle Studios at Glendale, Calif., a week or so ago.

Eddy abandoned tons of vitally important work at Chicago headquarters, canceled all engagements, and grabbed a rattler for the coast to give Neal Hart, outdoor film star extraordinary, "the best director money can buy."

This decision was reached by Eckels upon receipt of the following telegram from Neal Hart himself:

NEAL HART TELEGRAPHS

"Third picture's possibilities require greatest director money can buy. Otherwise suggest another story, but am shooting enthusiasm on this one, and eager to get started. If get crack director, capable of anything, third picture positively will put the term 'knockout' in with discarded adjectives. I stake my reputation on this."

The fact of the matter is that Neal Hart, himself as capable a director as he is a versatile outdoor star on the screen, has been taking care of a lot of his own direction, at his own demand, although he has been ably assisted by the widely-known Frank Messinger.

During the shooting of Hart's second big super-special, "Skyfire," released by Pinnacle Productions, Inc., through the Independent Films Association, Chicago, Hart and his coworkers decided that a BIG director was needed. When Hart got the third picture story, he wired Eckels to that effect.

NAME IS WITHHELD

Before leaving for the Pacific coast, Eddy Eckels gave out this statement:

"I am going after the best director in the world—a man who positively can be given credit for the success of Douglas Fairbanks, Tom Mix and Harry Carey, for he directed all of the big successes of these stars. A lot of folks know who I mean now, but as the deal has not been definitely consummated, I cannot as yet mention his name.

"I am firmly of the conviction that Neal Hart realizes the vast possibilities of the pictures we have in mind for him, and I know that the third Neal Hart production will be hard to equal over again in the film era. So I am going out and see that Hart has the best director that money can buy. That he will do the rest is a cinch."

EXTRA! LAST CALL ON PINNACLE COMEDIES

During the last week almost half of United States territory on the new Pinnacle Comedies was closed —and much of it BY MAIL!

About 65% of the territorial rights have been sold, and exchangemen report that from exhibitors, the public, and from every quarter the cry is "Rush the Pinnacle Pippins!"

The first comedy—"Cedarbrook Farm"—will be released promptly on Nov. 1, so you can see the little time left to grab these beauty bonanzas.

If you are uncertain about your territory, wire Independent Films Association, Chicago, immediately.

"Boys, we sure gotta hand it to you. If you get anything else to sell, just send us the contracts. We're sold all the way on your line." This from Seifert, Detroit, and his contract for Pinnacle Comedies came with it.

THISSURESOUNDSGOOD

While we're slipping the boomerang compliments, what do you think of this one; Ritchey, the lithographer from way back, writes Eddy Eckels "we knew we had something when we finished the Hart paper, but when you raved about it, we knew we had the world beat."

JUSTABOUTHIGHCTOO

Neal Hart is a powerful strong boy, but he oughta pass away complete when he gives his 24-sheet the north and south. It's a big knockout drop and stands out like that meteor that figured was going to burn up the earth. Plenty mentioned.

Neal Hart is sweeping the United States!

Motion picture exhibitors from Halifax to San Diego are preparing to cash in BIG on the series of eight Neal Hart super-outdoor special productions, beginning with "Hell's Oasis," released October 1.

Exchanges handling the Neal Hart super-pictures are simply SWAMPED with contracts, inquiries, advertising orders—all from exhibitors demanding priority on Neal Hart productions.

The spontaneous, extraordinary advertising and publicity campaign carried on by Independent Films Association has had a whole lot to do with this phenomenal demand for Neal Hart productions, but the superiority and supreme calibre of the productions, themselves, will make this condition a perpetuity.

NOW was only a milestone. It's DONE!

LYNCH CIRCUIT BOOKS ENTIRE HART SERIES

The S. H. Lynch Circuit of Theatres—the most powerful theatrical organization in the South and one of the foremost in the country—has booked the entire series of eight Neal Hart productions, and Hell's Oasis, the first release, already has been set in for first-run play in the best Lynch houses everywhere. A big advertising campaign also has been inaugurated.

TWENTY FIRST-RUNS IN MILWAUKEE SECTION

H. J. Fitzgerald, First National manager at Milwaukee, obtained 20 first runs on Neal Hart in "Hell's Oasis" in his territory, which is the state of Wisconsin only.

The theaters signed for Hell's Oasis are Lyric, Stoughton; Majestic, Oshkosh; Bijou, Racine; Majestic, Rhinelander; Stewart, Wausau; W. M. A. Hall, Hancock; Monroe, Monroe; Strand, Marinette; Rainbow, Milwaukee; Appleton, Appleton; Mozart, Milwaukee; Fern, Milwaukee; Palm, Green Bay Junction; Bijou, Green Bay; Riveria, Milwaukee; Majestic, Cudahy; Star, Racine; Climax, Milwaukee; Unique, Tomah; Rex, Beloit, and Modjeska, Milwaukee.

Mr. Fitzgerald is plenty proud of this first-run record, and has good reason to be, for the above theaters are all first run houses in their respective towns.

DALLAS REPORTS LARGE BOOKING LIST

L. T. Pellerin, manager of the R. D. Lewis Film Company, Dallas, Texas, reports that he has lined up thirty-four bookings on that series of eight Neal Hart super-outdoor productions. The theaters lined up, and their respective towns, are as follows: Old Mill, Dallas, one week; Crystal, Dallas, one week; Grand Central, Dallas, one week; Palace, Dallas, one week. Hippodrome, Ft. Worth. Rex, Ft. Worth. Blue Mouse, Ft. Worth; Gayety, Ft. Worth; Circle, Ft. Worth; Roseland, Ft. Worth; Douglas, Ft. Worth; Empire, San Antonio, two weeks; Zoe, Houston, ten days; Key, Houston; Texas, Houston, six days; Unique, El Paso, one week; Majestic, Austin, one week; Olympic, Amarillo; Olympic, Wichita Falls; Amusu, Corpus Christi; Temple, Ranger; Liberty, Ranger; Pearce, Pt. Arthur; Queen, Pt. Arthur; Colonial, Greenville; Queen, Bonham; Lyric, Terrell; Palace, Cleburne; Star, Eagle Pass; Strand, Laredo; Queen, Tyler; Rex, Waco; Casino, Austin.

ST. LOUIS EXCHANGE STARTS OUT "ON HIGH"

Bookings on Neal Hart and Roy Stewart, outdoor stars extraordinary, have started out "on high" in St. Louis Roy Dickson, in charge of the new St. Louis Film Exchange announces.

Acts Superbly"

—New York Herald.

Read what they all say:

STORY MAKES PULSE THROB

"At last Miss Katherine MacDonald has found a screen vehicle that enables her to register something besides the fact that she is one of the loveliest of film beauties. It is 'Curtain,' shown this week at the Strand, which is an adaptation of a story by Rita Weiman.

"It is a photoplay of stage life, and so far as the usual physical aspects of existence behind the scenes goes it is correct.

"Miss MacDonald discloses that she can act superbly as well as have her hair dressed becomingly. The story itself always moves with a finger on one's pulse."—New York Herald.

SECOND TO NONE

"'Curtain,' the starring vehicle for Katherine MacDonald, for sheer intelligence of production, is a capital example of what a motion picture ought to be.

"James Young's direction is expert, especially in his behind-the-stage scenes. He carefully avoids the popular misrepresentation of the theatrical folk.

"Miss MacDonald's Nancy Bradshaw, the Broadway favorite, is something to be remembered. She is effusive, emotional and generous. As a mother she bestows her affection on her son, not in gushful closeups, but through a thousand and one subtle gestures. Miss MacDonald's equipment as a cinema artist should bring her fame second to none. There is no actress more conscientious in avoiding the commonplace and the tawdry; no actress more skilled in limning character. Furthermore, she is rarely beautiful."—New York Evening Mail.

A CHARMING HEROINE

"'Curtain' is an excellent example of what good taste and competent direction can do toward making a story interesting on the screen. The care which has been taken in casting the picture, the fine photography and the attention to details have resulted in a picture which has far more merit than the average feature film.

"Katherine MacDonald has the stellar role, and made a very charming heroine. 'Curtain' is a theatrical story and many of its scenes are laid in the theatre."—New York World.

A MAGNETIC ACTRESS

"The screen version of 'Curtain' has caught much that was unusual in its theme. The atmosphere of the stage which runs through the story has been faithfully reproduced, so that the personal drama is interspersed with fascinating glimpses of the life backstage.

"The development of the woman is faithfully carried out through the excellent work of Katherine MacDonald, who has proved that she can act the role of a magnetic actress as well as look like one."—New York Globe.

SHE'S "COMING UP"

"Katherine MacDonald is 'coming up' in the world of silent drama. In 'Curtain' there is a punch."—New York Telegram.

GOOD TO LOOK AT

"Katherine MacDonald, in 'Curtain,' is a star that one does not tire of looking at."—New York Tribune.

MASTERLY INTERPRETATION

"Here's a story of the theatre that takes you back of the stage into the dressing rooms of star and understudy and introduces you to property man and call boy and stage door Johnny, too.

"You learn something of the palpitations of the star during the anxious first night performance, of the old bachelor who watches her prayerfully from the wings and of the playwright who sits tensely alert in the gallery to hear the opinion of the 'gods.' These scenes are realistic enough to set your own heart beating until you are sure that Nancy Bradshaw, the new star, is a success beyond doubt.

"Katherine MacDonald, who plays the role of Nancy, does a fine piece of work. She never overacts, although she has plenty of chance to do so, and her interpretation is sure throughout and masterly."—New York News.

SHOULD BE RECORD BREAKER

"Katherine MacDonald in 'Curtain,' splendidly directed by James Young from a scenario that is consistent and of sustained interest, mostly about the stage, should prove a record-breaker for attendance at the Strand theatre this week."—New York American.

A POPULAR STORY

"Rita Weiman's stories are proving popular as motion picture material. Her stories as in 'Curtain' are clearly, interestingly and logically developed. Katherine MacDonald's beauty is always pleasing to gaze upon."—New York Morning Telegraph.

THE QUESTION!

The simplest answer to the question—"Why use RITCHEY posters?" is another question,—"Why not?" Any other answer would of necessity be long drawn out.

For the poster is supposed to attract attention. The RITCHEY poster does. A poster is supposed to interest the public in the photo-play it advertises. The RITCHEY poster does. A poster is supposed to persuade the public of the fact that the film is well worth seeing. The RITCHEY poster does.

A poster is supposed to sell tickets to the show in the maximum degree. The RITCHEY poster, and only the RITCHEY poster does just that!

It does these things because the men responsible for the conception, design, and execution of the RITCHEY poster have the knowledge and the experience and the genius necessary to do them. The result of their efforts is the RITCHEY poster. —unsurpassed, and unsurpassable!

"Bunk"—and the Public

"WHEN we were managing a house we found that the truth about a picture, told in a terse, attractive manner, would get us more business than all the adjectives we could use or the press agents devise—"

We give this excerpt from a letter which is printed in this issue and which gives some practical sidelights on "bunk" as the exhibitor sees it.

We have spoken before of advertising "bunk," many times; we speak of it now with renewed emphasis because the better pictures of today completely eliminate what little excuse may ever have existed for advertising "bunk."

There is no reason today why producer advertising should "bunk" the exhibitor; there is no reason why exhibitor advertising should "bunk" the public. And there is every reason why it shouldn't, because the "bunk" kind of advertising is the worst kind of advertising and about the most disastrous merchandising policy that ever existed.

Certainly it is now time to quit it — in the picture business.

And certainly it is now time for the head executives of the business to take the matter straight to heart, to place the problem uppermost upon their desks and not to quit dealing with it until "bunk" advertising quits.

If advertising is of fifty-fifty importance along with the pictures — as we often say it is and as we know it is—then it will pay any executive to devote as much thought to his advertising as he does to his pictures. It is just as necessary to have good advertising as good pictures. "Bunk" advertising is as poor a product, as flimsy an asset or, better, as dangerous a liability, as "bunk" pictures.

The plain facts in the case are these:

We merchandise pictures. We have a large, modern organization embracing producers, jobbers and retailers — just like any other industry dealing in any other product of general consumption. A weekly business is done — fifty-two times a year, and for the years to come. We build and are dependent upon good will — the exhibitor with his public, the producer and distributor with the exhibitor. We endeavor to build business trademarks, to establish permanent good will. The basis of this good will, of its establishment and its continuance is — the confidence of the buyer, and confidence is only established by straightforward advertising.

We emphasize this industrial line-up to point the wide difference between the picture and the circus or the attraction that simply gambles with Broadway.

The exhibitor will only succeed through advertising by which he can hold his public's confidence, but we put the problem here to the producer and distributor because they are not only equally interested in the exhibitor's success, but because they are generally responsible for the exhibitors' advertisements.

Truthful advertising doesn't have to be dull. There's a heart in every picture. The public wants to know about it. The successful exhibitor advertiser today is the man who's able to pick it out and tell what it is. The producer must help him.

It's a big and broad issue.

"OVER THE HILL" — the new title of "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" — offers a lesson in production to those who care to analyze its construction.

To illustrate, in a homely way, it is a picture made from the inside out rather than, as is usual, the picture made from the outside in.

By the latter type of production, we mean the picture made after there have been gathered together the big book or play, the big star, the big director and the other main elements considered essential to what we are pleased to style a big picture. Sometimes the result is a picture that is either a credit to the art or a successful box office attraction or both, and too often, the result is failure. The big elements don't mix in a harmonious whole, or some one or more overestimated factors fall flat.

In "Over the Hill" there was nothing to start with save a poem and a showman's vision of its picture possibilities. Its evolution is an enlightening story of intelligence and sincere effort upon the part of all concerned with the picture. The situation is reversed and the picture itself produces a new star and adds laurels to producer, director and all others who had chiefly to do with it.

We need, and we predict, we shall have more of this distinctive policy in production.

DEALING IN PERSONALITIES

OWING to the serious illness of his mother, Frank J. Carroll, one of the industry's veterans, and President and General Manager of the Lone Star Pictures Corporation of Fort Worth, Texas, has made a flying trip to New York.

Concerning his Texas company, Mr. Carroll had little to say. Big specials he intimated would be the order of the day. The concern is soundly financed.

Mr. Carroll has been in the oil country of Texas for about a year, leaving New York to recover from a serious attack of influenza. His experience in the film business dates back to the pioneer days, and in that time he has developed numerous directors and stars. He has also dabbled with lights of the stage and brought them to the screen. In his early days in the business he was responsible for some of the first multiple reel specials made independently.

"Polly of the Circus," the Goldwyn hit, reached the screen through his guidance. The same company also accepted "For the Freedom of the World" from him, the first big independently made special they handled. "The Cavell Case" scored high throughout the country.

THAT English announcement is all but ready to break in an official way. Meanwhile, without the least desire to take the edge off a news story, but merely in our capacity of official stenographer to the Gossip League, we must chronicle a few facts.

Ralph Proctor, so we understand, is to assume the title of general manager of the American distributing activities of the Stoll organization, one of England's biggest. He will overlook the distribution of a consistent program of English-made features. The "wise ones" will also slip you the information that this Stoll outfit has made some honest-to-goodness big pictures.

Distribution, so we are told, will be handled physically by the Pathe offices.

And here's another bit of good news. Good old George Blaisdell—for so many years synonymous with Moving Picture World—is to hang his hat in the Stoll offices on an important executive hook.

We'll say that this fellow King, of the Stoll organization, has been a quiet worker but a blamed good picker. The aggregate amount of good wishes and hearty boosts that follow such regular fellows as Proctor and Blaisdell should send any proposition off to a flying start.

RALPH PROCTOR'S move left a hole in Harry Leonhardt's independent distributing proposition which has been filled by Phil Ryan, recently active with Associated Exhibitors. Ryan will also be remembered some few years back because of his association with the Standard Film, when that proposition was among the king pin independents of the middle west.

Frank J. Carroll

Harry Leonhardt himself is a busy man these days. What with the piloting of his organization to aid the independent producer and the production of "The Devil," he has his hands full. Our own J. C. Jessen, unable to resist the studio-visiting habit, journeyed to the Leonhardt stages in Jersey last week and came back an enthusiastic booster. Jimmy Young is directing the picturization of the George Arliss stage success which induced that veteran to consider the screen.

SPEAKING of directors reminds us of a scene we witnessed the other day when someone showed Arvid Gillstrom a copy of a script as it is handed to the directors drawing salary from one of the largest producing organizations.

Gillstrom took one look—and he hasn't recovered yet.

"Ye gods!" he said. "Are there companies where directors get the whole works handed to them that way? And here I have been grinding away for years on propositions where I had to write the stories, build the sets, dig out the locations, and do almost everything but turn the crank. And at times I have done that."

We are surprised that one of the bigger organizations hasn't grabbed such a "young veteran" as Gillstrom. All-around experience backed by such efficiency as the big up-to-date producer offers should certainly produce the goods.

THE weekly batch of in-and-out-of-town notes must get their attention.

Fred Warren said good-by to the boys on Tuesday and started for the sunny Coast clime.

B. Herbert Milligan, treasurer of Capital, president of Creation Films, and owner of the Kalem Cliffside studio, blew into the office for a chat.

J. C. Jessen started for Los Angeles on Monday. He started again on Tuesday. And again on Wednesday. This is Thursday and he's still here.

Eddie MacManus is hopping the boys so hard he sold us into going out to a newsstand to get a copy of Collier's yesterday. Yes, we paid cash, too.

IT'S our own private conviction that we will soon have to announce the desertion of the publicity field by one of the best fellows in that branch.

Some few weeks ago the name of Randolph Lewis reached our desk as the author of a forthcoming Pathe serial. We were willing to forgive that offense. There is much in common between serials and publicity.

And now we learn that Randy has been chosen to go abroad and sit at Rudyard Kipling's elbow when that literary light starts fulfilling his Pathe contract.

That will never do. Randy is reverting to type. We knew that the best Sunday editor New York ever saw would have to return to fiction of a better class than publicity.

Associated Exhibitors' Election

H. H. WELLENBRINK, of Newark, one of the foremost exhibitors in the East, was elected president of the Associated Exhibitors, Inc., at a meeting held Wednesday, October 6th, and which was attended by the most representative motion picture showmen in the United States. Mr. Wellenbrink was selected to succeed Harry M. Crandall, of Washington, D. C., who, owing to the pressure of business in his theatrical interests, was obliged to resign. The Washington exhibitor was given a warm vote of thanks for his energy in furthering the interests of Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

Paul Brunet was chosen chairman of the Executive Committee, immediately following the convening of that body which also includes Sam Harding, E. Stern, H. B. Franklin, J. H. Cooper and President Wellenbrink.

Other officers of the organization are: First Vice-President, Paul Gusdanovic, Cleveland; Second Vice-President Ellis Bostick, Milwaukee; Third Vice-President, Charles Olsen, Indianapolis; Secretary, Sam Harding, Kansas City; Treasurer, H. B. Franklin, Buffalo.

The Board of Directors is composed of H. H. Wellenbrink, Newark; J. H. Cooper, Wichita, Kan.; H. B. Franklin, Buffalo; H. M. Crandall, Washington, D. C.; E. Stern, Minneapolis; Dennis Harris, Pittsburg; Isaac Libson, Cincinnati; Sam Harding, Kansas City; H. C. Lembach, Spokane, Wash.; F. H. Dowler, Chattanooga and Paul Brunet.

The meeting was most harmonious, and was productive of large plans of future activity.

Drama and Comedy Blend In Portland Theatre Strike

Both Sides Contribute To Unique Battle That Is Amusing All Onlookers

(Special Correspondence to Motion Picture News)

UNIQUE exploitation is being done in the interests of the motion picture houses of Portland, Oregon, through no efforts of theatre managers or publicity men.

Since June 30th a strike against the twenty-seven motion picture houses owned in the Northwest by Jensen and Von Herberg has been conducted. Until the latter part of September no results of the strike were felt on the box office receipts. The arrival of what are termed "concentration men" to help the strikers put through what looked as if it might be a losing fight has certainly brought results. Queues have formed in front of each of the theatres termed by the labor element "unfair" at hours when never before has there been any difficulty in obtaining seats. One theatre retained a film three weeks, breaking all previous runs, in which fourteen days of consecutive first showing was considered excellent.

The "intensive" campaign, as the unions termed it when outside help arrived to add impetus, opened with a spectacular air raid. A seaplane was chartered and leaflets bearing on either side, "Columbia Theatre Closed, Unfair," in big, black type, were dropped by the hundreds over every part of the city. Upon close scrutiny in wee, small letters between the lines of huge type the leaflets proved to actually read: "Columbia theatre orchestra has closed its engagement at the Columbia theatre because the house is unfair." Identity of the persons who dropped the dodgers is not known, but a warrant for arrest has been issued—giving an indication of how both sides are scrapping for every point.

"It was the best advertising the Columbia could have received," said A. C. Raleigh, at whose theatre "Humoresque" was then in its third week, and each night queues from one to two blocks were forming. "The Saturday afternoon that these leaflets were distributed about the city broke all former Saturday afternoon attendance records at this house."

Union men, however, viewed the matter from a different angle. "It was a great victory for us," one of them told a press representative. "Just as if they had been dropped from heaven by angels these dodgers flooded the city. One might just as well term them manna—they certainly served as useful a purpose."

Two more outcomes of the strike that same day served further to advertise the Jensen and Von Herberg houses. The Edgar Lewis picture, "Lahoma," was having its opening day at the People's theatre, of which A. A. Bruce is manager. Manager Bruce had with great difficulty obtained an antiquated prairie schooner on which he had attached "Lahoma" banners and in which he planned to put a small size calliope as it paraded through Portland's business section. It so happened that C. S. Jensen, senior member of the firm of Jensen and Von Herberg, had been spending the week in Seattle, and having just arrived in his home city was going up the streets in search of a late breakfast when he saw several score persons gathered about the People's theatre entrance. He arrived in time to see a woman, whom the theatre men declare was informed by union representatives, demanding that the driver get down from the wagon and unhitch one of the horses, which she asserted to be in a pitiable condition. The driver was troubled, and despite Manager Bruce's orders to remain where he was, got down.

"Who owns this horse?" asked the woman, secretary of the Oregon Humane Society.

"I do," said Mr. Jensen, jumping into the schooner and picking up the reins, "Want to buy him?"

"That horse must be 29 at least," shrieked the Humane officer. "If you drive that animal I shall arrest you."

"Well, if its 29 it's only two years older than I," fabricated Mr. Jensen, as picking up the reins and clucking to the horses he proceeded to drive off much to the anger of his attacker and to the great amusement of the crowd.

This incident occurred on Saturday, and the following Monday Mr. Jensen celebrated his thirty-ninth birthday by presenting himself in the police court, where five charges had been filed against him. Foremost among these charges was that of the Humane officer, who had been unable to order his actual execution as she had of the old gray mare. This case was dropped against him as were the others, which involved a disorderly charge made because of a fist fight that took place some hours later of the same Saturday on which the "Lahoma" charge had been interrupted and the seaplane had dropped its cargo of union literature.

For several days attempts had been made by photographers alleged to be in the employ of the unions to take flashlights of the Jensen and Von Herberg theatres. On each occasion they had been frustrated in their plans. At 11 o'clock this evening Mr. Jensen was driving by the Liberty theatre when he noticed a tripod being put in place and a flashlight holder raised. Quicker than a flash he turned the wheel of his huge Packard so that it crossed the curb in a vain attempt to knock down the tripod. The photographer made a lurch for the plates and Mr. Jensen jumped out of the car and on top of him. This took place at 11 P. M., when the theatre was empty and the streets almost in the same condition. Yet not five minutes later several hundred excited Portlanders stood about the Liberty theatre entrance watching a speedy fistic encounter. Just which profession—photography or theatre owner—serves to keep a man in the best physical condition will never be known for the struggle was ended by police who asked that the men accompany them to the police court, where warrants for their arrest were issued and they were summoned to appear the next day.

An injunction similar to one issued to stop picketing of Jensen and Von Herberg theatres shortly after the walk-out by musicians and operators first went into effect was gotten out to restrain the photographers from continuing their efforts. The injunction is thought to have been willfully violated, the man being now out on $250 bail, which he had with him in his pockets though he alleged that he was not under union instruction.

Although the strike of the motion picture operators and musicians has been in progress since July 10, Mr. Jensen has repeated recently that the firm had no intention of giving quarter to labor unions and that so far as he is concerned the strike or walkout can go on indefinitely. His organists returned with one exception within three days after the strike went into effect. The man who made the exception returned during the week, but by that time his place had been filled. Jensen and Von Herberg have had no trouble in filling the positions left open by the operators. The orchestras, which were before features in the People's and Columbia theatres, have not been continued since the union musi-

His View of "Bunk!"

Motion Picture News, New York City.
Gentlemen:

I WANT to congratulate you upon your NEWS on "Bunk." While I am not editorial in a recent issue of THE actively interested in the business just now, past activity and present nominal interests, causes me to read your publication each week and I cannot refrain from commending this editorial—but more could have been said.

This "more" I refer to is the "bunk" handed us in the advertising of the producers and distributors. If there was a "pure food law" on advertising most of the companies would soon be in jail for putting "poison" in their advertising copy. If any other line of business would "stretch the truth" to the extent that the producers and distributors do in their advertising, they would soon be out of business as the people would soon lose all confidence in them. Sooner or later the people—the exhibitors—will come to this place in the buying of pictures, but as yet we have not gotten away from the idea that the business still has some connection with the old circus days when everybody expected to get fooled—and were never disappointed.

When we were managing a house we found that the "truth" about a picture, told in a terse, attractive manner, would get us more business than all the adjectives we could use or the press agents devise. "Super-special," "de luxe," "extraordinary," "sensational," and all other kindred words mean very little to the public. The exhibitors have already learned that they mean nothing except an excuse to make them pay more for their picture than it is worth (in most cases) and there is sure to be a reaction. Your campaign of "fewer and better pictures" was a great thing and the exhibitors hailed it with delight, but the producers have used it as a means to make the exhibitors pay more—particularly the small exhibitors—until today most of the small town theatres are struggling for their very existence.

We believe that the time is coming when the picture business will be on the same commercial basis as any other legitimate business. Your efforts along this line are hastening the day. And we believe that this day will be heralded when the producers and distributors begin to use the same honesty in their advertising that you find in the advertising of the department stores, the manufacturers of automobiles, of steam engines—and other commodities.

Something over a year ago, when we were managing a small house in Southeast Missouri, we wrote you making a prophecy about the day coming when some system of exchanges would employ exploitation men at each branch to plan campaigns for the exhibitors. We do not know whether the suggestion was the father of the idea or not, but following your publication and editorial comment on the matter, one or two of the big distributing organizations have adopted the plan, in a measure at least. We are just as firm in the belief that honesty of advertising will pay in the long run as we were then that publicity assistance would be worth while.

We are not saying these things for publicity, but as one editor to another—from a "little" editor to a "big" one, who, we are sure, has that same pride in his publication we have, in making it an instrument of truth, not only in the matter that comes from our own pen (typewriter), but the matter that we use that comes from the pens of others.

Fraternally yours,
H. H. JAMES,
Publisher, The Rector Post,
Rector, Arkansas.

cians walked out. But a new $30,000 organ has been installed in the latter house and the instrument in the other cinema entirely rebuilt.

A history of the walkout against Jensen and Von Herberg interests shows that it originated in Tacoma, Wash., June 30 last, when the Moore Amusement Company declined to submit to an increased wage scale as offered by the operators of that city. Ten days later the operators and musicians in Portland, Seattle, Butte, Bremerton and Yakima theatres operated under the name of Jensen and Von Herberg were ordered out. Strikers refuse to call the movement a sympathetic strike, claiming that all persons who left their jobs were working for Jensen and Von Herberg and that therefore it was all against the one firm. This is a false premise according to the theatre interests, which claim that the Tacoma houses are in no way controlled by Jensen and Von Herberg.

"The theatres there are owned jointly by the Moore Amusement Company, the Greater Theatres Corporation of Seattle and John L. Baker," C. S. Jensen has given out in court. "The Greater Theatres Company owns 50 per cent of the stock and the Moore Amusement Company and John L. Baker own the remaining stock. Jensen and Von Herberg own but 50 per cent of the stock of the Greater Theatre Company holdings, so that in reality our firm actually owns but 25 per cent of the four Tacoma houses operated under our name. Our company has an ironclad agreement with the Moore Amusement Company to the effect that it cannot in any way dictate the policies of the Tacoma houses other than purchasing all pictures shown therein. H. T. Moore, part owner and manager, has entire control over the employment of all persons in Tacoma theatres. He refuses to submit to the union raise, which he declares will mean an additional $80,000 to his annual payrolls while the four theatres have never yet netted more than an annual $20,000."

Even strikes have their funny aspects.

A. C. Raleigh, manager of the Columbia theatre, tells the following incident on himself. "Trouble was expected to concentrate on this house," he said, "and I was keeping both eyes peeled for suspicious characters. My attention was attracted by a fellow who continued to loiter in front of the theatre from shortly after the opening hour until well along in the afternoon. I measured him from a physical standpoint and decided I might stand a chance with him, but when I came to order him to move on he appeared such a nice chap I simply didn't have the nerve to start anything. Finally, however, it got on my nerves. Deciding to shift responsibility, I got Mr. Jensen on the wire. He suggested I get into conversation with him and see if I couldn't find out his reasons in that manner. Casually I approached him and soon we were talking about the weather, the presidential election and everything but the strike. Finally I mentioned it.

"'Yeah, I'm expecting to see a right pretty little rumpus here between you guys and the union boys,' he answered, and then after a pause that seemed an eternity continued: 'I've been here watching the Columbia since 11 A. M. Mr. Jensen had me assigned to it as a plain clothes man.'"

Paul Noble, manager of the Liberty, was not without his troubles. During the opening day he had five huge trucks, each bannered with one word of the title of Wallace Reid's latest release, "What's Your Hurry?" and also the words: "Liberty" and "Today." During heavy traffic hours he was forbidden to parade the huge motors through the business streets and so had them parked just outside the Liberty theatre entrance, which is against a city ordinance forbidding parking directly outside a public entrance. Union men called on the Chief of Police, informing him of this offense. "We want that Noble guy arrested," they told the chief.

"Well, I can't pinch him," the officer replied, "but you may swear out warrants of arrest for the drivers."

"But the drivers are union men," they gasped, "we don't want union men arrested."

"Then your union drivers will have to remain in the drivers' seats while the trucks are parked and the trucks will have to be parked with reference to the Liberty entrance," was the Chief's decision.

A small auto truck muchly bannered with "Liberty, Columbia, People's, Majestic and Star theatres—Unfair" and "Jensen and Von Herberg Unfair" signs has been constantly on Portland streets since the unions have renewed activities. During its first day a calliope gave forth sounds alleged to have been music and which were successful in their mission of attracting public attention. But the calliope outlived that mission when the Columbia and Liberty theatre truck proceeded to trail it. The trailing truck was bebannered with "This is a sample of the music we do not want in Jensen and Von Herberg theatres" signs.

National Association Committees for Ensuing Year Announced

Harry Crandall Reports Satisfactory Progress in Americanism Work

STATEMENTS just received from the offices of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry set forth the names of those who have been appointed to the various committees for the ensuing year and also contain a report of the work which has been done by the Americanism committee up to the present and which this body is planning to do in the future. In the selection of the members for the various committees, declares the statement issued, William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, has endeavored to enlist the services of those men who have been active in carrying on the work of the organization and who have expressed their readiness to serve the interests of the industry by their participation in the work of the committees to which they have been assigned.

The membership of the committees, as submitted in the statement from the National Association's offices, consists of the following :

FINANCE COMMITTEE—Chairman, Arthur S. Friend; Paul Brunet, R. H. Cochrane, John M. Quinn, Lewis J. Selznick, J. E. Brulatour, Gabriel L. Hess, Harry Schwalbe, P. L. Waters.

CENSORSHIP COMMITTEE—Chairman, Gabriel L. Hess; J. W. Alicoate, Paul H. Cromelin, Arthur S. Friend, Paul Gulick, Paul Lazarus, S. E. Rogers, Harry Schwalbe, P. L. Waters, James R. Quirk, R. H. Cochrane, Howard Dietz, D. W. Griffith, Lewis Innerarity, Chas. C. Pettijohn, J. Robt. Rubin, M. Silverstone, William Wright, Martin J. Quigley.

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE—Chairman, Chas. C. Pettijohn; Nathan Vidaver, Harry Schwalbe, R. H. Cochrane, Arthur S. Friend, John M. Quinn, Gabriel L. Hess.

FIRE-PREVENTION COMMITTEE—Chairman, J. E. Brulatour, Albert DeRoode, W. E. Atkinson, H. H. Bruenner, J. F. Coufal, Major Tom Evans, Eric Schay, Lewis Innerarity, D. P. Howells, Alfred Weiss, C. H. MacGowan, Will C. Smith, S. E. Rogers, A. M. Asher, W. R. Rothacker, C. C. Pettijohn, Geo. A. Skinner, E. M. Porter, A. I. Siegel, Reginald Warde, W. H. Hulings, Al Lichtman, C. C. Ryan, Murray Silverstone.

MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE—Chairman, W. R. Rothacker; Chas. Christie, Fred J. Beecroft, Sam E. Morris, Thos. G. Wiley.

FILM THEFT COMMITTEE—Chairman, H. Minot Pitman; Bert Adler, L. E. Franconi, G. E. Kann, A. I. Siegel, Sam E. Eckman, Jr.

TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE—Chairman, P. H. Stilson; E. M. Asher, H. H. Bruenner, J. F. Coufal, Major Tom Evans, John Hahn, W. H. Hulings, M. Johnson, J. S. MacLeod, M. J. Mullin, F. N. Rothenberg, A. H. Sawyer, A. I. Siegel, Geo. A. Skinner, Will C. Smith, R. Ward, D. Berman, J. E. Brulatour, A. Du Mahaut, Will Francke, D. P. Howells, John T. Richards, B. J. Knoppleman, M. Moran, H. Robbins, C. C. Ryan, Herbert Lubin, M. Silverstone, Chas. A. Dean, J. V. Warde.

NEWS WEEKLY COMMITTEE—Emanuel Cohen, F. B. Hattrick, L. J. Darmaur, David Selznick.

LAW COMMITTEE—Chairman, Nathan Vidaver. (Each company to name representative lawyer.)

LABORATORY COMMITTEE—Chairman, Major Tom Evans; H. H. Bruenner, S. E. Rodgers, Jos. A. Golden, Arthur S. Friend, R. H. Cochrane, H. M. Goetz, Gaston Chanier, Mr. Brown, Mr. Hardeen, Geo. C. Dobbs, W. B. Cooke, J. R. Brophy, M. E. A. Tucker, S. D. Matthews, Albert Lowe, Nicholas Kessel, William Wright, Wade Hulings, Mr. Aldous, Mr. Dubulet, Wm. B. Levy.

P. L. Waters has succeeded Walter W. Irwin as chairman of the executive committee, while practically all of the other chairmen have been reappointed in recognition of the efficient services rendered by them. This, says the National Association statement, is especially true of the finance committee, Arthur S. Friend, chairman; the censorship committee, Gabriel L. Hess, chairman; fire prevention committee, J. E. Brulatour, chairman; membership committee, W. R. Rothacker, chairman; film theft committee, H. Minot Pitman, chairman; transportation committee, P. H. Stilson, chairman; and the law committee, Nathan Vidaver, chairman.

A new committee has been created under the title of Legislative Committee, which will take over the work of the former Sunday Opening committee, with Chas. J. Pettijohn as chairman. The membership includes Nathan Vidaver, Arthur S. Friend, Harry Schwalbe, John M. Quinn, R. H. Cochrane and Gabriel L. Hess.

The members of the new executive and finance committees have held meetings during the past week. The executive committee will hold regular meetings hereafter on the first Wednesdays of each month.

A meeting of the censorship committee has been called by Chairman Gabriel L. Hess for Tuesday, and this is to be followed by meetings of the other committees for the purpose of organizing and outlining their policies for the year.

The members of the law committee, of which Nathan Vidaver is chairman, are to be nominated by each member-company so that when complete, this committee will be composed of the attorneys from the legal departments of the various corporations.

The growth and extension of the association's work has made necessary a complete revision of the by-laws, and with this in view two committees have been appointed which will undertake the preparation of a tentative set of by-laws for submission at a special meeting of the members to be held early in the fall.

The general committee on the revision of the by-laws consists of: Arthur S. Friend, Gabriel L. Hess, Nathan Vidaver, J. Robert Rubin and S. E. Rogers. This committee to be assisted by the following, representing the Fifth Division: T. G. Wiley, chairman; Paul H. Cromelin, Fred J. Beecroft, Lesly Mason and Will C. Smith.

Lesly Mason has been appointed chairman of a committee on International Affiliations by President Brady and given power to appoint the other members of his committee. It is proposed to make a survey of the organizations existing abroad which are similar to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry of the United States, with a view to affecting some reciprocal arrangements.

Previous to the recent annual meeting of the board of directors, President Brady announced the appointment of a vigilance committee with James R. Quirk as chairman; and a committee on the Buenos Aires Exposition, of which Albert E. Smith is chairman.

The Americanization committee, of which Hon. Franklin K. Lane, former Secretary of the Interior, is chairman, is now conducting its work through the offices of the National Association. This committee is composed of the following: William A. Brady, Adolph Zukor, Lewis J. Selznick, H. M. Crandall, J. Hampton Moore, Mayor of Philadelphia, representing the Municipalities, and Col. Arthur Woods, representing the American Legion.

With the exception of one or two of the standing committees the routine work will continue under the direction of Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the National Association.

In its report on the work done by the Americanization committee the National Association statement declares that with the release of two new pictures this week and about a dozen others nearing completion, the campaign of the motion picture industry against Bolshevism is progressing most satisfactorily.

Harry M. Crandall of Washington, D. C., the chairman of the exhibitors' branch of the committee, sent a statement to the exhibitors of the country this week, urging them to continue their co-operation and interest in the work. Mr. Crandall, after pointing out the tremendous influx of foreigners to the shores of America, continues as follows:

"No other country has been confronted with so many foreigners as we have had during the past half century. Under our

WE regret the publication in the October 2nd issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS of a letter addressed to Sydney S. Cohen by Frank Rembusch. We printed the letter in good faith. We are advised by Mr. Cohen that the letter is false in its entirety, and that the copy of a similiar letter he received from Mr. Rembusch was unsigned; that he has sent a registered letter to Mr. Rembusch asking him to advise whether he authorized the sending of the letter, but has received no response other than the return of the Post Office card.

The exhibitors of Indiana have since the publication referred to held a state convention in the City of Indianapolis to which every exhibitor in the State of Indiana was invited. A strong state organization known as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana was formed, officers elected and Mr. Rembusch holds no office in the new organization.

Speeches of regret were made on the floor of the convention by the exhibitors present for the attack Mr. Rembusch had made on the National Organization and its President, Mr. Cohen, and a resolution was adopted warmly endorsing the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and its officers and pledging the full support and cooperation of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

At this convention we are informed Mr. Rembusch was asked whether he authorized the sending of the letter as contained in the issue of October 2nd, but he refused to reply.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been a warm supporter of Mr. Cohen's administration of state and national league affairs. Our pages bear ample testimony to this fact. He has devoted nearly all his time and his exceptional energy and ability to the very important issue of exhibitor organization. We have today a rapidly growing list of large, representative and well financed state organizations and the next national league convention will unquestionably see what the industry has so needed and what MOTION PICTURE NEWS has diligently worked for, namely a powerful and effective national organization of this country's exhibitors.

Due to the issue involved Mr. Cohen's administration has from its inception been a stormy one. This paper has endeavored to be, throughout, an impartial referee, to be utterly fair, and to uphold the present and ultimate interests of exhibitor organization. We deplore mud slinging. We deprecate any unfair and unsupported charges against the League President. We did not and we do not see that a man like Mr. Cohen, whose work stands for itself, would be injured in the slightest degree by the letter we printed; but if so, or if Mr. Cohen feels so, we regret our utterly innocent connection with so unfortunate an incident and we are pleased to say so frankly.

Constitution these people were given more freedom and privileges than they ever enjoyed before. We have no Kaisers or Czars and we did not use our army to tell the people what they should or should not do.

"Our people are governed by the masses. If the masses are wise then we will be ruled wisely. If they are not wise then we will be ruled otherwise. As a result of our form of government the question of naturalization in this country is more important than in any other country in the world. We have in the past been accustomed to treating our immigrants in a casual way. They have been allowed to get away from the spirit of America and what it means. A great many of them, because of lack of education and knowledge, were beginning to hate America and to love the red flag of the Bolshevists. They were not learning to love our government or to understand it.

"The public schools together with thousands of welfare organizations throughout the country are today in the field and are performing a constructive service. The motion picture theatres in America should be leaders in this work because of the influence that they have when properly used.

"The making of good Americans in this country is a patriotic duty which appeals to all public spirited men and women who seek to help serve their community and their nation.

"All that the exhibitors of the country are asked to do is to run the pictures that are now being made by the various producing companies under the direction of the Americanization committee. These pictures are being made by the biggest men in the industry, and not only do they serve their purpose but they are especially entertaining as well. As good American citizens it is up to every exhibitor in this country to take it upon himself to do his share in this work. Never mind what your opposition is doing, you show the pictures in your theatre. The first picture, 'The Land of Opportunity,' you all know, was a big winner. The second picture, 'The Land of Lafayette,' was also very well received.

"The two new pictures that are to be released are, 'Strangers Beware' and 'One Law for All.' The former picture has been made by Metro. The story and production are by Arthur Zellner. The scenario was completed by Julia Burnham, and the picture was directed by Addison Smythe.

"The other new picture has just been completed by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and will be ready for distribution on October 16th. It is called 'One Law for All,' and stars Hoot Gibson, Universal's popular cowboy screen actor.

"The story was written by Ford Beebe of the Universal scenario staff, who has taken great pains to incorporate in his script the reasons why American laws, ideals and human relationships are better than any others in the world and why this country is the best to live in. The story is typically western and should prove to be a big box office attraction."

Illinois Exhibitors Expect Strong Alliance

As a result of the convention held last week at Springfield, Ill., President Hopp and the other officers of the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance are greatly encouraged over the prospects for a strong exhibitors' organization in Illinois, and to give the members located in the western section of the state an opportunity to get together have decided to call a one-day convention at Peoria on November 18th. Although it will be for the convenience of the western section of the state, already many Chicago motion picture men, as well as those in the eastern part of the state, have signified their intention of attending the meeting. Later in the season a convention will be held in Chicago, according to plans perfected at the Springfield Convention.

The exhibitors who attended the Springfield Convention include:

Charles Lamb, Rockford; Joseph Hopp, Chicago; M. M. Rubens, Joliet; B. F. Uran, Mattoon; W. N. McConnell, Quincy; George D. Hopkinson, Chicago; Louis Landau, Granite City; Henry Imming, Newton; Ed. Deason, Hurst, H. E. Nelson, Quincy; G. M. Luttrell, Jacksonville; J. F. Dittman, Freeport; Peter E. Pinkelman, Quincy; Chas. J. Law, Pana; Wm. McNamara, Virden; T. S. Scott, Jacksonville; Verne Coffman, Moweaqua; A. W. Barth, Carbondale; Will H. Sohn, Quincy; Reid W. Hays, DuQuoin; Jean Dagle, Gillespie; O. H. Giese, Edwardsville; J. L. Spaulding, Taylorville, D. H. Bestor, Kankakee; D. Frisinia, Taylorville; G. B. Wills, Olsey; Tony Serra, Pawnee; Dr. H. W. Pitner, Fairfield; W. L. Spar, Wilmette; A. Sigfried, Decatur; Cecilia K. Zah, Mt. Pulaski; W. D. Burford, Aurora; J. A. Siepker, Edwardsville; W. B. Knoedler, Litchfield; Mrs. M. Duer, Springfield; F. W. Steimle, Washington; Frank Hocking, Jr., Taylorville; Ben Rovin, Springfield; Steve Burns, Lincoln; Gus Kerasotes, Springfield; L. A. Burnstine, Springfield; A. C. Metcalf, Paris; E. O. La Roche, Clifton; W. B. Sudduth, Clinton; Mrs. Lawrence Watkins, Petersburg; F. W. Hartmann, Chicago; A. A. Gagnon, Forrest; J. R. Kramer, Geneva; H. C. Daley, Carlinville; V. Hick, Marion; Fred Schneblin, Mascoutah; Louis Daniels, Benld; Henry V. Metteren, Chicago; B. A. Wormwald & Wife, La Salle; Belaban & Katz, Chicago; J. A. Rubens, Aurora; Wm. H. Cadoret, Kankakee; Dee Robinson, Peoria; W. W. Watts, Springfield; H. C. Loper, Springfield; Ray Pftcher, Rossville; Harry Koffman, Chicago.

Illinois Exhibitors Feted by First National

One of the pleasant features of the Springfield, Ill., Exhibitors' Convention was a dinner tendered to the exhibitors and members of the press, by First National, at the St. Nicholas Hotel. Sam Katz, of Chicago, presided, and J. D. Williams, general manager, made a special trip from New York to make an address. Mr. Williams took the opportunity to deny reports that the Talmadge Sisters are leaving First National, and he declared that these rumors were false and that Norma and Constance would continue making features for the First National organization and will carry out their contracts in every respect. He also declared that his organization had no connection with National Bookings.

Mr. Katz announced the appointment of three directors in Illinois: Messrs. Watts, of Springfield; J. J. Rubens, of Aurora, and Cadoret, of Kankakee. These gentlemen will confer with the franchise holders from time to time and will look after the interests of all members in the state.

Manager Seery and Sales Manager Eichenlaub of First National's Chicago office were also present at the dinner.

Names Philadelphia House "The Stanley Theatre"

Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America, announces that the name, Stanley Theatre, has been selected for the new motion-picture house which that organization has now under construction at 19th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. It is explained that it was thought fitting by the officials of the company that this new $2,000,000 theatre should be named after the founder of the organization, Stanley V. Mastbaum, so that it might serve to perpetuate his memory.

The building has a frontage of 143 feet on Market Street and 176 feet on 19th Street. Besides the principal entrances on the street level there is also an entrance to the subway. The structure is of stone, brick, terra-cotta and art glass. It will have a seating capacity estimated at 4,000. Marble and ornamental plaster work will add to the magnificence of the interior decorations, which include a wall covering of silk damask especially designed for this theatre.

It is expected that the theatre will be opened to the public sometime around the Christmas holidays.

Arthur S. Kane Addresses A.M.P.A. Meeting

Arthur S. Kane, of Arthur Kane Pictures, was the first speaker called on by President Paul Lazarus at the last meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, which, due to the initiative of the speakers' committee, was featured by three interesting talks and a record attendance.

After an introduction by Bert Adler, Mr. Kane discussed the growth of motion picture advertising from the early days of the industry to the present time. He showed how the old "nickel showman" was educated to the idea of advertising, and also how extensive advertising campaigns had been an important factor in putting over the palace-like picture theatre of the present day.

Other speakers who addressed the members were Geoffry Nye, far-eastern representative for Goldwyn, who told of conditions in the Orient, including China, Japan and the Malay Peninsula; also William Brandt, president of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York, who was present with four fellow members as a committee from the T. O. C. C.

Jack Steinhauer on Staff of Boxing Promoter

Jack Steinhauer has resigned from Exhibitor's Trade Review and henceforth will make his headquarters in the publicity offices of "Tex" Rickard, the promoter, at Madison Square Garden. Mr. Steinhauer will aid in the publicity campaigns that will precede the boxing shows which Rickard will stage there twice a month.

They Call Them "The Flying Squadron"

First National's Buffalo staff: R. J. Hayes, sales manager; G. Emerson Dickman, Murray Hawkins, and Hugh Rennie, branch manager

THE sales staff representing First National in Buffalo proved that they deserved the title, "First National's Flying Squadron," for, at a minute's notice, three First National standard bearers packed their grips and boarded the first fast train for New York.

R. H. Clark, treasurer and general manager of the First National Exchange, decided to hold a convention with the Buffalo representatives, and bring them to New York for this purpose. On Saturday he wired Hugh Rennie, the manager of the Buffalo office, to present himself and his staff at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City, in the offices of the First National Exchange, Inc., at ten o'clock, Monday morning, September 13th.

On the dot of ten, Monday, these salesmen presented themselves to R. H. Clark, and were received by H. L. Knappen, greater New York sales manager for First National. The convention was an informal one. R. H. Clark received Mr. Rennie's report as to business conditions in general in the Buffalo territory. E. J. Hayes, the sales manager for Buffalo, turned over to Mr. Clark a grip full of contracts, which otherwise would have been mailed in, and told of conditions prevailing in Buffalo and vicinity. G. Everson Dickman and Murray Hawkins pleased Mr. Clark and Mr. Knappen with their reports on the sale of franchises as well as the outlook for contract business in their respective territories. Constructive talks on salesmanship were given by Mr. Clark and Mr. Knappen.

Work for the 1920-21 season was outlined. The business meeting came to a close at twelve o'clock, and the Buffalo boys in a body paid a flying visit to the Home Office to see how things worked on the inside.

South American Exchange Increases Activities

Marcel Morhange, co-partner and manager of the New York Film Exchange of Buenos Aires, who are the distributors of all the Vitagraph productions in Argentine, states that his firm, represented by his partner, W. F. Gaulke, and in partnership with Gonzales & Co., of Buenos Aires, and Oliver & Co., of Montevideo, has just bought all the holdings of Saenz & Co., who are the distributors in the Argentine of Goldwyn, Robertson-Cole and Gaumont productions.

Under the deal the New York Film Exchange will have charge of all of the distribution of the films under the management of Mr. Morhange, the theatre will be under the management of Manuel Gonzales.

Shipman Off for Far East with Many Features

Among the passengers sailing on the Imperator this week were Frederic Shipman and his wife en route to the Far East via London and Paris. Mr. Shipman sails to complete negotiations for the exploitation of First National Pictures and other products with Morris Greenhill and David P. Howells who have called him to London for completion of plans.

The consummation of this deal, it is stated, secures for the chain of theatres now controlled by Frederic Shipman, and for all the territories of India, China, Japan, Java, Straits Settlements, etc., pictures of a high quality.

Fifteen of the most successful features recently released are now in transit.

120,000 Vote in First National Balloting

Politicians and Press Interested in Straw Vote in Theatres: Harding Far Ahead

WITH 120,000 votes cast, interest in the nation-wide straw ballot under the auspices of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., on the part of newspapers and political headquarters continues unabated two weeks after the close of the balloting, declares First National. Many circumstances in connection with the counting of the ballots cast in individual theatres have delayed the forwarding of returns to the home office of First National for tabulation and although the returns are yet far from complete hundreds of newspapers throughout the country are featuring the story daily and the national headquarters of both political parties are still demanding a telephone supplement to the list of returns which are sent them daily.

The unabated interest in the event is due, probably, to the large number of theatres which co-operated in the taking of the vote. This resulted in a comparatively large number of returns being received daily at the offices of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., in New York, with the result that numerous new cities were added to the total on each daily list. The keen interest felt by politicians as to the state of affairs in Ohio and Indiana, and a question as to whether the Republicans will be able to cut into the "Solid South" of the Democrats, and the fact that the returns in the Straw Vote have indicated that election day is the only time at which a definite answer can be obtained to these things, has aided in keeping the tabulation of the theatrical vote a matter of prime importance.

The service which is supplied the Democratic National Committee and Republican National Committee was arranged by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., at the request of the two parties. Both parties make no secret of the fact that they are "doubtful" as to the outcome in the November election in Indiana and Ohio, and both requested detailed returns from both these states. The Democratic Committee also made a confidential request for the detailed returns in some other territories as soon as the returns began to arrive in New York. As the balloting progressed and proved itself as being well in line with expected results in territories in which they felt no doubt, the Republican National Committee also evinced interest in territories aside from the two states mentioned, from which they detailed information.

Many of the theatres which conducted straw balloting had experiences with it that will occupy a space in the history of the houses. In many places, especially the small towns, the mayor and other city or county officials, according to First National, took charge of the ballot box from the time the voting started and personally signed the tally sheet that was forwarded to the home offices of First National. In the larger cities it was the usual thing to have the district leader in the districts where the theatre is located appointed as a teller. This resulted in an assurance of an absolutely non-partisan return, for in all cases, unless it was possible to have a teller appointed by both of the larger parties, the theatre manager himself appointed non-political tellers.

The present standing of the votes gives the following line-up of states: For Harding: Connecticut, Colorado, California, North Dakota, South Dakota, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Maine, New York, Nevada, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. Total tabulated vote, 75,656.

For Cox: Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky, Missouri, Ohio, Virginia and West Virginia. Total tabulated vote, 45,054.

In regard to the League of Nations the state line-up as shown by the votes tabulated is the same as it is for the candidates, the states favoring Harding being opposed to the League. The total vote tabulated, however, stands at 50,154 for the League and 58,338 against the entry of the United States into it.

Famous Players Sales Classes Will Open

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will open its new school of salesmanship at the home office, 485 Fifth Avenue, on Monday, October 11, when the first of a series of classes, each lasting four weeks, will hold its initial session. Fred C. Creswell, who for some time past has been Field Sales Supervisor of the distribution department, will be in charge of the school.

Between twenty-five and thirty men have enrolled for the first class and of these, Mr. Creswell states, about half are from outside the Famous Players organization. Ever since the first announcement of the school Mr. Creswell has been interviewing applicants for enrollment, and so carefully have the men been chosen that not more than one of every ten who have applied have been admitted. Each applicant has been subjected to the most rigid cross-examination, as to his reasons for desiring to enter the school, his ideals of salesmanship and his ideas concerning the motion picture business. Careful investigation of the applicant's past record in business has then been made before the final decision.

The remaining men, from within the organization, have been designated to attend by the District and Branch Managers. Each one has been selected as a reward for faithful service and in appreciation of his worthiness for promotion and general qualifications for salesmanship. Every section of the country will be represented in the school, some coming all the way from the Pacific Coast.

It is estimated by the Famous Players-Lasky officials that the cost of training each man in the school will approximate $1,500. All expenses of the students throughout the four weeks of the course will be paid by the company, reservations for their living accommodations having been made at the Hotel Bristol, 48th Street. They will have the best rooms available and will have their meals in a private dining room, giving them an opportunity for intimate and unrestrained discussion of their daily classroom problems if they should so desire.

The work of remodelling and furnishing the classroom is about completed. Thirty-five desks, of the most approved type now in use in the colleges, have been installed, and for each desk there is a swivel office chair. At one end of the room, which is about fifty feet by twenty, there is a platform for chart demonstrations by the instructor and special speakers.

The sessions will be held daily from 9:30 to 4:30 and each session will be addressed by some official of the company or department head. Special attention will be paid to productions and the work of the production department, on the theory that the best salesman is the one who has a thorough knowledge of what he is selling and of its points of superiority over competitive product. Vice President Jesse L. Lasky, who is in charge of production, will speak often and there will be addresses by other production officials and by leading directors. There will be projection room demonstrations of old and new subjects, showing the improvements in production art and technique. Short subjects as well as features will receive attention and among the speakers will be Burton Holmes and Louis Francis Brown, manager of the Burton Holmes business organization. Supplementing the classroom work there will be trips to the Long Island studio and special theatre parties of a combined business and social character, giving the men an opportunity to study the up-to-date methods of presentation in the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion Theatres as well as to familiarize themselves with many of the new Paramount productions which are being shown in advance of release dates.

Goldwyn's New York Exchange Moves

Goldwyn's New York Exchange will move on Saturday, October 9, from the outgrown quarters which it has occupied since July, 1917, on the eleventh floor of 509 Fifth Avenue, to the twelfth floor of 729 Seventh Avenue, where many motion picture concerns have their headquarters. The eleventh floor of 509 Fifth Avenue will be taken over by Goldwyn's Foreign Department which has been located on the tenth floor of the same building. The old projection room at 509 Fifth Avenue will continue to be used for showings for the present at least.

The Exchange will occupy but a part of the twelfth floor at 729 Seventh Avenue until February 1, 1921, when the leases of the other tenants expire. After that it will occupy the full 10,000 square feet of space on that floor.

Robertson-Cole Manager Turns Benedict

Jerome Safron, manager of the New York branch of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, was married Sunday, September 26th, to Miss Sally Zanderer, of New York, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Zanderer.

Willis Leaves National Picture Theatres

Lloyd D. Willis, Franchise Manager of National Picture Theatres, Inc., has tendered his resignation to accept the position of Secretary and Treasurer of the Sealed-Air Laboratories, Inc., of New York, manufacturers of a process to preserve automobile tires.

The repeated appearances of "Wesley Barry" in person at theatres in various parts of the country, when the real Wesley Barry was miles from the points scheduled for the "personal appearance," has at last been explained, states First National. The mystery was solved as the result of an investigation instituted by First National following the announcement of a theatre manager of Detroit to the effect that Wesley and his father were to appear personally at his theatre on Wednesday, September 29.

Harry Scott, the Detroit manager for First National, promptly started "the ball rolling" on the announcement of the local theatre-manager, who like others had been fooled into believing the pair were young Barry of screen fame and his parent, says First National. Wires were exchanged between Detroit, New York and the Coast, and steps taken to prevent the public appearance of any so-called Wesley Barry in the Detroit houses. The Detroit police have also been asked to investigate.

When questioned at the Hotel Cadillac, where he was stopping, the alleged father, according to First National, gave his name as Alfred Scott and that of the boy as Sidney Ward Scott. The boy is said to bear a close resemblance to the original Wesley and to travel about under the sobriquet of "Freckles." The father also admitted, says First National, that a similar "personal appearance" had been staged in a New Jersey town some fourteen months ago.

What Exhibitors Are Thinking

"'Canned' Others for News"

"Motion Picture News,"
"Gentlemen:

"A poor woe begone exhibitor wants to look on 'his editor' as a friend and hopes and prays to Allah that he always will be one. For if the editor isn't a friend, who for the love o' Mike can he look to outside of his organization?

"As for the reviews, more power to you. You tell 'em and tell 'em true. I canned all the others for the NEWS, for somehow or other I've got faith in the NEWS, and faith is about all we have got left these profiteering days. More power to you, and I'll send you more vitriol for your pen if you run shy.

"As to grievances, I have had all that the other fellows have told about and a private collection of my own, i. e., bad films, broken promises, overcharges, advance deposits held back, 'n everything.

"When friend salesman breezes in (and by the way some of them are darned good fellows at that) and gravely informs me that my Quota for Bath on Her Husband's Wife is so much—well, I used to register an ironic smile, but now I just yawn. Who in Sam Hill makes up those Quotas? I never heard of one that takes local conditions into consideration. All they go by is the census reports.

"Best wishes,
"C. H. THOMAS,
"Park theatre,
"Bath, N. Y."

Maximum in Prices Reached

"Motion Picture News,"
"Gentlemen:

"Regarding film prices, etc., we all have to live and I want the producer to have a fair rental for his product; but I do not want to pay any more for film than I am paying at this time. I have to resort to every device possible (I mean legitimate device) to keep my business open or paying under present conditions. I have had to raise my prices, but have put on better shows with the raise. There is no serious complaint, but I realize I am at the limit with prices, and unless the producers realize this too, something will happen in Orofino, as I believe it will in many other small towns.

"Taxes and film rental never let up, and with each added expense I have let out another effort to meet it and so far have been successful, but I want to say for my town—and say it good and loud that all may hear—I believe we are at the top right now. I have been here in the same business for over five years, and feel I know the conditions.

"Just where the blame for the high prices is I can not say, but I believe it is partly with overpaid stars and partly with the exhibitors themselves. I might be able to pay extra price for a certain feature and make money with it, but it does not follow that I would be able to pay as much for a string of pictures every week following, even though they were equally as good. The business is not here for them. There is a happy medium, but it looks like the producer failed to see this and had his eye on the one big thing as a measuring stick. If this course is persisted in, it will lead to serious trouble for all concerned.

"Yes, I like the NEWS, it is one of the most valued assistants I have. In fact it is assistant manager at the Rex.

"This is all for now, but there is no telling how soon I might get the fever again.

"Yours very truly,
"J. H. MILLER,
"Rex theatre,
"Orofino, Idaho."

"Mr. William A. Johnston,
"Motion Picture News,"
"Dear Sir:

"Mr. Nathan Myers, of Newark, N. J., seems to have little regard for such places as Blooming Grove, Texas.

"I agree with him; the exchanges make a mistake in running films until they become scratched and torn, but I do not agree that they should be kept away from the little towns until the second, third and fourth-run houses have had them.

"The fact is these second, third and fourth-run houses in the cities put a film through the machine from eight to ten times a day, and the little towns run it only three or four times.

"The scratching and tearing seems to be done by the second, third and fourth-run houses, if ordinary wear and tear is taken into consideration.

"Another thing, where did Mr. Myers get the idea that the equipment in the small town is so poor? I visit from three to five small towns a week, and I find pretty good equipment.

"If the exchanges would see that the films they sent out are on a par with the equipment, the great eighty per cent would get more for their money.

Six Firms Incorporated in New York State

During the past week but six firms filed papers of incorporation with the Secretary of State of New York stating their intention as that of engaging in the motion picture business. The recently formed corporations include the International Church Film Corporation of New York, capitalized at $50,000, and directors Thurman Hull, Troy; Thos. C. Brown, and Mason W. Hall of Schenectady; the Wyckoff Theatre, Inc., Brooklyn, $20,000; Louis Goldberg, Nathan Mass, Sophie Goldberg, Brooklyn; Motion Picture Booking Corporation, $25,000, New York; Michael Hoffman, Henry C. K. Mattinson, Marie Shelton; Odeon Pictures Corporation, $42,000; Jack J. Ratcliffe, Mabel Strauss, Marion D. Kendall, New York City; White-Hamilton Comedies, Inc., $100,000; Arthur W. Britton, Samuel B. Howard, A. Roy Myers, New York; Upper-Brooklyn Trading Corporation, $5,000; Brooklyn; David Heyman, Henry Hammond and Leo Grossbard.

Censorship Committee in Well-Attended Session

The first meeting of the Censorship Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to perfect its organization was held on Tuesday at Delmonico's, New York, with Chairman Gabriel L. Hess presiding. Mr. Hess briefly outlined the Committee's accomplishments during the past year, and called attention to the fact that the industry faces censorship fights in 36 states in the coming year. He also recommended the appointment of several sub-committees, the personnel of which will be announced later.

The meeting was one of the most representative ever held by the committee, being attended by representatives of nearly all the large motion-picture organizations in New York.

Power's Projectors at Exposition

THE Electrical Exposition of 1920, the thirteenth annual display and demonstration of invention and development in the electrical field, will open in Grand Central Palace, New York, on October 6th and continue for ten days.

The Nicholas Power Company will have Space 39 on the main floor, in which will be exhibited Power's No. 6B, Type E lamp and lamphouse equipment, and also Incandescent Excelite equipment. On the third floor, 46th Street and Lexington Avenue end of the building, a Power's projector will be in operation, showing a film of the factory of the Nicholas Power Company and other pictures of interest to visitors to the Electrical Show.

Will C. Smith, general manager of the Nicholas Power Company, is in full charge for the Nicholas Power Company at the Electrical Show, and it is needless to say that the exhibit of this company will be put over in good shape.

Kipling Will Adapt Personally Works for Pathe Release

Paul Brunet Effects Important Arrangement with Famous British Author

AS a result of negotiations conducted between Paul Brunet, president of Pathe Exchange, and Rudyard Kipling, the celebrated British author, the latter, according to a statement just received from the Pathe headquarters in New York, has agreed to the picturization of certain of his novels and has moreover signified his willingness to adapt personally some of his well-known literary publications for showing on the screen. These screen adaptations will be released by Pathe.

The screen author, continuity writer and technical expert commissioned to advise with Kipling in the preparation of the scenarios is Randolph Lewis, well known as a pioneer of picture-writing in this country, and whose services as scenario editor have gained especial value from his intimate knowledge of all the details, mechanical and otherwise, which enter into picture productions. The statement issued by Pathe Exchange follows:

"Probably no news could be more welcome to the multitudes of motion-picture patrons all over the world than the authoritative announcement that Rudyard Kipling, at last, has been won over to screen authorship. This achievement of the seemingly impossible is to the personal credit of Mr. Paul Brunet. Under the arrangement effected by Mr. Brunet, Kipling does not merely consent to the picturization of certain of his novels and poems; he becomes in effect, the scenario writer, personally adapting celebrated examples of his published works for picture presentation by Pathe.

"Mr. Brunet admits that this projected winning of the greatest of modern English novelists to the field of picture writing was one of the most important objects of the three months' visit to Europe, from which he has recently returned. In the course of several conferences, Kipling's characteristic and well-known objections were overcome, details agreed upon and the arrangement consummated. In making this, his first public announcement on the subject, Mr. Brunet says:

"It is not necessary for me to remark that Rudyard Kipling in literature is the voice of the century. For more than a quarter of a century he has been read everywhere, in all languages. He knows no fear and makes no apology. More effectively than any other in modern letters has done, he combines the powers of the inspired prophet and the born story-teller. Governments are influenced by the clarity of his insight and the force of his warnings, while the people, delighted with the entertainment he gives them, are guided—unconsciously, perhaps,—by the valuable constructive truths which underlie all that flows from his pen. He never is obscure; all can understand him. And it is this combination of qualities which is so rarely found in an individual of the writing craft, that have given him so lofty a place in the literature of the world.

"But there is another reason why, more than any other living author, Rudyard Kipling is needed as a writer for the picture screen. In his capacity, both as a poet and a story-teller, Kipling powerfully visualizes, and he contributes that power to his readers. In their mind's eye they see his character in action. Thus even the humbliest of his creations is naturally and easily translated into terms of a motion picture. This scarcely could have been more evident had he adopted the picture medium in the first instance. But he chose the printed word, and, to that he has adhered with even more than the customary fidelity of a master of his art, until finally convinced that both his art and his public would benefit from an excursion into the world of pictures.

"Many and various attempts have been made to bring Kipling to this state of mind. They were unsuccessful formerly because the cinema had not received general recognition as a literary art medium; and, latterly, owing to lack of faith in the knowledge, judgment and good taste of the picture producers to whom he would have to intrust his work. Kipling was not so stubborn as to cling unduly to the former objection, and what the name of Pathe stands for, and has stood for since the beginning of motion pictures, has finally removed the latter objection.

"Up to the present time the works of Rudyard Kipling are represented in motion pictures by two examples only. These were Pathe productions, by special arrangement with the author, of the novel, 'The Light That Failed' and the poem 'Naulahka.' Kipling took no personal part in their picturization. But the adaptations were faithfully made, and public reception of the result more than equalled anticipation. In the three years that have elapsed since the making of these productions, many improvements, both mechanical and in the technique of picturization, have been made. A definite technique applied to writing for the screen now is established, and many distinguished novelists have become masters of it.

"Although Kipling is not ignorant of the art of original composition for picture production, he welcomes expert suggestions. He is especially interested in the vastly enlarged resources of the motion picture camera during recent years, and the screen's ability to avail itself of the enormous art advantages of control of all degrees of light and natural atmospheric effects. In his original writing, and adapting from his published works, for motion pictures he will have the assistance of a technical expert, who is considered one of the most capable continuity writers in this country.

"Kipling is under contract to write several picture features. His technical assistant sails this week to join him in England. The first Kipling script is expected to arrive in November. These productions will be supervised by Robert Brunton, who is a lifelong admirer of Kipling and an authority on his writings.

"Mr. Brunet is frank in his enthusiasm over results to be anticipated from bringing Rudyard Kipling into the motion picture field. He was not ready to name the popular published works which would figure in the pictures to be written by the famous English poet-novelist, but he felt assured that the selection would meet the approval of the mass of picture theatre patrons, as well as of those who considered Kipling pre-eminent in the world of literature."

Roger Lytton Recovers from Accident

It is not generally known that the motion picture industry narrowly escaped losing another well known actor, and one of sterling ability and character, Roger Lytton. Only Mr. Lytton's intimate friends are aware that he has returned from abroad, because upon the day of his arrival he was the victim of a dangerous accident, being run down by a motor truck and hurled against a lamp-post, injuring him severely in several ways, and rendering him unable to walk, the ligaments of his ankle being torn and a most painful strain, in addition to other serious lacerations.

"Jesse James" Picture Making Progress

Director Franklin B. Coates, is reported to be busily engaged in making "Jesse James Under the Black Flag," for Mesco Pictures Corp., of Kansas City. All locations and principal characters have been secured and the picture is entirely cast.

Indian Picture Given Preview on Coast

"The Daughter of Dawn," written and directed by Norbert Myles, in which only native Indians appeared, was given a preview at the College Theatre in Los Angeles this week. The picture was made in Oklahoma by the Texas Film Company.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 220 SO. STATE ST.

Lyman L. Ballard is now connected with the Chicago office of the United Artists Corporation in the capacity of Assistant Sales Manager. Mr. Ballard has had a long experience in the Chicago territory, both as salesman and branch manager, and has a legion of friends. Mr. Ballard was associated with Cresson E. Smith, Chicago Sales Manager, United Artists Corporation, a few years ago, with the company he, Ballard, has just left.

The official opening of Pathe's new Chicago exchange on South Wabash avenue, which lasted for an entire week, brought crowds of film men to the commodious new quarters. The large number of out of town exhibitors among the visitors was notable. The size, up-to-date equipment and handsome furnishings of the office, paper department, inspection rooms and huge vaults, brought forth much favorable comment. Manager Aschmann, Assistant Manager Anderson and the entire staff gave all visitors a warm welcome and personally conducted them through the different departments. Manager Aschmann is, at present, in New York for a ten days' or two weeks' stay.

With the removal of moving picture from Orchestra Hall to make way for the winter season of symphony and other concerts, and the taking over of the Playhouse by the Wood's interests, the Ziegfeld theatre will become the only moving picture house on the Boul, Mich., and exchangemen are fighting hard to get their big pictures booked by Manager Kenzie.

Universal put on a trade showing of "Once to Every Woman" with musical accompaniment at its projection room in the Consumers Building this week. It was the forerunner to an exploitation campaign calculated to put Dorothy Phillips over in a big way in the Chicago territory. The campaign, according to Harry Rice, will equal in interest the one which made "Shipwrecked Among Cannibals" a record breaking success in Illinois.

Arthur Lowy, head of the recently organized Illinois and Indiana Film exchange, has closed with Independent Films Association for the northern Illinois and Indiana rights for the Neal Hart series of eight-five reel out-of-door pictures, the forthcoming series of Pinnacle Comedies and "The Lone Hand." The Illinois and Indiana Film exchange will occupy new quarters at 63 E. Adams street, as Mr. Lowy found his present offices in the Consumers Building were not large enough to accommodate the increased staff made necessary by his acquisition of the Neal Hart and other pictures.

Peter J. Schaefer is leading a hard life these days. Having just purchased a Rolls-Royce he is now building a summer home at Eagle Lake, and he has just placed an order for a Curtis Aeroplane with which he will make the trip of five hundred miles from Chicago to his summer home. Another recent addition to his joys is a twenty-six foot motor boat.

B. D. Russell, of Russell, Griever & Russell, left last Saturday for Los Angeles in the interests of the Capital Film Company. Mr. Russell will be joined sometime during the week by C. M. Coverdale, president of the Capital Film Company. It is the intention of Messrs. Russell and Coverdale to make a contract, while on the coast, for a series of two-reel westerns, starring a well-known man of western film fame. When they return, they will bring back with them a print of Lester Cuneo's first five-reel western, which has just been titled "Lone Hand Wilson." There is a persistent rumor that the Capital Film Company has a well-known star signed for society dramas and that when they return they will have an important announcement to make.

Word has reached Carl Fulton of the E. E. Fulton Manufacturing Company that the installation of three Arc Controls in Rubens and Finklestein's big new Capitol Theatre at St. Paul has been completed, and that experts are now busy putting two controls in Marcus Loew's new theatre at Memphis.

In keeping with their policy of familiarizing their executives with the operation of various theatres, Jones, Linick & Schaefer will make a switch of assistant managers. Walter Moore leaves the Randolph to become assistant manager of the Orpheum. Mike Simons leaves the Orpheum to take Mr. Moore's place at the Randolph. Sidney Weisman, son-in-law of Adolph Linick, has joined the Jones, Linick & Schaefer forces beginning his theatrical career in the booking offices of the firm.

Watterson R. Rothacker has returned to his Chicago headquarters after a week in New York. S. J. Stoughton, production manager of the Rothacker Industrial Division, is vacationing in the Wisconsin woods. Douglas D. Rothacker and his cold went to bed for a week, but his assistant, George Kilgore, brought a stenographer out from the office and business proceeded as usual.

The Illinois Secretary of State has forwarded the charter of Gollos Enterprises, Inc., to that company. The officers of the new corporation are A. Gollos, president; A. R. Gollos, vice-president and E. O. Gollos, secretary and treasurer. Aaron Gollos announces that he has purchased the rights to "The Birth of a Race" for Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Wyoming, New Mexico, and North and South Dakota, which, with the fourteen states already controlled by him, gives him twenty-one states in which to exploit this big picture. The first of the Equity pictures, which he will distribute in Illinois and Indiana, will be released within a few days.

Independent Films Association is in receipt of advices from various exchanges throughout the country showing that exhibitors are booking Neal Hart's first feature release "Hell's Oasis" with remarkable rapidity. Among the latest to write in are H. J. Fitzgerald, First National manager at Milwaukee, who reports that he has obtained twenty first runs on "Hell's Oasis" in his Wisconsin territory and L. T. Pellerin, manager of the R. D. Lewis Film Company, Dallas, Texas, who writes that he has lined up thirty-four bookings on the series of eight Hart pictures. Advertising Manager Dick Robertson of independent states that during the last week almost half the United States territory on the new Pinnacle Comedies was closed and much of it by mail, and that exhibitors also are showing great interest in this series of forthcoming releases.

Arthur Lowy, former owner and general manager of the Mickey Film Corporation, who recently formed the Illinois and Indiana exchange, has appointed F. O. Nielsen, sales manager of the new company, which already has opened its temporary quarter at 63 East Adams street. In addition to handling the Mickey Film Corporation pictures, the new organization will handle the entire output of the Pinnacle Film Corporation including the Neal Hart pictures, the Damfool Comedies and "The Lone Hand," featuring Roy Stewart.

Salesman Tracey, of First National, reports the use of First National productions by the Household Science Club at Washburn, Ill., in their campaign to raise funds for children's playgrounds in the little city and the parking of these playgrounds in a way to make them beauty spots. The local picture manager, Mr. Butler, is co-operating with the ladies in their efforts, and they have chosen First National pictures for their benefit entertainments.

The interests of Famous Players-Lasky were well looked after at the recent Exhibitors' Convention at Springfield. District Manager Wolfberg, Messrs. Doob, of Chicago, and Charles Raymond, of St. Louis, exploitation representatives, and Mr. Braun, of the Chicago office, being the Paramount delegation which attended the convention.

Manager Lucas and Assistant Manager Rozzelle, of Robertson-Cole's Chicago office, went to Springfield last week for the Exhibitors' Convention, and put on a special showing of "The Stealers" for their benefit. The picture was shown at the Lyric at 11 P. M., with special orchestral accompaniment, and made a very favorable impression on the audience.

H. B. Milligan Selling "Freedom of Ireland"

Herbert B. Milligan, president of the Creation Film Company, of Chicago, which controls the rights to "For the Freedom of Ireland" was a recent visitor in New York.

Mr. Milligan announces that his picture, which he is now marketing in the independent field, is meeting with a warm reception. He has already sold the rights for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey to Sam Zeirler, of the Commonwealth Film Company, and Northern New York State to the Nu-Art Film Corporation, of Buffalo. His other sales include Illinois and Chicago to Superior Screen Service, of Chicago, and New England States to the Federated Film Exchange, of Boston, of which Sam Grand is president. The fact that these exchanges, all among the livest in their respective cities, is taken as proof of the drawing power of the production.

"For the Freedom of Ireland" is described as a thrilling and up-to-the-minute drama. It is from the pen of Hal Reid, one of the best known authors of filmdom.

Artola Production, Inc., Announces Stock Issue

Artola Productions, Inc., of Boston, announce the issue of 1,000 shares of 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock at a par value of $100 per share, and also of 400 shares of common stock at no par value. Artola intends to make one and two-reel comedies. Alfred A. Lionais is president; Arthur M. Holah, vice-president; Charles F. Smith, treasurer, and Frank A. Grady, secretary.

Foreign Rights Sold on Two Schwab Pictures

Negotiations were concluded recently whereby Sydney Garrett, Inc., will handle and distribute the sole output of D. N. Schwab productions in all foreign countries. This representation takes in "Girls Don't Gamble" and "Smiling All the Way," the two most recent productions made and completed by the Schwab interests, with David Butler as star. Prints of each were taken across by Mr. Garrett.

Representing the Schwab interests in the deal was Joseph Klein, general manager.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Something to Think About—
Capacity houses during second week's engagement. Title has a lot to do with its success. Simplicity is its keynote and it carries its message so simply that it appeals to big percentage of patrons. (Mid. West.)

The Village Sleuth—
One of the best pictures Ray has played in. This is a regular picture and is playing to big business right along. (Mid. West.)

Little Miss Rebellion—
Just a nice little picture. Splendid for those who are tired of the big thrills. It's pleasing but not particularly startling either in theme or production. (Middle West.)

A Full House—
Below average business as all Washburns are in these parts. A very amusing farce comedy and with most any other star would do much better business. No faults with photography, direction or cast. "Skinner's Dress Suit" is the only Washburn that we have been able to do big business with. (West.)

The Roundup—
Very entertaining picture. Broke records. (West.)

Guilty of Love—
Picture fairly popular. Dorothy Dalton very well carries off her emotional role. (East.)

Humoresque—
Hangs up a three week record and packs them in on the last night of 21-day run. (East.)

Fourth week held up to good business. Patrons eagerly crowd the house to see it. (West.)

Lady Rose's Daughter—
Star attracted many as she has not been out for some time. Picture not one of her best. Fair amount of business. (East.)

Half An Hour—
Unusually good picture for Dalton. Good business. (East.)

Civilian Clothes—
Held up splendidly on third week run. Picture has very entertaining qualities. (East.)

Picture went very well. Patrons seem much pleased. Box office returns were very good. (West.)

Right to Love—
Very fine picture. Did big business. Playing second week. (East.)

The Restless Sex—
Interesting and lavishly produced picture. Played to capacity houses for one week and was held over for second week's engagement. (Middle West.)

FOX

If I Were King—
Big attraction for us—20,500 admissions in first three days (West.)

The Untamed—
Best Mix picture to date. Orchestra accompaniment helped a lot in making it entertaining. Good box office attraction. (East.)

The Deadline—
As a film play and business proposition—not much! (East.)

The Joyous Trouble Maker—
A poor picture which singularly brought good business. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Perfect Woman—
Picture went very big. Drew well every day and was well done in the opinion of many patrons of the theatre. (East.)

45 Minutes From Broadway—
A very entertaining picture. Increased greatly box office receipts. (West.)

The Heart of a Fool—
A fair picture. Business about as usual. (West.)

Married Life—
A fun riot. Audiences smiled when it started and were roaring at the finish. Many enjoyed it more than feature. (East.)

A roaring Sennett farce, funnier than "Yankee Doodle" or "Down on the Farm." Packed houses. (East.)

Good References—
Brought crowded houses as do all Talmadge pictures, either Constance or Norma. (Mid. West.)

Above the ordinary Constance Talmadge productions, and was well patronized. (M. W.)

Pleases star's followers. Opened to excellent business. (East.)

Harriet and the Piper—
This picture pleased. Business normal. Anita Stewart is only fairly popular. (Mid. West.)

The Notorious Miss Lyle—
An average picture which brought usual business. (West.)

Don't Ever Marry—
This picture was entertaining and well-liked. Busness about as usual. (West.)

A good picture, bringing more than usual business. (West.)

Go and Get It—
A real thriller which was boosted by all the critics and which drew the crowds. (Middle West.)

Splendid picture full of action. Played to big audiences. (Mid. West.)

A picture with life and interest. It is a true representation of real life and takes well with the audiences. A feature that will be an asset to any theatre. (East.)

HODKINSON

Love Madness—

PATHE

One Hour Before Dawn—
Excellent mystery story. Drew good houses. H. B. Warner puts picture over and is given admirable support by Anna Q. Nilsson. (East.)

EQUITY

Midchannel
Filled two houses during a simultaneous first run. Young has a steady following, who are enthusiastic supporters. This picture is different from those which have preceded. Star not so much in evidence as in "Eyes of Youth." Good support helps to make the picture interesting. (Mid. West.)

GOLDWYN

The Penalty—
A great picture. It went over exceedingly well. Was well liked and brought big box office returns. (West.)

Earthbound—
Went over big. The picture for the hour dealing with subject all are interested in. (West.)

A remarkable picture which has a strong apeal for high class audiences. Played to excellent business at this theatre for two weeks breaking one Sunday's house record. (Middle West.)

Man Who Had Everything—
Very good picture. Brought good business. (West.)

METRO

Clothes—
A fair picture. Picture drew well for first two days, rest of week mediocre. Average week's receipts. (East.)

Price of Redemption—
A splendid picture. Thrilling. Fine acting. By far the best work Bert Lytell has done. (Middle West.)

Held in Trust—
Fair picture. Normal business during run. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Devil's Passkey—
Played eight days and holds the house record. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The Love Flower—
Beautiful picture. Up to Griffith's high standard and appealed very strongly to audiences. Played two weeks to capacity houses and on account of big business was held over for third week. (Middle West.)

Usual Griffith type. Business picked up every day. (East.)

A pleasing picture which brought more than normal business. (West.)

SELZNICK

The Flapper—
A very entertaining picture and brought good business. (West.)

The Figurehead—
Best thing O'Brien has ever done. Business splendid. (East.)

The Simp—

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

Homespun Folks—
An average picture in all ways. Pleased but had no box office draft. (M. W.)

The Leopard Woman—
Terrible picture. Awful business. Was not liked at all. (Mid. West.)

An excellent picture and a good box office attraction. (Mid. West.)

REALART

The Soul of Youth—
A fine production. Business better than usual during run. (West.)

Plot of picture good. Good houses entire week. (East.)

A sweet little picture, daintily done. All star cast lifts it from the plane of mediocrity. Did consistently nice business all week. (Mid. West.)

Atlanta Exhibitors State "Teaser Stuff" Gets Results

New Ideas in Display Advertising as Written by Showmen in Southern City

Exponents of the "teaser" variety of advertising will find interest in the experiences of Atlanta, Ga., exhibitors who have recently been using this form of newspaper display extensively.

Manager James F. Jackson of the Tudor theatre has recently put over a campaign on "One Hour Before Dawn." He used "teaser stuff" for bill-boards, newspaper ads, and throw-aways. Before the picture was advertised at all, he carried a good deal of stuff in the daily papers—just "What Happened to Harrison Kirke, One Hour Before Dawn?" "A Riddle to Puzzle Woman's Intuition—One Hour Before Dawn," single-column stuff, in a "box." There were seven of these little ads, each with the single sentence, and each sentence different, in each of the three daily papers, for the entire week preceding the opening of the picture. On Sunday, a good big ad on the amusement page revealed the whole thing. The stunt is worthy of note, because it created interest and had the public guessing.

Another picture on which the newspaper teaser idea was employed with fine effect was on "Up in Mary's Attic," which was shown in Atlanta at the Rialto theatre, under the auspices of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises. The stunt was the idea of Frank Hammond, Exploitation Manager for Lynch, and it went over big.

Nothing whatever had been said, either on Film Row, or in the newspapers about the picture. So, for a week before the picture was to open, the market page of each of Atlanta's three daily papers carried quotations of food-stuffs at ridiculously low prices—as "Country hams—18c. per pound, Up in Mary's Attic," "New Irish potatoes, 3c. per pound," "Young broilers, very nice, 17½ c. per pound, Up in Mary's Attic," and so on. Anxious housewives stormed the offices of the three papers, demanding to know the location of the "new country store called Mary's Attic." So insistent were these queries, and so numerous, that the original plan of revealing the stunt on Sunday had to be abandoned, and the secret divulged on Wednesday. The stunt was a most successful one.

Manager George Schmidt, of the Alamo No. 2, is also a showman of good judgment, who is a live, wide-awake exhibitor. Although the usual policy of Mr. Schmidt's theatre is second-run pictures, he gets a new one now and then, and when he does, it is worthy of note. He put over one of the best campaigns this town has yet seen, on his showing of "The Girl Supreme," recently, and he employed the "teaser" idea with his screen-advertising to great effect.

Mr. Schmidt is a firm believer in the theory that an exhibitor's screen is his very best advertising medium and his best friend—so he makes the most of it.

His first slide made its appearance on the Monday of the week preceding the run of his feature picture. The first slide simply said, "What is the Gift Supreme?" The next day, to his opening line had been added, "We'll show you next week" On Thursday, this slide, which came immediately after the feature picture, was followed by another slide which said, "On next Monday and Tuesday, at 1 o'clock, we are going to give away money! The Gift Supreme made us do it!" People were inclined to be suspicious, but they read the slide and remembered it—which was what Mr. Schmidt was after. The newspapers carried the same sign, in a "box" displayed prominently on each page—but nothing else was given.

And it is worthy of note that there was a perfect swarm of people in front of the Alamo No. 2, the following Monday at 1 o'clock, some of them suspicious, some apologizing volubly to their neighbors for being there, some credulous—but all curious! And precisely at 1 o'clock, a tall young man, dressed in "cow-boy" togs mounted a box in front of the theatre, and —threw away pennies! He proclaimed that "The Gift Supreme" had made him do it.

And no announcement was made as to what the gift supreme was—the audience was left to find that out for themselves.

Thus does the epidemic of "teaser stuff" thrive in Atlanta.

"Hungarian Lustspiel" Given Artistic Presentation at the Capitol

KELER-BELA'S "Hungarian Lustspiel" is being used at the Capitol theatre this week as an overture number with an artistic and novelty presentation adding to the composition's musical qualifications.

The overture is begun in the regular manner by the orchestra but later goes to the stage, where a Gypsy band of string instruments, among which are the cymbalom, takes up the strains, the regular orchestra being stilled for the time being.

The Gypsy musicians have been provided with a stage setting, an exterior showing a small clump of trees and a night sky in perspective. At right is a camp fire with a kettle hanging over crossed sticks. Left of the fire Mlle. Gambrelli, costumed in the attire of a Gypsy, sits until the strains of the composition change to a dance, when, in company with Alexander Oumansky, she interprets the music being played.

A vocal and violin solo also are used in the number. During the ballet portion of the selection the Capitol orchestra assists the Gypsy band. The Gypsy musicians are attired in Hungarian costumes.

Hill Strong for Novelty "Window Displays"

Novelty window displays are as easily arranged for as they are effective, according to Clarence Hill, manager of the Antlers and the Majestic theatres, Roseburg, Oregon. For this reason Mr. Hill strives continually to arrange for small odds and ends that will fit snugly and appropriately into the display window of a store and then uses novelty cards to connect up the interest getters with attractions at one or the other of the theatres he manages.

All of his displays attract attention but the one that is still talked about is the one he used to exploit a showing at the Antlers theatre of the "The Virtuous Vamp." After emphasizing the "shimmy" dance shown by the star in the picture, he procured a pair of Japanese waltzing mice and placed them in the window of the drug store on the main street of the town. These waltzing mice are never still, except when asleep, due, according to scientists to non-development of that portion of the brain which enables other animals, as well as human beings, to maintain their equilibrium. They are continually twisting and turning, acting very much like a dizzy person and their antics had given Mr. Hill the idea for his tie-up. On top of the cage was a printed card anouncing:

"These two mice were caught in the Antlers theatre, the day after a showing of Constance Talmadge in 'THE VIRTOUS VAMP.' We'll say her 'shimmy' dance is some gyration."

"BACK TO GOD'S COUNTRY," featuring Nell Shipman, also a First National Attraction, was advertised by using a toy dog, which was brought all the way from San Francisco in a window display. A cut out of Wapi, the ferocious malemute in the picture, was utilized and the toy dog's kennel was affixed to it directly in back of the head so that the tiny dog walked through the mouth of Wapi every time it entered or left its bed.

Mr. Hill declares that the window displays are the only real effective means of exploitation open to him. Roseburg is credited with a population of 4,000 and Mr. Hill says that a window display on view three days which reach 3,832 of his possible patrons, the others being made up of infants, bed ridden invalids and people who wouldn't walk across the street "to see the Crucifixion in real life."

Albany Theatre Will Open Bills on Saturday

Fred Elliott, manager of the Clinton Square theatre, Albany, has decided to test out the benefits of running the feature picture from Saturday to Saturday, instead of opening on Monday afternoon, as is the usual custom. Mr. Elliott will try out his scheme with Marshall Neilan's "Go Get It," which is booked for the near future. Mr. Elliott believes that he will be the gainer by having his patrons of Saturday praise the picture among their friends on Sunday, and likewise that the display advertising which will be used in the two Sunday papers, will be more effective than if the picture opened on Monday. The stunt is entirely new to Albany and its outcome will be watched with keen interest not only by the managers of other houses, but also by the managers of the various film exchanges. Albany houses do not operate on Sunday.

Meyer Holds Straw Vote at the Palace

Among the theatres to see the exploitation possibilities of the present presidential campaign was the Palace theatre of Hamilton, Ohio.

F. S. Meyer, manager of the Palace, had special ballots printed and conducted a straw vote that was a most efficient business getter.

Publicity was given the event and considerable free space was secured both on the vote and the announcement that such an event was scheduled.

Exploitation Methods of Owen and Holmes

Down in central Arkansas—to be exact, within sixteen miles of the geographical center of the state—is located the progressive town of Conway. It's a college town and it boasts of a population of 4,600, two denominational schools, Hendrix College for young men, Central College for young women, and the Arkansas State Normal School or Teachers' College, and two moving picture theatres. And one of these theatres, the Ideal, located in this typical college community, is owned by two typical college young men. E. C. "Bugs" Owen is one of them, and Willis N. Holmes is the other.

When the pictures are booked and arrive they can get crowds. A few words in the ear of one of their college friends and the trick is turned as far as the boys are concerned. They get the town patronage a different way. The printing establishments cannot handle fancy advertisements or dodgers, as the boys make their own. One of them grabs his tack hammer each morning and proceeds to stick up one-sheet on boards in front of the post office, the three banks and the leading drug store. The other boy grabs the paint bucket—root beer stein to be explicit—and literally whitewashes the sidewalk with signs. For the benefit of students and children a matinee is run each afternoon beginning at 2:30 o'clock. The night show starts at 6:30 o'clock and the boys about the same time begin hunting seats for their patrons.

St. Louis Theatre Imports Artist

The management of the Del Monte theatre, the Famous-Players' latest addition to their galaxy of St. Louis cinema auditoriums, presented during the past week one of the most novel musical and song numbers seen here in a long period.

Arrangements were completed with Egbert Van Alstein, popular song-writer and composer, to have him play a number of his latest and old-time hits. After rendering a series of his song numbers which were the "rage" during former years, among which were "Pretty Baby" and "Under the Old Apple Tree," a local vocalist assisted Van Alstein in the rendition of some of his newer musical endeavors. Van Alstein made the trip to St. Louis from New York especially for the week's engagement.

It was an expensive feature for the Del Monte, but the unusual publicity afforded it by local newspaper critics was well worth it.

Budding Song Writers Get Try-out at 'Frisco

Ambitious and budding song writing geniuses are submitting their efforts to the San Francisco California theatre management where, this week, one of the songs written by these local amateurs will be sung at every one of the 35 performances during the week. The most popular song, to be decided by the audience, will be published by Sherman, Clay and Company, music publishers on the Pacific coast.

How Summers Got Lancaster All Excited

Enterprising Small Town Exhibitor Makes Hit by Giving Away a Baby Pig

An example of what exploitation in the small towns will do is to be found in the experience of Ed. Summers, manager of the Albert theatre of Lancaster, N. Y., a thriving town a few miles from Buffalo, in putting over "Down on the Farm."

Mr. Summers advertised far and wide through the countryside that a real live baby would be given away on Tuesday evening, September 14, at the Albert. Whooz Gon'na Win The Baby? asked the thousands of dodgers which were thrown to the four winds in the district. Long before the playing date, Mr. Summers began to send forth mystery advertising about the lost baby and he had the whole populace anxiously awaiting the date when the "chee-ild" would be given to some lucky resident of the town.

Mr. Summer gave away thousands of attractive dodgers, using several designs. He also put over a number of excellent window displays, special lobby exhibits and a lot of mighty good program advertising. The night of the big event arrived. The house was jammed and the walls were expected to fall in so great was the crowd against them. Everyone was keyed to a high point of expectancy.

The name of the prize winner was announced.

A man walked down the aisle to claim the baby. All was quiet as each and every member of the audience waited to get a peek at the cute little thing and then—THERE WAS A GRUNT!

Yes, there it was—walking out from the side wings to meet Mr. Summers—the cutest little porker that ever trod the gangplank to the sausage mill. The house broke into loud laughter—but he who laughed last was the man who won the "baby." He knew that many pounds of pork chops were inside that grunter's hairy coat. Bravely folding the "child" to his bosom, he hurried from the house while the rest of the audience settled back to enjoy the rest of the program.

Another good stunt put over by Mr. Summers was the driving of an old hay wagon about the streets of Lancaster, with a young man and an old darkey made up as farmers and the wagon decorated with corn stalks, pumpkins, etc. The wagon was also used as a sort of band stand in front of the theatre, when the two "rubes" drummed in patrons. A sign on the wagon read: "You'l di-a laffin at Mack Sennett's comedy 'Down on the Farm' at the Albert, Lancaster."

Velvet Drapes Used as Vocal Stage Setting

FOR the vocal offering at the Rivoli theatre this week the duet from "Lakme" is sung by Mary Fabian, soprano, and Georges Du Franne, tenor. The stage setting used is a velvet drop on which a strong scarlet flood is thrown.

The effect is to silhouette the figures of the singers in a blaze of warm light that is very pleasing to the eye.

The singers are attired in conventional evening dress and make much of the dramatic possibilities of the selection.

Lobby Display by the Victoria Philadelphia

On this page is shown the lobby display arranged for "Go and Get It" by the Victoria theatre, Philadelphia. A feature of the display was a remarkable life like cut-out of the apeman placed in a cage

Queen Theatre Does Things for "Mary's Attic"

The lobby display at the Queen Theatre, at Dallas, Texas, during the opening run of "Up In Mary's Attic," aroused widespread comment, not only for its novelty, but also for its beauty.

The ticket booth was removed from the centre of the lobby, and in its place, was erected a beautiful attic, with a figure of a bathing girl, sitting on the window ledge, while the pretty ticket seller looked smilingly over the throngs of people who flocked to see the show.

To the right and left of the lobby were free hand drawings on beaver board, making an unusual and attractive display. These harmonized in color and general scheme with the attic and drew considerable attention throughout the city. Various window displays were also employed, prominent among which was that of Spalding & Co. A full line of athletic goods and equipment were displayed around the large oil painting of one of the bathing girls, with an attractive card to the effect that all athletic goods, athletic costumes, bathing suits, etc., used in "Up In Mary's Attic" were of Spalding make.

In addition one of the largest department stores in Dallas had a painting of the baby in "Up In Mary's Attic" and a sign explaining that the "cutest baby ever seen on the screen" was probably wearing clothes bought at that establishment.

Plunkett Stages Great Novelty Act

A SPECIALTY number which is within the reach of every exhibitor no matter how small his theatre or how limited his appropriation for such extras is being staged this week by Manager Plunkett of the Strand.

Drab drapes are hung back of the tormentors in which four slits have been left or cut, "shoulder high."

With the stage and house dark except for small spots focused on the faces, just the heads of the Strand Male Quartette appear through the openings mentioned during the rendition of "Ol' Uncle Moon" and an encore.

The singers are made up in straight clown white with their hair covered by a smooth white bandage or specially made caps, so that the effect is most unique.

The spots just cover the faces exposed. On the encore the singers' heads disappear one by one as each, beginning with the tenor, renders his last note.

One of the best musical novelties ever presented on Broadway and so simple and inexpensive that its entertainment value seems almost unbelievable.

Brooklyn Strand Stages Song Prologue

A bridal suite and wedding altar with the radiant bride in veil and wedding gown . . . were employed this week at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre to add effectiveness to the song prologue of Estelle Carey, soprano.

Several drops and a variety of shaded lights were used, too. The prologue, arranged by Managing Director Edward L. Hyman, was called "The Bells of St. Mary." The orchestra played lightly the bell part from the Mendelssohn wedding march, the curtains parted revealing Miss Carey in bridal attire, a vision in white against the background of black plush. She was a bride complete from veil to corsage. She sang one verse and the curtains parted again showing a beautiful church window with light streaming through upon the altar. Kneeling at this shrine Miss Carey sang the second chorus of "The Bells of St. Mary."

The stunt particularly pleased the women. Manager Hyman said the novelty took only a few minutes, is different and inexpensive. It shows how the soloist may be used to the best possible advantage. This novelty was in conjunction with the showing of "Good References."

Exhibitors Overlook Their Biggest Bet

Metzger Isn't So Strong for "Jazz" Exploitation and Recommends Heart Interest Stuff Instead

Striking the heart chord that sends the everlasting human appeal reverberating throughout a city is an art that has been left to authors and musicians, landscape and portrait painters, preachers and mothers. Now comes another adept at this work. And the newcomer who bids fair to put the human note in his work is the exhibitor—and his work is exploitation.

This brings about a new exhibitor problem which can be summed up with the following questions:

Is the jazz in exploitation essential?

Are exhibitors overlooking a big bet by aiming at the circus-type of exploitation instead of trying to reach the heart?

Is there such a thing as human-interest, sympathy-arousing promotion?

And E. Metzger, manager of the Strand Theatre, Creston, Iowa, a city of 8,000 persons, is ready to stand before the exhibitor world and claim that "it is the promotion that carries a human note that sounds the message home—you can't get under a person's skin as well with a rawhide as well as you can with a heart-to-heart talk."

It is Mr. Metzger's sentiment as quoted in the foregoing that he has found his way to new exploitation methods and devices. He has steered clear of preferment that smacks of the parade, the brass-band and the screaming heralds. He has rather preferred to seek simplicity and economy in having school-children, if possible, or a small boy and girl, at least, serve as the exploitation devices for any attraction, regardless of cost and pretentiousness, that he may desire to exploit.

A number of successful exploitation campaigns were topped recently with Mr. Metzger's promotion of "The Greatest Question," when a simple device costing but a few dollars and requiring the services of two small children demonstrated what could be done to boost this attraction and create human interest therein.

A small boy and girl, each under eight years of age, were hired by Mr. Metzger to walk the business streets of Creston. Over the heads of the two, the small boy held an umbrella. On the umbrella in white letters were painted the following words:

"We are in love—we would be rich. See through what we must pass before our dreams are realized. D. W. GRIFFITH'S 'THE GREATEST QUESTION' at the STRAND."

For a day and a half prior to the showing of "The Greatest Question," Mr. Metzger arranged for the boy and girl to traverse the business streets of Creston. The tiny children aroused interest. They were appealing. The little girl smiled sweetly and with impunity at everyone she saw and the boy—a trifle larger—tried manfully to hold the parasol protectingly over his exploitation sweetheart and act dignifiedly at the same time. The local newspapers saw fit to run human interest stories in boxes on page one. It was interesting to fancy the feelings of two children who were hired to walk over the business streets of a city, supposed to be the exploitation medium for a picture. The very human atmosphere created about the picture was the greatest asset that Mr. Metzger could have commandeered.

"While not attempting to belittle circus exploitation, or press agent human-interest exploitation, I must confess that I have found the simple, little, unpretentious stunts to work out in my favor," said Mr. Metzger. "It is for the exhibitor to judge whether his own particular local conditions and the public sentiment toward his theatre justify him in risking the big pictures on simple exploitation devices. It is something that requires study, and the average exhibitor will find that the difference in the cost of a circus stunt and the cost of a human-interest exploitation effort will certainly justify him in preferring the latter, providing, of course, that the stunt is right and that the town is ready to receive a modest stunt. That's where the shoe pinches. Resolved to a few words, it all depends on knowing what you're doing, and then doing it in style and at the same time economically."

New Angle to Old Idea Originates on Coast

An inexpensive exploitation feature that proved a decided success in obtaining results was that employed by the Kinema theatre of Los Angeles, when they cooperated with the Los Angeles Evening Express in a contest under the name of "HEY! SKINN-A-A-Y!" A special photographer and two helpers were armed with a camera and nearly two hundred plates and told to visit all the city schools and take pictures of the boys, or rather some of the boys, at each school. No names were taken and no addresses. The boys were just lined up beside some convenient wall or fence and "shot on the spot." Shortly after the trip through school-land by the photographer, there appeared announcements in the Express that soon there would be published the picture of a Los Angeles schoolboy in the paper each day. If the boy saw his picture he could call at the office of the Express and receive two passes to the Kinema theatre. He would also receive, so the story said, a free picture of himself. In addition, the pictures of the week were run on the screen at the Kinema theatre each day. One picture on Monday, two on Tuesday, three an Wednesday, etc., as the pictures came out in the paper, until the full week's pictures (six in number) were run on the screen on Saturday of each week. "It was a very novel little plan," says Richard Spier, publicity director of the Kinema," and brought us a great deal of advertising in the form of news stories in the Express. While the result was very gratifying to the theatre, the paper also reports complete satisfaction with the idea as it netted them many extra subscriptions from families of boys who had posed for pictures at some city school.

"Bacchanal" Is Rivoli's Ballet Number This Week

"BACCHANAL" is the title of the ballet number presented on the Rivoli bill this week by Paul Oscard and Thalia Zanou.

The most notable portion of the specialty is the stage setting used.

A vivid scarlet cut-out drop is hung close to the front drapes, back of which is a green drop with a white center of semi-circular shape.

The setting is somewhat on the futuristic design, representing nothing in particular, but is very pleasing to the eye.

The dance, of course, is of the passionate type. Mr. Oscard is attired in a costume suggestive of those of the ancient Greeks and Miss Zanou's dress is also abbreviated.

Stillman Stages Semi-annual Style Show

The Stillman theatre of Cleveland, O., staged its semi-annual style show last week, the event being a box office magnet of real merit.

For twenty minutes the screen entertainment was interrupted by the mannequins who, in the most modern costumes of the day, stepped out from between the heavy velvet drop, walked across the stage, and retired behind the scenes. The models were introduced by a chic little maid who carried a placard which she held for all to see. It was all very neat and very classy, and the public took advantage of the three performances a day of the style show to stampede the theatre. Even the men were in evidence to see what Dame Fashion's latest decree is.

How Waugh Put Over "Everywoman"

When Howard Waugh, manager of the Winter Garden, Jamestown, N. Y., got around to his dates for "Everywoman" it was rather late and also his principal competitor had "Suds" as an attraction.

It was this latter fact that made Waugh extend himself even more than usual with his exploitation campaign, although the Winter Garden is a house that has demonstrated the fact that publicity pays.

Waugh opened his campaign five weeks in advance of the presentation date with a private screening. He arranged no less than fifteen splendid window displays, using striking cutouts in almost all of them.

Next he landed a double page tie-up with one of the local motor truck distributors, featuring all of the stores where window trims are used. The big ad was placed in the Jamestown Journal.

Waugh used twenty times the amount of paper usually put out by the Winter Garden, posting the countryside for thirty miles in the vicinity of the town with a specially printed one sheet card. Waugh also used the two county papers with good effect, giving them each a full page ad the day before the opening of the picture.

"There was an inspiration at first to lay low on this picture," said Mr. Waugh, "because it was comparatively old for Jamestown, and the opposition was running a new one. But I figured that enough advertising would put it over if it was worked up into a campaign that would thoroughly cover the district from which our theatre draws. I figured to cover every single point, not forgetting the automobile trade. The result was that we literally packed them in for five days."

Just another proof that small town exploitation pays and PAYS BIG.

Demonstrating the Influence of a Theatre

Quinn's Rialto Has Increased Business for the Whole Street

The influence of a theatre upon a locality has most strenuously been illustrated in the change of conditions that has been brought about at El Paso, Texas, since the reopening of the Rialto theatre under its present manager, James G. Quinn. This house, with a seating capacity of approximately 1,200 seats, up until a year ago was used for road show productions, Lyceum numbers, concerts, etc., remaining dark approximately three-fourths of the time. The house was leased by Quinn and his associates about a year ago regardless of the fact that all their business associates told them they were making a bad venture because the house was about three blocks out of the busy business district of the largest western Texas city. However, the lessees had faith in the project and made numerous improvements in the house so far as an outlay of $20,000 or $25,000 would extend. When this was done they opened the theatre at advanced prices with orchestra, uniformed ushers and gave their patrons a presentation of the picture with lights and other effects.

Shortly after the opening the owners of business houses in the vicinity of the theatre were asked to join with the theatre in putting in a street lighting system that would attract attention to the district. The business men refused on the assumption that it was not up to them to help pull people to a theatre. However, it is now estimated by a number of the business men that since the reopening of the theatre under the present management business in the district has been greatly increased, some estimating to the extent of 40 per cent. The movement for improving the lighting system of the street recently started from the outside of the theatre by business men and now every one is in favor and is spending money to make the three blocks from the Rialto theatre to the other business section of the city the brightest part of El Paso. The improvement will be completed by October 1st and a general celebration will be staged in the vicinity of the theatre, which will mark the opening of the new shopping district.

Rothapfel Presents "Homespun Folks" with Prologue

AS a prelude for the feature picture, "Homespun Folks," being presented at the Capitol theatre this week, S. L. Rothapfel is staging a vocal and instrumental number which fits the production very nicely.

A suitable stage setting has been provided by Artist Wenger and a few appropriate props are used to dress the stage.

Good Stunt for Election Time Originates in Quaker City

When the names of film plays are suggestive of two meanings, they easily lend themselves to facetious exploitation. Thus "Something to Think About" was given a great deal of publicity here at Philadelphia last week. In every polling place a sizeable card was tacked up bearing the words: "Something to Think About—

"Oct. 2 last day to register."

On that same card was announced the place and date of the showing of the motion picture.

Thousands of post cards were sent to various persons. They were gotten up to give the impression upon first perusal that they were calling to the attention of the recipient some important facts he had overlooked. However, not many words were wasted in coming to the point that "Something To Think About" was really a movie and was playing at such and such a house the following week.

The Stanley Company used this means of exploitation in Philadelphia.

Uses Unique Sign for "Humoresque"

One of the many original exploitation stunts put over for "Humoresque" at Frank Rembusch's Ohio theatre, Indianapolis, was the use of a thirty by three foot strip over the lobby of the theatre, bearing the first few bars of the musical composition after which the film was named.

A broadside use of the phrase "Second Big Week" was used for the extended run.

Sororio Gets Out Special Extra for "The Silver Horde"

Something different is what Thomas D. Sororio, manager of the Strand theatre, Lowell, Mass., depends on to get the attention of his patrons.

In presenting "The Silver Horde," Mr. Sororio resorted to the newspapers for his "something different." "The Silver Horde" was scheduled for presentation on September 27, 28, and 29. On the Saturday morning previous he ordered 1,500 copies of the Lowell Courier-Citizen, the only morning paper issued here, and had the following red-typed flare on the entire front page: "Extra! Extra! Rex Beach's Thundering Drama of the North, The Silver Horde, Strand theatre, Sept. 27, 28, 29." It covered the front page from top to bottom, and what made it startlingly effective in attracting attention was the fact that in was the first time that red print was used on a local paper.

By previous arrangement the first 1,500 papers to come off the press were hustled to a job printer and put in readiness for free distribution in all parts of the city. Boys were stationed at all of the factory gates and distributed; others in the downtown stores and residential sections of the city. The boys found some interference from the regular newsboys because it put a check in their sales, but aside from a few short free-for-all conflicts between the youngsters, everything went along swimmingly.

It was one of the biggest and most effective publicity stunts carried through in Lowell in many seasons, and to Manager Sororio goes a full measure of credit for the success of the venture.

Loveridge's "Ask Any Newspaper Man" Idea

"Ask any newspaper man?"

This was the exploitation slogan adopted by John Loveridge, manager of the Rialto theatre, Omaha, Neb., to put over a special feature attraction, the showing of which was handicapped by the lack of an orchestra. Mr. Loveridge figured that if he could refer the public, especially the theatre-going public of Omaha, to the newspaper men of the city, he was sure of making a strong appeal. Results proved that he was right.

Therein was built the exploitation campaign for "Go and Get It." The campaign, to be sure, was backed up by the stunts and daring of a "human fly," but stripped of all non-essentials it was the slogan of "ask any newspaper man" that put over "Go and Get It," according to the manager of the Rialto.

Stellings Has Novelty Program Idea

Ernest G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, Wilmington, N. C., has inaugurated quite a novelty for his weekly program announcing the pictures to be shown.

On the inside of the third page, the program is six pages folding from the sides in to the center, he pastes a small photograph of one of the stars who will appear at the Grand during the week.

These photographs can be taken from the program and pasted on cardboard or in a scrapbook and many of the Grand's patrons are making a collection of their favorite players.

The cost of the program so decorated is not large and the idea is responsible for considerable added patronage.

Osserman's Idea of the Road to Success

"Find out what the public wants and give it to them." This is the simple but sound creed upon which Jack Osserman has built his success as manager of the Duchess theatre, Warren, Ohio. His method of gauging the tastes of his public and keeping abreast of their changes is a true reflection of the keen showmanship with which he converted the Duchess into a consistent money-maker after several exhibitors had given up the house as a hopeless white elephant.

In determining the type of entertainment most suitable to his clientele, Osserman, unlike many exhibitors, does not rely entirely on box office figures. Rather, he injects the personal element into the task of finding out what the public wants.

"While cold box office figures are generally used to set a criterion of the public's likes and dislikes, from my own experience I have found that a considerably more accurate gauge can be made by personal contact with patrons," says Osserman. "In booking pictures I am guided almost entirely by the personal expressions of my patrons. I use a weekly report on which is tabulated the character of pictures played during the week.

"At the end of each show I make it a point to talk with at least twenty people who have seen the picture and get their opinions. I am personally acquainted with almost every person who patronizes the Duchess and find it an easy matter to get their candid opinions. I ask them how they like the star, the story and the general character of the picture. I then classify the consensus of opinions into three divisions—popular, acceptable and unpopular—and give each picture, its star and story a definite rating. I have found this system an almost infallible guide in providing my patrons with the type of picture and star they like. As a barometer of public taste it registers every changing trend and enables me to select my pictures with a large degree of assurance that they will appeal to my audience."

Osserman has had a varied and interesting experience in the show business as a stock actor, film salesman and exhibitor. As manager of the Duchess he writes all his own advertising matter and is recognized as one of the livest of the Middle West's live-wire showmen.

For Novelty Book "Household Moving"

A VERY timely and humorous strip of film is added to the Capitol current events number in an Educational release under the title of "Household Moving."

As a matter of fact the picture is so old that it is new, being a new print of one of the very first film comedy ideas, whereby inanimate objects move about of themselves, the method of producing the effect being to move the objects by human hands, clear the set, take a picture and then move them some more.

It has been a good many years since one of these trick films, most of them of French production, has appeared in any theatre we have ever entered, and for the majority of an audience the stuff will be brand new.

What makes "Household Moving" so much of a novelty is the fact that it is a complete moving process accomplished in the manner related above, and of sure interest in these days of a shortage in living apartments and high cost of moving vans.

Collins Appeals to Civic Pride with Results

There is a live wire exhibitor in an up-and-coming western town who realizes that a sure-fire method of putting over his pictures is by appealing to the civic pride and the public spirit of the citizens of his community in all his advertising matter. The name of this exhibitor is A. H. Collins and he is the proprietor of the Grand theatre, Jonesboro, Ark., a prosperous and thriving town just west of the Mississippi. Civic pride runs high in Jonesboro, and Mr. Collins is wide-awake to the possibilities of turning this fact to the profit of the Grand, with a good boost for the community at the same time. In all of his newspaper display advertisements for a recent special feature production Mr. Collins impressed that fact that there should be a certain amount of local pride attached to the fact that "Jonesboro sees 'em first, and sees 'em for less." A recent example of newspaper display, which is ample proof that Mr. Collins' method is a good and effective one, is his campaign in connection with the showing of "Go and Get It." Mr. Collins got the picture directly after the New York showing, ahead of all the adjoining cities, and this fact loudly proclaimed in the paper was a point of irresistible appeal to the good citizens of Jonesboro. A half-page spread in the Saturday edition heralded the approaching feature. Just a statement that they were to see the picture ahead of some of the largest cities in the country was enough to command the interest of local theatre-goers and those residents who supported any local enterprise that had a touch of progressiveness in it.

Brooklyn Strand's "Request Music Week"

Manager Hyman Obtains Many Fine Suggestions From His Patrons

"Request Music Week," put on recently at the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre by Edward L. Hyman, Managing Director, proved to be one of the most effective pieces of patronage cultivation and theatre exploitation yet conceived by the Brooklyn manager.

Mr. Hyman, prior to holding "Request Music Week," took a census of thousands of men and women Strand visitors, to ascertain their taste in music for Strand orchestra, organ and soloists. The findings will not only be of value to theatre managers throughout the country, but will prove beyond doubt that the public actually demands the best in music with its motion pictures. The census showed that while the transitory popular ragtime may be most used for family circles, when in a theatre with an orchestra to command, the public wants the masterpieces.

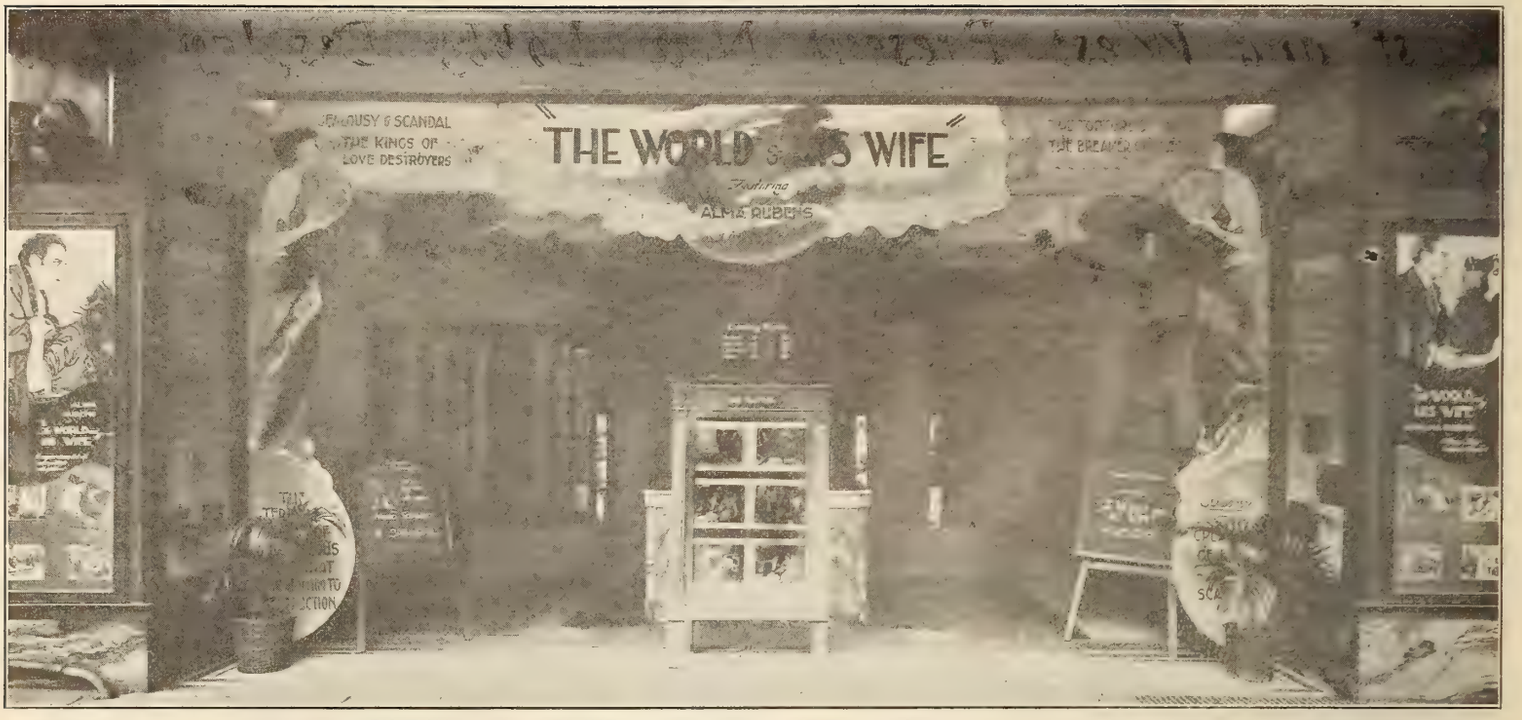
Mr. Hyman, in putting on "Request Music Week," deviated from the usual stunt of exploiting the picture feature. He exploited the theatre's aim to get a line on the music most liked by Strand patrons, and thus took the opportunity to inaugurate a permanent plan of allowing the public to control its own selection of music.

Making friends is the Hyman idea . . . not for himself particularly, but for his theatre. This is how he managed to add several hundred more friends through the agency of "Request Music Week."

First, he had cards printed explaining the why and wherefore of "Request Music Week." Upon these cards, circulated a week before the event, the Strand visitor was asked to signify in writing the music he or she wanted the Strand orchestra, organists or soloists to offer during "Request Music Week." All were asked to sign their names and addresses to their requests.

"In signing their names to their requests we were able to tie up the idea," explained Mr. Hyman. "We were able then to write a personal letter, telling them at just which performance we would play the selection they requested. In this way we proved that we were eager to please and were on the square with "Request Music Week," thereby strengthening our standing with our patrons.

"We sent out scores of such letters, and theorchestra, organists and soloists had a tough time giving these requests either in part or in full. Not only did the Strand get closer to many patrons, but also got a line on the music most in demand, and proved to its satisfaction that it had not been far off in the building of its own daily musical program. In addition, we have enough suggestions to keep the orchestra supplied for weeks."



"Request Music Week" had a place in the one and two column newspaper advertising, as well as in the lobby and on the bill boards. It also proved that the Strand Symphony Orchestra is capable of playing anything that the public might demand.

Tank Town Idea That Went Big Even in Los Angeles

In the lobby of the Kinema theatre of Los Angeles, Calif., stood a long scoot-mobile. Now, a scoot-mobile is a little semi-auto propelled by a motor wheel of the type we have all so often seen attached to, and furnishing power for a bicycle. There was nothing remarkable about the appearance of the scoot-mobile, yet there was at all times a curious lot of onlookers gathered about the machine. The answer was simple enough and was explained by a card bearing a few short words and placed in a conspicuous place on the seat of the vehicle. It was this card which aroused the interest of the people and it also explained all matters mysterious which might otherwise have hovered over a lone, slightly worn scoot-mobile standing in the entrance of one of California's most beautiful theatres. On this card were printed the words: "This is the super-six used by Wesley Barry in his adventures during the picture, "Go and Get It." Wes and his gang will appear in person at this theatre tonight and in the picture continuously throughout this week." According to Richard Spier, publicity manager of the Kinema theatre, "No lobby decoration, no matter how expensive or novel, could have proven more effective or have been a greater drawing card than did Wesley Barry's little motor-car."

There was hardly a moment when the car on exhibit was not surrounded by at least a few smiling and curious gazers, all of whom were anxious to see what part the scoot-mobile would have to play in the picture, and most of whom went in to find out for themselves.

Allen Chain Reaches Half Hundred Mark

The recent opening of the New Allen theatre in Vancouver, British Columbia, has completed the Canadian chain of Allen theatres from the Pacific to the Atlantic oceans, this being the 50th link in the largest chain of picture theatres owned and controlled by one company in the world.

The New Allen represents all the improvements in theatre architecture which have been suggested by the building and managing of the great number of theatres previously constructed by this firm as well as the newest houses in the United States.

Architect Crane, of Detroit, is responsible for the plans, and he with Jay J. Allen has recently left for England to supervise the erection of two huge theatres in London.

O. D. Cloakey, who has had charge of Allen theatres in Brandon, Edmonton, Calgary and Winnipeg, and is well-known as one of the most successful managers of moving picture houses in Canada, is manager of the New Allen. His strong exploitation of the opening produced the somewhat unique effect of not only filling his house to capacity at a season of warm weather and popular bathing beaches, but also improved business in every other downtown theatre during the whole of the opening week, as thousands were unable to secure seats for the Allen each night.

The opening show was Norma Talmadge in "Yes or No," and the first number on the program was a short speech by the Vancouver Mayor, R. H. Gale, who read wires and cables of congratulations from officers of the company and film celebrities. A wire from Norma Talmadge was warmly appreciated by the audience.

Omaha Exhibitors Decorate for Ak-Sar-Ben Festival

Ak-Sar-Ben festival in Omaha, a notable attraction for hundreds of miles, opened September 12 with glamor for the motion picture theatres. During the ten days of the festival Omaha theatre men took due advantage of the opportunity in caring for the thousands of visitors in the way of entertainment. Nor did film exchange managers disregard the chance of popularizing their productions, for their bookings at downtown houses showed keen business insight.

In form with the lavish street and building decorations, managers of downtown theatres "dolled" their houses to a fare-thee-well. Red, green and yellow pennants, the official colors of Ak-Sar-Ben, were scattered high and wide about the lobby and dome of the Rialto theatre. Harry Watts, manager of the Strand theatre, put up a novel front and lobby display in the way of Ak-Sar-Ben colors and American flags. The Sun and the Moon theatres, under the direction of Harry Goldberg and S. R. Ballantyne, were decorated in flashy style, and nobby displays of the pictures booked there.

One of the most active teams of movie men in the city comprised Howard Graham, manager of Pathe in Omaha; Harry Watts of the Strand theatre, and E. R. Trabold, Pathe cameraman. Moving pictures were taken of the horse races on the newly completed Ak-Sar-Ben turf; Jack Williams, the "human fly," performing acrobatic stunts on an airplane over the city; the street parades, including the electrical parade, and street scenes brought a multitude of visitors to the city.

TERRITORIAL SALES AND PURCHASES

In the Independent Field

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

William A. Johnston's editorial on "Bunk—And the Cost of It," appearing in the September 18th issue of the News, has called forth the following expression of approval from R. S. Seese of the Colonial Theatre Company, Carthage, Tenn. Mr. Seese writes:

"Your editorial on 'Bunk' supplemented by the current editorial on the same subject, is the stuff.

"Is there one single evil in the industry, from the formation of a new producing company down to the eternal wrangle between exhibitor and exchange, which does not owe its existence to the presence of 'circus bunk'? And, after all, isn't the fault just as much the exhibitor's as the producer's?"

Scenario Writers Copyright Trade-Mark

Repeatedly, we are told "there is nothing new beneath the sun." And, repeatedly, we look for something. It is worthy of comment, therefore, to point out that two writers of photoplays, have established and have copyrighted the trade mark identifying their work. Despite the fact that the feminine half of the firm is known as Ella Stuart Carson, professional and as Mrs. R. Cecil Smith, in private life, this is the first copyright known in the industry to be secured to protect the names of separate writers, combined in one trade mark. There is no disputing that the idea is new. The originality itself, speaks well for the product of these two wielders of the pen, as it would indicate that their works are what we are all looking for—"something new beneath the sun," original scenarios by original people.

Exploitation Great Aid to "Mary's Attic"

The records which "Up In Mary's Attic" are making and breaking are due primarily to the exploitation possibilities which this picture presents, according to a statement made by Lou L. Hiller, who has charge of the sale of territory selected the cast. The sincere ef-

"There is not one picture in a thousand which has the variety of sets, characters and humorous situations which make possible the hundreds of new publicity angles," said Mr. Hiller. "When I first saw "Up In Mary's Attic," I recognized the value of this picture not only from an entertainment viewpoint but also as a great box office attraction. It was with these points in view that I undertook the sale of territory.

Report Much Interest in Keaton Comedies

District managers and the heads of Metro Pictures Corporation's twenty-five exchanges throughout the United States and in Canada report "a great wave of interest" among exhibitors everywhere in the forthcoming Buster Keaton Comedies, the first of which "One Week," is a September release. These two-reel laughmakers are to be issued eight weeks apart. They are being snapped up so eagerly that the Metro branch offices are kept on the jump to record the advance bookings that are now pouring in.

Fanark to Start Soon on Second Picture

After assembling and editing "The Crimson Cross," the Fanark Corporation's initial production, N. Brewster Morse, the author of this story, and George Everett, the director, have left for Mr. Morse's home in Milford, Pa. The country surrounding Milford is to be used for exteriors in Fanark's second production, "The Strength of the Weak," also by Mr. Morse, to be directed by Mr. Everett.

The cast for this picture has been practically selected and details will be completed upon the return of the author and director to New York.

Protectory Approves of "Fickle Women"

Joseph Klein, general manager for the D. N. Schwab Productions, Inc., has been apprised in a communication from officials of the New York Catholic Protectory of "thanks," and "thorough appreciation for that most enjoyable exhibition and feature 'Fickle Women.'"

Brandt Sees Stability in Field

JOE Brandt, president of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, who has recently returned from the Coast, is back in New York with a glowing account of the present and bright hopes for the future of the independent field. The State Right market, says Mr. Brandt, has gained immeasurably in stability during the past year.

In contrasting present conditions with those of a season ago, the popular independent man sees a vast difference. Today, he states, more and more capital from reliable business men throughout the country is being invested in independent exchanges. Theatre owners, also, are beginning to appreciate the fact that a State Right exchange is not a "fly-by-night" proposition, and many large exhibitors, according to Mr. Brandt, are becoming financially interested in various exchanges.

"There is more open booking in the market today," said Mr. Brandt, "than ever before. An exhibitor must of course, look to the program companies to supply him with a bulk of his material. But at the same time, a man who formerly booked fifty-two pictures from one large company, and twenty-five from another, is now signing for twenty from the first company and twelve from the second.

"It is surprising to find what really big pictures the independent exchange can handle. Some of the productions which demand big prices are being bought by the exchanges without a quiver. A few years ago, had they been asked for the prices they are paying today, they would have been aghast."

"In my last trip to the Coast," said Mr. Brandt, "I have succeeded in getting several very prominent producers to view the Independent State Rights field in an entirely different light than they have heretofore been doing. I encountered considerable argument, some of which I must acknowledge had basis, but is not insurmountable.

"These producers were a unit in an apparent belief that the Independent or State Rights field was a buying and distributing organization for re-issues and productions that were not good enough to get over in other directions, in other words, their idea of an Independent Exchange was somewhat identical with that of a junk shop. I regret to say that I was forced to acknowledge that there were a few instances where this idea had foundation and that the State Right Buyers themselves were to blame for this opinion becoming current.

"It is a regrettable fact that there are exchanges in operation handling stuff that has appealed to them solely by its cheap cost rather than any consideration of its merit or picture value. Naturally, this hurts the independent movement which otherwise is showing a most gratifying condition and promise of constant future development.

"Practically all important conditions necessary to this development have been, or are being successfully met and it is important that everybody having the interest of the Independent market at heart should immediately take action to dispel the idea that the Independent Exchange is only a 'junk shop.'

Baseball Scandal Subject of Single Reel

"The Great Baseball Scandal," a single reel slow motion camera expose of the trickery of baseball or how crooked players have been able to lose games without being discovered, is announced for the state rights field by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

This single reel of timely interest has been produced by Lincoln A. Borthwick, who made the single reel baseball release "Babe Ruth—How He Makes His Home Runs." The nation wide scandal that has been uncovered in our great National game makes this single reel of exceptional value and importance in its appeal to public interest.

It is a scientific treatment with slow motion pictures of the great game of baseball exposing by means of 120 pictures a minute the actual plays that a crooked player can safely make without being caught by the naked eye of the fans or the umpire.

Premiere of Russian Picture Soon

Rudolph Flothow, of the Echo Film Co., a new distributing organization, has presented to the Seventh Regiment, N. Y. N. G., a cannister which contained the last charged fired by the Turkish forts in defense of the Dardanelles. This was obtained by a representative of the Echo while in Constantinople from the Turkish Minister of War and was used to smuggle out of Turkey a Russian photoplay soon to be distributed by Echo. The film is entitled "Let Us Live" and will receive its premier showing shortly at a New York theatre.

"Vanishing Trails" Big Success

REPORTS received at the main offices of the Canyon Pictures Corporation from the independent exchanges which have already purchased territorial rights on "Vanishing Trails," the Western serial, show that in all sections of the country, it is setting a new high water mark both in gross receipts and in number of bookings.

This serial which is handled in Western New York by the Dooley Exchange of Syracuse, The Metro in Philadelphia, the Standard of Pittsburgh and the Exhibitors Film Exchange of Washington, D. C. has proven that eastern audiences are vitally interested in Western subjects whether serials or drama.

The south and southwest which is represented by the Southeastern Pictures Corp. of Atlanta, Specialty Film Co., of Dallas, Tucker Brothers, of Oklahoma City, has given this serial a flattering reception.

The Strand Features of Detroit and the Standard Film Corp. with offices in both Kansas City and St. Louis also report widespread interest among their exhibitors in "Vanishing Trails."

In this serial both Franklyn Farnum and Mary Anderson have been the recipients of flattering newspaper praise, wherever the picture has been shown.

In the territories which remain unsold there is a keen competition among the exchangemen and the coming week will probably see the negotiations closed for some of the most important rights.

Canyon also announces that work on the initial release of the western dramas is rapidly approaching completion. The title of the first will be "The Galloping Devil." This will be followed within a month or six weeks by another which will be called "The Come Back."

"The Galloping Devil" and the entire series are being made by Colonel Wm. N. Selig and will be state righted by the Canyon Pictures Corporation.

Strand, in New York, to Play Monty Banks

Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., announce that Manager Joseph Plunkett, of the Strand Theatre, New York, has contracted for and is showing this week the Monty Banks comedy, "A Flivver Wedding."

This is said to be one of the funniest comedies produced in a long time, and to give that inimitable comedian, Monty Banks, ample opportunity to display those qualities which have made him one of the foremost laugh provokers of the silver sheet.

Kelly's Company Is Enlarged

THE World Motion Picture Corporation, recently incorporated at a $6,000,000 capitalization, has absorbed the World Motion Picture Co., Inc., which is the company that James B. ("Smiling Jimmy") Kelly represents in his offer of five weeks free service to the exhibitors throughout the country, Mr. Kelly retains an executive position.

As has been previously announced this corporation intends to operate on a very large scale and its mode of procedure in every instance will be along strictly business lines, ignoring entirely and abolishing the past system that has been employed by a majority of the companies in this industry. Three of the most important factors which, it is said, will be the watchword and motto of this corporation will be the abolition of deposits and advance payments, allowing the regular exhibitor a line of credit commensurate with his standing in the community, and releasing and renting film at "live and let live" prices.

Among the men well known in this industry for their fairness, ability and businesslike methods, and who have been appointed to executive positions in this corporation, are Alfred A. Walker, director general of production; Pell Mitchell, editor and director of cinematography; Dave Murphy, director of newspaper illustrations; and Jerome Wilson, director of publicity and techniques.

Their initial release on their "Five Weeks Service Free of Charge" plan will occur on or about the first week in November.

NAZIMOVA

NAZIMOVA

In this big, intense picture, Nazimova is at her best. She enacts a dual role, giving two widely different performances. The vividness of her portrayals will stand out as the finest work of her brilliant career.

The story is one that will grip every audience with its tenseness, high strung drama and appealing pathos.

could achieve the heights she does in this resplendent drama of a woman for whom the love of a man was not enough.

Jane Goring had left her husband because he was a failure, and her child—well, because she didn't care. A successful desertion: she won out alone in life, became the gorgeous, irresistible idol of thousands—a great actress. Then a part of her past loomed up unrecognized . . . It is so great a story that only

The Kay Bee Distributing Corp., of Milwaukee, announce the acquisition of the following feature productions for their territory: "Up in Mary's Attic" (Fine Arts Pictures, Inc.); "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives" (Equity Pictures Corp.); "The Golden Trail" and "A Woman's Man" (Arrow Film); "The Country God Forgot" (Exclusive Features). They have also a large assortment of short subjects—comedies, dramas and westerns.

Walter A. Baier, general manager, also announces that they are negotiating for a large number of new releases for the fall and also for the spring season.

Art Exhibit Ready for "Out of the Dust"

By special arrangement with Collier's Weekly, the Apex Film Company has secured the use of all original plates of the paintings of Frederic Remington, from which re-productions were made which have flooded the country through art stores, premium drives, souvenir books, calendars, etc. This will enable Craft and Rubinstein to place in the lobby of every exhibitor, in advance of the showing of "Out of the Dust" the story of which was inspired by these paintings, a complete art exhibit, properly framed, consisting of about forty of the Remington subjects in their original colors and being altogether a selection of the most powerful subjects which the artist conceived.

The art exhibit is not, however, to take the place of the lobby display, for the lithographs and photographs will be issued just the same.

Animated Models For New Company

The Animated Models Company, a partnership composed of J. L. Roop and J. P. White has opened its studio in Hollywood to make a new style of animated cartoon using flexible figures or models invented by Roop. The producers have made one 500 foot subject and are now at work on the second. The claim is made that the cartoons move and act in the same type settings used in other film productions and that the figures have appropriated gestures and facial expressions the same as human beings.

"Devil's Angel" Praised by Charles Gibson

Further proof of the artistic qualities of "The Devil's Angel," is contained in a letter received by Lejaren a' Hiller, the artist who produced the picture from Charles Dana Gibson, known through the world for his works of art.

"I want to congratulate" wrote Mr. Gibson "you on your splendid picture 'The Devil's Angel.' I have always been perfectly sure that you would make a hit if you went into the movies. Your knowledge of composition, light and shadow was constantly in evidence."

Three striking examples of the drama and action in Harry Sherman's "Man and Women"

Sherman Guarantees Each Film

Each Production to Be Assured Box-Office Winner

"My definite, personal guarantee is behind every attraction released by Sherman Productions Corporation."

This statement by Harry A. Sherman, president of the newly organized Sherman Productions Corporation, whose entrance into the independent producing field was announced last week, lends interest to the novel plan of operation which forms the policy of the new company in its relationship to its franchise-holders.

According to the announcement made, Sherman Productions Corporation will release a minimum of twelve pictures annually, each exchange paying its pro-rata share of the actual production cost only upon the delivery of the finished positive prints. No advances will be required by the producing company, which will finance itself, its profits and earnings being based upon a percentage of the gross returns on each picture received by the franchise-holders, and an equal participation with them in the sale of foreign rights.

Lithographs, lobby displays and all accessories will also be furnished by the Sherman Productions Corporation strictly at cost, and consistent advertising placed in the trade papers on each production, the expense of which will be borne by the producing company.

Harry A. Sherman, who conceived and originated the novel plan under which Sherman Productions Corporation will operate, is widely known to the exhibitors and exchangemen of the United States and Canada as a man who has put over many big things in the face of established precedent. Consequently, a definite statement from him regarding the new company and its policies and production plans carries the greatest weight.

"In guaranteeing the releases of Sherman Productions Corporation," said Mr. Sherman, "as box-office attractions of consistent high quality, I am holding nothing back. My guarantee has no strings to it.

"Any feature released by Sherman Productions Corporation, which does not measure up to a high standard in attraction value, or which for any other reason is found undesirable for distribution by any franchise-holder, I will take off his hands and return to him whatever sum he may have invested in the picture, releasing him of all other obligations in regard to it.

"I will do this on the individual exchange's simple say-so, without question or argument. This I cannot emphasize too strongly.

"No guarantee could be more definite or fairer than this and I am anxious to get it on record now, so that there may be no misunderstanding as to where I stand, or as to what the policy of Sherman Productions Corporation will be.

"In my opinion, Sherman Productions Corporation offers more profit-making possibilities to the independent distributor than any other proposition that has ever been made.

"In the first place, it secures the distributor a definite supply of pictures of guaranteed attraction value, and secondly, it enables the exchange to secure them on an actual cost basis, so equitable and so fair as to assure absolutely a maximum cash return on a minimum outlay.

"Beginning November 15, Sherman Productions Corporation will release twelve or more features annually. Two of these are now ready and a third is already well on the way toward completion.

"I will stake my reputation as a showman and a marketer of big productions that these pictures are equal to the best attractions on any program now in the field for bona fide entertainment and box-office value.

"This standard we shall maintain in all future productions and it is to give this assurance to the independent exchanges of America that I make this definite personal guarantee for all future Sherman productions.

"The first picture we have scheduled for release is 'Man and Woman,' a thrilling story of the South Seas, written and directed by Charles A. Logue."

Syracuse Gets "Babe" Ruth

Sensational Publicity Caused by Report of His Arrival in Town

THE report of the successful run at Madison Square Garden of the Yankee Photoplay Corporation's production "Headin' Home," has reached all over the state, it is reported. At special demand of several prominent up-state exhibitors, Herbert H. Yudkin, general manager, of the B. Y. S. Films, Inc., was forced to make a short trip up state to set several opening dates.

The train that carried Mr. Yudkin also carried the co-star of "Headin' Home," Miss Ruth Taylor, who after her strenuous work in the big picture, felt it necessary to have a few weeks of recuperation at Niagara Falls. Mr. Yudkin persuaded Miss Taylor to stop over at Syracuse, where she is to make personal appearances in the early future.

The news that was spread abroad, however, was that "Babe" Ruth himself had accompanied Mr. Yudkin. The report circulated rapidly, and in a short time a huge crowd had gathered in front of the Onondaga Hotel demanding the appearance of the home-run king. When it was learned that it was Ruth Taylor, and not "Babe" Ruth, who was in town, Syracuse was almost equally enthusiastic.

Editor Kenefick, of the Syracuse Journal, discovered the mistake immediately before an edition went to press, and in headline explained to the excited populace of Syracuse that it was not "Babe" who had reached the up-state city, but a feminine namesake of his who was surely some "babe" herself.

Second Fanark Production

Author and Director Select Locations for "Strength of the Weak"

AFTER assembling and editing "The Crimson Cross," the Fanark Corporation's initial production, N. Brewster Morse, the author of this story, and George Everett, the director, have left for Mr. Morse's home in Milford, Pa., where plans are afoot to mix business and pleasure. The country surrounding Milford is to be used for exteriors in Fanark's second production, "The Strength of the Weak," also by Mr. Morse, to be directed by Mr. Everett.

The cast for this picture has been practically selected and details will be completed upon the return of the author and director to New York. Before leaving the city, Mr. Morse expressed his pleasure in the results obtained in "The Crimson Cross."

The picture is arousing unusual interest in police circles by reason of the theme upon which it is based—hypnotism—and it is said that the novel idea that hypnotism reacts upon the agent who employs it is creating much discussion.

D. J. H. Levett, President of the Fanark Corporation, announces that the subject of hypnotism, which is so powerfully and vividly portrayed in "The Crimson Cross," is one which Fanark believes to be of especial interest to the general public as well as psychologists and police officials.

"The story," says Mr. Levett, "treats of a subject which has long been uppermost in many people's minds. Every one is attracted by the linking of hypnotism with crime."

"Fathoms Deep" Finished

Williamson Company Back from Bahamas With Under-Water Story

J. E. WILLIAMSON, of The Submarine Film Corporation, has returned from Nassau, the Bahamas, with his entire producing unit, where final scenes for his latest sub-sea spectacle, "Fathoms Deep" were filmed.

Mr. Williamson and his associates are now engaged in cutting, editing and titling the wealth of unusual picture material secured during the last ten months and it is expected that "Fathoms Deep" will be ready for trade showings sometime next month.

"Fathoms Deep," in the opinion of Mr. Williamson, will far surpass anything he has heretofore attempted. He insured himself a first class dramatic production by engaging Ralph Ince to direct the picture. Mr. Ince has regarded the picture as one of the biggest opportunities he has had during his long career in the picture business. That he also appears in a character-hero role in the production will be regarded with interest by the trade inasmuch as since the old Vitagraph days Mr. Ince has only appeared on the screen once, in the short Lincoln picture.

Mr. Williamson, who wrote the story for "Fathoms Deep" declares that it contains a variety of location and action besides its under-water scenes. It includes shots taken at the races in Havana, he says, and also many thrilling surface, marine and tropical scenes.

"It has been my aim to produce a complete entertainment in 'Fathoms Deep,'" said Mr. Williamson, "not merely an under-water novelty. Picture audiences today demand a good story as well as thrilling novelties. Stunt stuff on land, under water or in the air, doesn't suffice if there isn't a story to carry the thrills."

David P. Howells, who controls the world's rights on "The Son of Tarzan," the National Film Corporation's 15-episode serial, has come out with an exploitation campaign book of the highest order on that thriller. It contains reproductions of the attractive paper, and a heart-to-heart talk on the exploitation campaign and money winning stunts. The book also contains a brief "who's who" in the serial, plenty of press stories and a synopsis of the first six episodes. Musical suggestions are written by S. M. Berg.

Conklin Finishes First Special Comedy

Chester Conklin, the former Sennett star, has finished his first two reeler for Special Pictures at an expense of more than $35,000 announced that company. "Home Rule" is its title, and it was written by the star, and directed by Harry Edwards under the supervision of Jack Martin, production manager of A. L. Hart productions. Conklin will start his second comedy next week. Robert G. Hopkins has written the titles for "Home Rule" and critics who previewed it declare it extremely funny.

Charlotte Merriam, star of "Comiclassics" release, is already working on her second comedy for Special Pictures. Her first comedy is ready for release "Up In Betty's Bedroom" is its title and it was directed by Reggie Morris, who made "Married Life" for Mack Sennett. "A seminary Scandal" is the title of her second picture, which Morris is also directing.

"The Virgin of Paris" Has Polish Star

"The Virgin of Paris," the six-reel feature which Harry R. Raver will market on the state right plan has a cast of players made up of notable American and English actors and actresses who were doing war service work abroad. The star of the production, Diana Kareni, is a Polish actress.

Many of the scenes in "The Virgin of Paris" are laid in foreign countries and the pictures of these were taken in the localities called for in the book by Anthony Hope, "Sophia," from which this feature was adapted.

Climax Film Pictures Proving Popular

"Love's Battle" and "The Fourth Face," the two special productions which the Climax Film Corporation are releasing on the state right plan, are rapidly being bought by territorial buyers throughout the country according to a statement from the Climax offices.

"Love's Battle" stars Joe Moore and Eileen Sedgwick. It is a comedy drama and has been surrounded by the Climax Company with a line of advertising matter that should have an especial appeal to both the state right buyer and the exhibitor.

Wilson to Star Hoxie in Comedy Dramas

Ben Wilson, the serial star and motion picture impresario, announces that he will feature Jack Hoxie, the serial star, in a series of Western comedy-dramas.

Francis Ford, who directed the last five episodes of "Thunderbolt Jack," Jack Hoxie's current serial soon to be published by the Arrow Film Corporation, will direct the first of the Hoxie features, "A Man's Country," adapted from the Arthur Chapman magazine story of the same title by Reeves Easton, states Mr. Wilson.

The continuity for "A Man's Country" has been completed and active production will commence as soon as "Thunderbolt Jack" has been completed, which will be in about three weeks, according to Mr. Wilson. Releasing arrangements have already been made, state advices from Mr. Wilson.

Harry Raver Production Sells Quickly Abroad

Foreign rights of "The Virgin of Paris," Harry Raver's picture, with the exception of Germany, Russia and a few minor countries of little importance, have already been disposed of, these sales having been consummated upon the showing of a rough sample during the last stages of production.

"GIRLS DON'T GAMBLE"

Starring

DAVID BUTLER

The Greatest Comedy-Drama Attraction on the Market

D. N. Schwab Productions, Inc.

1600 Broadway New York, N. Y.

HAVING completed his first independent feature, Ray Rockett, president of the Rockett Film Corporation, has come to New York to tackle the problem of adequate distribution.

Rockett arrived from the Coast early this week and immediately opened negotiations with several of the leading distributing organizations for the handling of his initial production. Before leaving for the West, he expects to establish a releasing connection that will not only take care of his first picture but also handle his output for the entire year.

The first offering of the Rockett Film Corporation is "The Truant Husband," from the Albert Peyson Terhune story printed in a recent issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine. Dealing with the tribulations of a married man who indulges in his first—and last—indiscretion, the story presents many novel situations and points a moral to married men who may feel the urge to go astray.

President Rockett announced that it is the purpose of his company to produce six features a year. Plans are now under way for the erection of a studio in Los Angeles, where future productions will be filmed.

Although one of the youngest producers in point of years in the business, yet Rockett is a veteran of the industry, having held many responsible executive positions with various companies. Just prior to entering the production field he was purchasing agent at Universal's big coast studio.

The Rockett Film Corporation was formed about six months ago by Ray Rockett and his brother Al. It is the aim of the concern to deal only in productions featuring all-star casts. The featured players in "The Truant Husband" are Mahlon Hamilton, who won honors through his work in "Earthbound," and Mary Pickford's "Daddy Long Legs." Hamilton takes the leading male role, while Betty Blythe plays opposite. Miss Blythe was a former leading lady in Lasky productions and was recently signed by William Fox for the principal role in "The Queen of Sheba." Francelia Billington and Richard Ryan also play prominent parts in "The Truant Husband." Miss Billington lately appeared as feminine lead in the Metro Drury Lane melodrama, "Hearts Are Trumps."

In discussing present-day aspects of the film business, Mr. Rockett said he believed that the interests of the industry could be best served by closer co-operation between the independent producer and distributor. "It is my opinion," he stated, "that the best class of entertainment will be supplied by the independent producer. The man producing independently realizes that his picture must be sold entirely on its merit, and consequently he puts his very best effort into it. This, naturally, is bound to result in an advanced standard of screen entertainment, especially if the producer is accorded fair treatment by the man who distributes his product to the theatres."

Reelcraft Plans Activities

To Start Advertising Campaign Soon on All Releases

AN immediate advertising campaign for the series of Reelcraft releases now on the market, was the first outcome of an important conference of the Executives of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, which lasted for more than a week, according to the announcement of President R. C. Cropper.

"Reelcraft has been wonderfully successful," commented Cropper, "considering the comparatively short time it has been in the Independent Producing and Distributing field, and we intend that it shall be even more successful in the present season. The advertising campaign just commenced will apply not only to the national trade papers, covering the series of releases we have already placed on the market, but a liberal amount of advertising for the new series planned for Reelcraft distribution."

Nat Spitzer, West Coast production manager, who was in New York for the conference, has returned to Hollywood to carry out plans for increased production. The Billy Franey single reel comedy unit will hurry along to complete its present contract for single reelers, and make ready for another bigger and more important series to follow, in which the comedian Billy Franey will be featured.

Several additions have already been received for the new Royal Comedy series, including a two reel farce comedy featuring Rosemary Theby supported by an all star cast including Bebe Hardy and Leo White and titled "Married to Order"; following comes a nautical slap stick farce titled "Oh! Buoy!" in which Sammy Burns is featured. For the eighth release of the series the Tucker Twins are featured in a rollicking farce comedy titled "He Looks Like Him," based upon the resemblance of the two twins, whom it is said look so much alike that not even their best friends can tell one from the other.

In the Romances of Youth series, three more releases have been completed in which Matty Roubert is starred, titled "A Bold Bad Pirate," "Summer Days" and "Ol' Swimmin' 'Ole." This series has proved a big success for the Reelcraft offices, and is reported to be playing some of the biggest theatres and circuits throughout the United States.

Richard Marin, who has the juvenile lead in "Beyond the Great Wall," a Photo Products Export Company picture

The "Bud and His Buddies" series is also selling fast through Independent exchanges, and indicate a repetition of the former successes attained for the diminutive comedian Bud Duncan in this new series.

Reelcraft has several important plans and additions to its program for the Independent State rights buyers, and notice will soon be given to the trade of these new series.

Chinese Melodrama Has Barthelmess' Double

Richard Martin, said to be Richard Barthelmess' only double, is seen in the leading juvenile role of Photo Products Export Company's Chinese Melodrama "Beyond The Great Wall" offered on the State Rights' market as a special attraction.

Coast Debutante Seen in Banks Comedy

When the Monty Banks comedy "Nearly Married" is released by the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., a new dancer will be discovered in the person of Miss Geraldine Karma. Miss Karma is a Los Angeles society debutante, who is distinguished as an exotic dancer who made such success in amateur theatricals that she was prevailed upon by J. L. Warner, of Warner Brothers, producer of the Monty Banks Comedies, to appear in support of Monty Banks in his comedy "Nearly Married."

Reorganization of Fine Arts Complete

The reorganization of Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., is now complete, according to an announcement by Murray W. Garsson, president, and the entire personnel of the company is working on a program outlined by Mr. Garsson. Of the three pictures soon to be released on a state rights basis, one, a six-reel comedy "Why Pick On Me?" will be ready within the next two weeks.

"Each picture will be released separately," said Mr. Garsson, "with no time limit set. The reason that many productions which have big possibilities, fall down is that the producer lets the release date play a more important part than it should. With such a date definitely announced the opportunities for changing the picture during assembling and cutting are very limited, and in many instances flaws are found at the premier public showing. Then it is too late.

"The final supervision of any of our pictures is never complete until the last territory has been sold," added Mr. Garsson.

Jap Question Presented in Pantex Picture

The present situation of the Japanese question in California is said to have caused the Pantex Pictures Corporation of Los Angeles to film the subject so as to acquaint the Nation with the acuteness of the situation. This coming November, California votes upon a bill introduced to prohibit and deny the Japanese of that state the right to own or to lease land in California for agricultural purposes.

The Pantex Pictures Corporation in filming "The Japanese Question in California" had in mind the view of bringing to the attention of all Americans the present state of affairs now existing in the Golden State. The picture is in two reels and will be shortly offered for distribution on the states-right basis.

Dial Film Completes "The Tiger's Coat"

Otto Bollman, president of the Dial Film Company producing at the Brunton Studios announced yesterday that his latest production "The Tiger's Coat" was ready for release.

"The Tiger's Coat" is an adaption of Elizabeth Dejeans novel of the same name. The cast includes Lawson Butt, Myrtle Stedman and other prominent players. Within a week production manager E. P. Hunzicker will launch the production of the film version of Irving Bacheller's novel. "The Light in the Clearing."

Sociological Interest in Price Picture

"Your Daughter—and Mine" the picturization of the play "Hindle Wakes" by the late Stanley Houghton, which is being placed on the market by C. B. Price Co., Inc., is described as a production that will awaken considerable sociological interest. It deals with the double standard of morality and sets forth the facts rather than presenting long arguments pro and con.

First Cuneo Drama Titled

"Lone Hand Wilson" Announced by Capital Film as Unusual Western

W. D. Russell, general manager of the Capital Film Company, announces that the first Lester Cuneo five-reel western will be entitled "Lone Hand Wilson." The scenario, written by William Piggott, a well-known writer of western scenarios, contains, it is said, action and tense situations.

"Lone Hand Wilson" (played by Lester Cuneo) is a resident of the western town of "Hell's Gap" and has earned his nickname because of the fact that whatever he does he does alone. He has no companions and women he leaves strictly to themselves.

The story carries along through extremely exciting situations, brought about by "Lone Hand" endeavoring to take care of the interests of Madge Walker, orphaned daughter of Andy Walker, who earlier in the story is killed.

The film is being directed by L. S. McKee, Harry Moody and Jack Dewitt. Lolita Hansen, the dance hall girl, is played by Annette Defoe and Madge by Grace Gordon. No expense has been spared in the production, it is said, and it is expected to be one of the year's best westerns.

Artistry of a'Hiller Seen

Noted Artist Made "The Devil's Angel," Drama of Occult Sciences

"THE DEVIL'S ANGEL," which was produced by Lejaren a'Hiller, an artist of international reputation, and which is being distributed through state right exchanges by the Clark Cornelius Corporation, is described as an intensely human drama in which the esoteric influence of the occult science of hypnotism sounds the dominant note.

The unprecedented interest in psychic phenomena at the present time, due to the widespread publicity given the subject as the result of revelations by such notable delvers into the spiritual world as Sir Oliver Lodge, Basil King and others, is bound, it is said, to prove an asset to exhibitors who take advantage of this particular opportunity to make the best of the word-of-mouth publicity.

The drama is built around the strange case of a young woman who, under the influence of a powerful personality, has apparently died, and her body placed in a vault. By a fortuitous series of events, the mysterious influence which had dominated her is dispelled and she is rescued from the living sepulchre by her artist lover.

In portraying this unusual theme Mr. a'Hiller surrounded himself with a notable cast of screen artists, in addition to Miss Gardner, including Templer Saxe, who has been seen as the "heavy" in innumerable successes; Peggy O'Neal, known as "the most beautiful artist model in the Metropolis," and many others.

Trade Showing Soon on "The Victim"

A trade showing of the superfeature, "The Victim," is being arranged by Joe Brandt, president of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. "The Victim," according to Mr. Brandt, is one of the most powerful dramatic super-features he has ever seen in his long experience.

Company to Distribute Religious Subjects

Churchmen and churchwomen of the New York State capital district gathered in Troy recently and after witnessing the production of several photoplays based on biblical themes, decided to form the International Church Film Corporation of Eastern New York. This body was incorporated last week with the secretary of state, at a capitalization of $50,000.

The company will have its main office and distribution center in Albany and will supply films of religious and educational nature to churches subscribing to its service.

The corporation is a subsidiary of the International Church Film Corporation and is only one of thirteen similar branch organizations throughout the United States. Its territory includes northeastern New York and part of Massachusetts and Vermont.

Charles Urban Subjects Have Threefold End

Charles Urban, president of the Kineto Company of America, who are releasing "Movie Chats" and "Kineto Review," contends that anything worth while can be entertaining. He still maintains the slogan that he adopted years ago: "To entertain and amuse is good—to do both and instruct is better."

All of the pictures included in the Urban Popular Classics, in which are comprised "Movie Chats" and "Kineto Review," are made to comply with this slogan—they must amuse, entertain and instruct.

TRUMPET ISLAND—Vitagraph

TRUMPET ISLAND" will be one of the talked about pictures of the fall and winter. It is easy to believe that Tom Terriss and his cast spent months and endured all manner of hardships that this might be a super-feature in fact as well as in the advertising. The "air stuff," as the climax of which an airplane is sent hurtling through an electric storm and ends with a crash in the treetops of a lonely island, however it may have been obtained, is much the most realistic of any similar scenes to which we have been witness. The story is a Gouverneur Morris romance, which is sufficient to stamp it with a certain originality and charm, and the scenario and titles are by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester, which is something of a guarantee of quality. A young girl, convent reared, falls in love with a soldier boy back from the wars. Her father decrees, however, that she shall marry one of those withered roues of the drama who can bring her wealth but no love. The soldier boy acquires sudden wealth and loses his head, and then seeks to recover his equilibrium by going to live on that good old abandoned island of the movie seas. The girl, dutifully agreeing to marry the roue on promise of being taken in an airplane on her wedding tour, from which she expects to dash herself to death, is eventually dropped at the boy's feet on "Trumpet Island," her memory gone but her sweet self miraculously preserved. Together the youngsters live through several happy weeks, and then they are found and threatened with a separation that you very well know never take place. A big picture in the true sense, and an interesting picture, rich in adventure, not too extravagantly illogical and pictorially arresting. Marguerite de la Motte is an attractive heroine, Wallace MacDonald a plausable and likable hero.

Lubin Announces Feature

"Honeymoon Ranch" to Be Initial Independent Feature Production

BERT LUBIN, who last week announced his entry into the State Rights field with a series of feature productions, has selected his first presentation for the independent market.

The initial Lubin state rights' release will be "Honeymoon Ranch", a five reel feature adapted from the story of the same name by Tex O'Reilly and which will appear in an early issue of Photoplay Magazine.

"Honeymoon Ranch" is said to be an entirely different type of western feature in that the picture was actually produced on the plains of west Texas, the locale of the story. Scenery, types and settings are therefore of an unusual character.

Eileen Ray, a new screen discovery of striking beauty, is cast in the role of Blue Bonnet, the heroine. Tex O'Reilly, the author, plays the part of Wild Bill Devlin, on whose lawlessness the plot hinges. Harry McLaughlin portrays the role of a smiling, tenderfoot but broncho-bustin hero. The picture is said to abound in fast action, thrills and hard riding.

"Honeymoon Ranch" advertising and publicity aids are now being prepared. A complete line of posters, ads, lobby displays and accessories will be available.

Second Fine Art Picture

"Why Pick on Me?" Will Be Ready for Independents in Two Weeks

"WHY PICK ON ME?" is the name of the Fine Arts Pictures, Inc., latest production, which will be ready for distribution through independent exchanges in about two weeks. Murray W. Garsson announces that he is very much pleased with this picture, a comedy in "six parts and a thousand laughs," as he calls it, and believes it will go even bigger than "Up in Mary's Attic."

The story is centered about the humorous situation caused by the twin brothers, both looking exactly alike, who haven't seen each other in years, and do not know that they are near each other. Of course many people mistake them for each other, and when a demand comes to one to pay a certain debt, he cannot refrain from asking, "Why Pick On Me?"

And there are others who pick on him for no apparent reason, but when the girl makes the mistake, that's what he calls "going too far." His investigations lead him to meet his brother, and here, it is said, comes some fine photography and a real triumph in double exposure when the two brothers walk arm in arm and eat at the same table.

The story is described as an interesting one, rich in humor, and does not lack even heart appeal. A beautiful love story is gently woven around the hilariously funny complications which result from the remarkable resemblance of the two brothers, both parts taken by the same man. A press book is now in the course of preparation and a new kind of exploitation will help materially in putting the picture over big.

"Unfortunate Sex" Popular

Frank Gersten Initial Offering Meets Favor of State Righters

FOLLOWING the recent announcement of Frank Gersten, Inc., anent their entrance into the State Right field, it is now reported that their first offering, "The Unfortunate Sex", in which Frances Edmonds and George Larkin are co-starred, is meeting favor among the independent buyers.

Every day since the picture was announced for sale there has been a stream of out of town buyers attending the private screenings at the Company's exhibition rooms, 130 West 46th Street, and judging from the present rate of sales already consummated, General Manager Lynn S. Card is of the opinion that all records for closing territories within a limited time will be broken by "The Unfortunate Sex".

Mr. Card reports that many of the important territories are already sold and that negotiations now pending for the balance, when closed, will give the picture a 100 per cent tally, which evidences the fact that "The Unfortunate Sex", has struck a popular chord with the territorial buyers.

"Madonnas and Men" to Have Indefinite Run

"Madonnas and Men," the Jans special production, is to open at Kunsky's Michigan theatre in Detroit, on October 31 for an indefinite run. Mr. Backer, general manager of Jans, announces that he expects to have many western exchangemen attend the showing. The sale of the western territory will start after the showing.

E. H. Kaufman of Inter-Ocean off to Coast

Eugene H. Kaufmann, manager of the accessory department of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, left last week for the company's West Coast offices in Hollywood. Here he plans to resume the work of furthering the sale of a number of motion picture accessory products, which by the terms of a recent contract were acquired by the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation for exclusive distribution on the Pacific Coast. During his stay on the West Coast he will also open up two additional branch offices in San Francisco and Portland.

During Mr. Kaufmann's absence, the accessory department of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation will be under the supervision of E. R. Phelps, assistant manager of the department.

Visitors Headquarters Established by Brandt

Joe Brandt, President of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation who returned to New York this week from the Coast announces that he has established a special service bureau for the convenience of State Right Buyers of the entire country.

Mr. Brandt states that in view of the popularity of the C. B. C. Corporation offices as a New York headquarters for visiting State Righters this bureau will attend to their hotel reservation and other requirements, the service being a part of the exploitation department of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

Nearing Completion of "Thunderbolt Jack"

Reports received at the Arrow offices from the Borwilla Film Corporation, producers of the super-western serial starring Jack Hoxie, state this serial is rapidly nearing completion, and from all indications will prove to be one of the most sensational serials ever produced.

Jack Hoxie is supported by Marie Sais, a leading woman who has gained exceptional fame in serial and who is popular with movie fans throughout the world.

Jack Hoxie, long popular as a leading man, sprang into prominence in "Lightning Bryce." In this, his latest production, "Thunderbolt Jack," he is said to surpass the work he did in "Lightning Bryce."

Helpful Campaign Book on Aywon Feature

On "The Woman Above Reproach," the current release of The Aywon Film Corporation, Nathan Hirsh, president of the organization, announces that he has had prepared a campaign book for exhibitors that contains the sort of ideas and suggestions that exhibitors can really use. The exploitation ideas as outlined in this press book are said to be adaptable for the small theatre as well as the large while none of the suggestions entail the expenditure of any large sum of money.

Frank Grady Is Sales Manager of Artola

Artola Productions, Inc., has secured the services of Frank A. Grady as their sales manager in their educational and industrial departments.

Mr. Grady was formerly manager of the Boston office of the World Film Corporation, and more recently feature salesman at the New England office of Pathe, and is the owner of the Olympia Theatre, Cambridge.

"The Broken Gate" Is Due on Dec. List

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation will release "The Broken Gate" in December. The novel from which "The Broken Gate" was picturized was written by Emerson Hough. The star is Bessie Barriscale, and in her support are many featured players, including Marguerite De La Motte, Sam De Grasse, Joseph Kilgour, Arnold Greeg and Lloyd Bacon. Paul Scardon is responsible for the direction.

Dead Men Tell No Tales

Louis Baum Joins Equity

Former Universal District Manager to Head Sales Department

LOUIS BAUM, formerly district manager for Universal, joined Equity this week, in the capacity of sales manager. Mr. Baum left Universal last week to undertake his new position.

The news of Baum's resignation from Universal and his affiliation with Equity came rather unexpectedly, as no rumor to this effect had been circulated. Many of Mr. Baum's friends are still ignorant of his new connection, but the circumstances surrounding his departure explain the suddenness of the step.

Mr. Baum, besides being a veteran salesman and sales manager, has an enviable acquaintance with states-rights men throughout the country, as he has spent all of his business life in the film industry and with film exchanges, both independent and otherwise. His career is marked by rapid strides, beginning with the position of salesman twelve years ago, and winding up with district manager for the Universal Film Co.

Previous to his association with Universal, Baum was exchange manager for Selznick for two years, and made a record for popularity and service among exhibitors.

Big Director for Neal Hart

Eddy Eckels Plans to Secure Top Notch Director for Third Picture

THE third of the series of eight five-reel specials, starring Neal Hart, will be directed by a man who has made a reputation as one of the great directors of the country by putting over Douglas Fairbanks, Tom Mix and Harry Carey in their biggest successes, if Eddy Eckels, general manager of Independent Films Association succeeds in signing this director upon his arrival in California, and Eddy rarely fails to get what he's after.

Before leaving for the Coast Eckels received word from Hart that the possibilities of his third pictue were so great that he felt the need of the best director money could buy, although Hart heretofore had insisted upon doing most of his own directing, ably assisted in the first of the Pinnacle production, "Hell's Oasis" and "Skyfire" by Frank Messenger. Upon receipt of this message Eckels immediately left for the Glendale studios in order to secure the director and carry out Pinnacle's promise to make every Neal Hart production bigger and better.

Probably by next week the complete plans for the future direction of Neal Hart's productions will be announced, and the name of time "Skyfire," the second Neal Hart production, is reported to be director given out. In the meanin its finishing week.

While at the Pinnacle studios, Eckels will witness the shooting of the first Pinnacle Comedy, "Cedarbrook Farm," but the selection of a capable director for Neal Hart is the chief object of his trip.

Inter-Ocean Has New Film

"Luring Shadows," Catholic Art Production, an October Release

THE foreign distributing rights to "Luring Shadows," the latest product of the Catholic Art Association, has been acquired by the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, according to a statement issued to the trade press the early part of the week.

The production, which is said to be spiritualistic in theme was evolved by O. E. Goebel and Conde B. Pallen. The story, however, is intensified by a baffling mystery which is said to hold the spectator's attention from the very beginning. Interwoven in the plot is an abundance of love, laughter and pathos, calculated, it is explained, to cause a heart tug as well as merry chuckle almost at once.

In "Luring Shadows," a man of learning and high standing in the community, tries to solve the mystery surrounding the death of a dear friend. Being of a spiritualistic turn of mind, he endeavors, through a medium, to locate the murderer. In the seance that follows, the finger of suspicion points to the butler of the dead man's household. He pleads innocence, but the result of the application of the medium plus a mass of so-called evidence binds him tighter in the meshes of the law.

Inter-Ocean announces "Luring Shadows" as an October release.

Peerless Pictures Has Special Production

Jerome Lewis, director of sales for the Peerless Pictures Company, a State Right organization, with offices at 117 West 46th Street, New York, announces that his company has just received a negative of "A Woman's Desire," from California, which production has just been completed. The subject is described as an unusual drama of human interest.

The Peerless Pictures Company have had considerable success with their first release, "The Heart of a Woman," which cast includes Jack Richardson, Pat O'Malley, Clara Horton, George Fisher and Mignon Anderson. Territory on "The Heart of a Woman" has already been closed with 70 per cent of independent exchanges throughout the country.

David Fischer Starts on New Series

David G. Fischer began work last week on the first of his series of photoplays to be made by the Fox-Fischer Masterplays, Inc. The title of the picture is "In the Shadow of the Dome." It will deal with the dramatic aspects of life in the national capital, and Mr. Fischer is at present working on exteriors in the city of Washington, where scenes will be taken in the Capitol itself in the White House, and in many other of the government buildings.

Donald Hall will play the role of the Congressman who dominates the picture. The leading feminine part will be in the hands of Dixie Lee, and William Parke, Jr., will play the juvenile lead. Interiors will be made in New York City.

Children Have Roles in "The White Bottle"

An interesting departure is being made by Harry Levey in the making of the fairy-tale episodes for "The White Bottle," the second of the Harry Levey Production features which is to be announced for release in the near future.

A great part of the action of this story is in the form of a real, come-to-life Fairy Tale—and each role in this part of the picture is portrayed by real children.

Champion, of Arrow, Returns from Trip

E. R. Champion, special representative of the Arrow Film Corporation, has returned from a sales trip covering Utica, Syracuse and Buffalo. He reports excellent business and the closing of a number of contracts for Arrow productions.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Realart Offer Is Well-Received

ACCOMPANYING the large number of contracts reaching the offices of Realart Pictures are many letters from exhibitors who speak in terms of warm praise on the remarkable offer made by the company in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, declares Realart in a statement just received.

"The slogan: 'Realart Takes the Risk!' sounded a responsive chord among the exhibitors," says the Realart statement. "They have declared, in quick replies to Realart, that they appreciate the confidence shown in offering three big Mayflower specials: 'Soldiers of Fortune,' 'The Mystery of the Yellow Room' and 'The Luck of the Irish,' with no stipulated rental, the exhibitors agreeing merely to pay an amount based on his box office returns.

"E. H. McClintock, of the Alamo theatre, Barden City, Mo., writes: 'This is the fairest offer ever made to me.'

"A well known Southern exhibitor, P. P. Henderson, Lyric theatre, Temperanceville, Va., in enclosing a signed contract declares: 'Since I have been in this game the last five years, both as an exhibitor and salesman, I have never received such co-operation and fairness as that given me by Realart.'

"A new era of better relationship between the producer and the exhibitor has been opened up, according to R. S. Seese, of the Colonial, Carthage, Tenn.

"'Your ad in the October 2nd issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS is the beginning, we believe, of a general change in the relations between the exhibitor and the producer,' said Mr. Seese. 'We congratulate you on being the first to start the movement.'

"'While there are, especially in the smaller communities, numbers of exhibitors whose responsibility is limited, there are doubtless thousands of small exhibitors who enjoy a position of confidence and respect among the people they do business with, and it does not seem at all out of line to extend to these people the same terms that they receive in other lines of business.'

Bebe Daniels, whose first Realart starring vehicle, "You Never Can Tell," is being played at the Rivoli theatre this week

"Theodore Beiersdorfer, manager of the Idle Hour at Fort Wayne, Ind., considers the offer the fairest proposition I have had in the number of years I have been in the business.'

"An enthusiastic letter was received from Herbert J. Thacher, manager of the Strand theatre at Salina, Kansas.

"'Take it from me, this is certainly going to revolutionize the industry,' he says. 'I am not going to lay down and let the grass grow under me, because I am going to get back of these pictures and see that they get the biggest publicity ever given a picture in this city. Every exhibitor should support this idea and get back of it and put it over. I know that I intend to do so.

"'Anyway whatever happens you can bank on me seeing that this idea gets all my assistance, regardless of whether we get the pictures or not, as you certainly deserve all the assistance that can be given you. If you are not swamped with contracts I certainly miss my guess. Please bear in mind that I am with you 100 per cent on this idea.'

"Among those who look with favor on the offer is C. C. Newman, of Sturgis, Mich., managing director of the Newman Theatre Company.

"'Thank you for the great confidence you have placed in me and other exhibitors,' writes Mr. Newman. 'I am very much pleased to learn that at least one film concern has not put every exhibitor down as being crooked.'"

Devey Headquarters Moved to 38 Street, New York

The Harry Levey Service Corporation and the Harry Levey Productions have moved executive headquarters from 1664 Broadway to the studios recently purchased by Mr. Levey at 230 West 38th street. Here the home-office of the Levey producing forces will be permanently located. A separate floor for the executive offices has been under construction for some time while production work has been going forward without interruption.

Hodkinson Departments Change Quarters

Various changes have been made in the housing arrangements of the Home Office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, as a result of which 527 Fifth Avenue, the Harriman National Bank Building, now shelters the sales, advertising, executive, publicity, foreign, purchasing and supply departments. And in number 522 Fifth Avenue, the Guaranty Trust Company Building, is to be found the accounting and contract departments.

This arrangement, it is said, has greatly increased the working facilities of the organization.

Famous Players' London Studio Improved

In order to increase the lighting facilities of the London studios of Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., a lighting gallery is being constructed in the No. 1 studio. With a floor extending out ten feet from the wall, this gallery will run the full length of the studio walls. It will be twenty-two feet above the floor, thus leaving plenty of room for the shifting of settings and the temporary storage of scenery and properties without cramping the work of the directors on the studio floor.

"Homespun Folks" Scores Hit

Breaks Sunday Record at Capitol; Hailed by the Critics

"HOMESPUN FOLKS," Thomas H. Ince's first special for the newly formed Associated Producers alliance—comprising in addition to Mr. Ince, Mack Sennett, George Loane Tucker, J. Parker Read, Jr., Marshall Neilan, Allan Dwan and Maurice Tourneur—broke all existing records in the world's largest theatre, the Capitol, at its New York premiere on Sunday, Oct. 3, is the announcement from the Associated's New York headquarters. Paid admissions topped by a considerable margin those recorded for the biggest previous Sunday in the history of the theatre, when Goldwyn's picturization of "Madam X" had its first pre-release showing, declares the statement.

Credit for a measure of the success of "Homespun Folks" at the Capitol is accorded by Associated Producers to Samuel L. Rothapfel. The Ince production had a typical Rothafel presentation, "which is to say that it was put before the audience with every pretty adjunct that keen showmanship could devise" declares Associated Producers. A specially prepared music cue, played for the picture by the Capitol's symphony orchestra, added no little to the effectiveness of the picture. Old favorites of the "back home" type of ballad were featured, deftly interwoven with some of the more modern successes.

As part of the musical program, and in keeping with the homely nature of the feature picture, the Capitol Male Quartette, accompanied by violin, harp and cello, sang "When I Hear the Gate A'Swingin'," by Leo T. Croke; and "O, Time, Take Me Back," by Carrie Jacobs Bond. The orchestra played the Toreador song from "Carmen," Lake's "Evolution of Dixie" as an interlude, and the "Hungarian Lustspiel" as an overture.

When "Homespun Folks" reached the point of its election-night scenes, a small brass band back stage replaced the orchestra long enough to render in typical country town style "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight;" "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," and other classics of America's rousing annual holiday.

Following are excerpts from some of the reviews in the New York dailies:

Evening Post: "Screen plays like Thomas H. Ince's 'Homespun Folks' always stimulate hope in the motion picture as an art and bolster a waning belief in spite of dozens of alleged masterpieces. There is a real story in Julien Josephson's scenario. There are real characters in the cast, and John Griffith Wray, under Mr. Ince's supervision, has preserved both in admirable direction. The cast is adequate and uniformly good, with no insistence upon forcing any particular actor upon the audience, a practice that is as refreshing as it is unusual."

The Sun: "'Homespun Folks' is a strong drama. The general characterization, even down to the smallest detail, is excellent."

"Land of Lafayette" Is in Heavy Demand

That the American people instantly caught the spirit of the Americanization campaign of the joint committee on Education of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, is rather indicated by statements from leaders in the film industry in which the extraordinary success of certain photoplays is ascribed to the patriotic appeal of their stories.

The committee's latest contribution to the campaign is "The Land of Lafayette," a reel produced by Pathe, which gives impressive views of the big Fourth of July celebration held in Paris this year. The picture is reported in great demand by the photoplay theatres.

President Woodrow Wilson on September 21, in the White House, saw "The Wonder Man," the Robertson-Cole special production, starring Georges Carpentier, the famous French warrior and pugilist, and has thanked the Washington branch of Robertson-Cole through its manager, M. A. Levy, for the courtesy extended.

"The Wonder Man" was screened in the White House at the personal request of the President who, for the past number of months, especially during the period of his recent illness, has requested and seen a number of the best pictures which have been released. The President watched "The Wonder Man" with more than ordinary interest, states Robertson-Cole, because of the fact that it is laid in Washington and scenes familiar to Washingtonians are reproduced through the eye of the camera.

Various trade journals have carried a notice to the effect that the J. L. Frothingham production, "The Living Child," in which Bessie Barriscale is starred, will be released by Robertson-Cole. The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation requests that this erroneous statement be corrected and the trade informed that the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, not Robertson-Cole, will release this picture. The Hodkinson organization will release the production at an early date in 1921, announces the statement from the Hodkinson headquarters.

Playwright Lauds Film Version of His Work

Elmer Harris, who wrote the stage version of "So Long Letty," the Oliver Morosco success, which has just been produced by Al Christie as a motion-picture for release by Robertson-Cole, is one of the most enthusiastic of those who have been privileged to attend previews of the six-reel comedy drama, shortly to be given to the trade.

Cast, settings and atmosphere all are praised by Mr. Harris, who has just written C. H. Christie, of the Christie Film Company, from his home in Hollywood, Calif. Among other things Mr. Harris writes:

"It is exactly my idea of what this play should be. There is not a dull moment in it. It is clean and wholesome and brimful of laughter. You have got the exact spirit and tempo and turned out a truly admirable photoplay."

Portland Supply House Changes Quarters

The General Supply & Repair Company, under the management of Matthew Aparton, former chief projectionist at the Liberty Theatre, Portland, Ore., will move to new quarters on or before the first of November, according to advices from Portland. Increased business demands are said to be responsible for the change to larger quarters at 392 Burnside street, Portland, Ore. The feature of the new headquarters will be a fully equipped balcony projection room.

To Inaugurate "Safety First" Campaign

According to an announcement by executives of the industrial department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, that organization is now laying plans for the inauguration of a new "Safety First" campaign, which will, in all respects, be as extensive as the one it supervised with the film "Careless America."

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

Goldwyn Opens With "Big Six"

First Production of New Season Is Well Received

"SELDOM, if ever before, in the history of the motion picture industry has one producing organization released to the trade in a period of three months six such productions of its own make as has Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for the first quarter of the new season." This claim made by Goldwyn appears to be justified by the reception already accorded to four of the six pictures in question, which have had initial showings by the trade journal and newspaper critics and by the picture-going public.

Will Rogers, appearing in Goldwyn productions

"'Earthbound,'" announces Goldwyn, "has been hailed as a picture that will set screen standards. It ran for four weeks at the Astor Theatre, New York, five weeks at the Playhouse, Chicago, and is now playing Miller's Theatre, Los Angeles—all legitimate theatres where advanced prices are charged. The week of September 19 it was screened at the world's biggest playhouse, the Capitol Theatre, New York, showing to 73,251 persons for the week—equivalent to a six weeks' run at capacity at any other theatre in America.

"'Madame X,' one of the greatest emotional dramas of the century, gives Pauline Frederick the best role that has ever fallen to her lot. She gives a flawless performance as the mother sunk to the dregs of degradation who commits murder to prevent her son's learning her identity.

"The Penalty," by Gouverneur Morris, in its screen form, has proved a maker of reputations—both its director, Wallace Worsley, and its featured player, Lon Chaney, achieving new renown in their professions through their work in it. Its thrilling dramatic story of San Francisco's underworld easily makes it Mr. Morris' premier contribution to the screen. It is now having an indefinite run at the Playhouse, Chicago.

Rex Beach will be seen at his most virile and dramatic when "The North Wind's Malice" is shown at the Capitol this month. Will Rogers was given a wonderful reception by critics and public alike in "Honest Hutch." He reveals himself as a character actor of the finest type—and still remains a comedian of the first water.

Brunton Confers with Brunet

Productions for Next Year Are Discussed in Conference

PLANS for big productions to be initiated during the forthcoming year, were discussed by Robert Brunton and Paul Brunet of Pathe, on the occasion of the former's visit to New York last week. Mr. Brunton made his first trip to the Metropolis in more than two years to discuss the releasing arrangements for "The Devil to Pay," the special feature recently finished by Mr. Brunton, and for a number of other high-class features and serials which will be made in the next twelve months. At the Brunton studio in Hollywood, there is now being produced by Mr. Brunton for Pathe distribution, a new Ruth Roland serial, "The Avenging Arrow," in which Miss Roland will appear.

In outlining his plans to Mr. Brunet, it was indicated by Mr. Brunton that he will attempt more pretentious productions than ever before. Owing to the necessity of guarding the plans discussed with Mr. Brunet, until after production has been instituted, Mr. Brunton would not discuss them.

He was very enthusiastic, however, over what the future had in store for the industry. "We have just completed the building of the biggest stage in the world," said Mr. Brunton. "It is 300 feet long by 125 feet wide, and will permit of the making of any kind of motion pictures. Our plant in Hollywood now covers 42⅓ acres, while in the foothills we have 350 acres for the filming of 'outdoor stuff.'"

Mr. Brunton was asked what he thought would be the next big improvement in the art of motion picture making. "Technically," he replied, "I believe we have reached the limit in picture making. There may be some improvements in camera work—slight improvements. But the next big thing of importance will be the filming of dramas in natural colors. However, that will not be for some time.

"There is plenty of room for improvement in story writing, though. What the industry needs more than anything else at this time, is an aggregation of writers trained for screen work. We need specialists, as they have in the field of legitimate drama. They must be men familiar with every minute detail of the studio, for the day is here when he must have what we call 'director proof' scenarios. When we are ready to begin 'shooting' on a picture, the continuity must be so mapped out that the director can go right ahead and know virtually exactly how much footage he will have when he has finished his picture, and with the knowledge that every detail but the actual directing has been cared for in his working scenario. We bring this about by continued conferences between our writers, continuity men, directors and myself.

"I only wish the public was as strong for mystery pictures as I am myself. There is nothing I enjoy making so much as a drama that is full of suspense, and one which will make your audience think hard before they are able to penetrate the veil of mystery drawn about the story. I love a good detective romance or any good mystery yarn, and there is a good percentage of the American theatre-going public aligned with me in that respect."

Mr. Brunton has been so busily engaged directing his big Hollywood plant, in which twelve companies are now producing on six stages, that, for weeks at a time, declares Pathe, he never steps outside the gates of his studio. He has built himself a bungalow right inside the plant, and spends practically all his time in it when not looking at films. His activities begin shortly after sun up and do not end until near the midnight hour.

Jules Levey to Manage Universal Branch

Jules Levey, manager of Universal's Toledo film exchange, has been drafted by that company to take charge of the Universal branch in Washington, D. C., under E. J. Smith, division sales manager of Universal's Atlantic Division.

Levey's place in the Toledo office will be taken by Arthur Elliott.

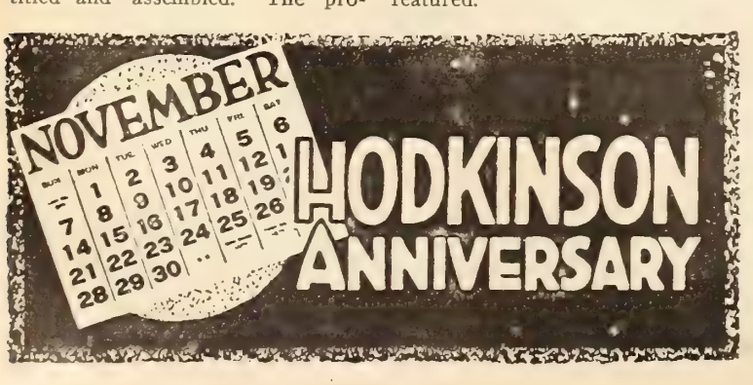
First Nat'l Announces Pictures to Be Released in Near Future

IN his belief that motion pictures have neglected a great opportunity in the use of art titles, Arthur I. Rouda, former supervising art director for Metro and Allen Holubar, but now heading the art department of the Katherine MacDonald Pictures Productions, will personally supervise the designing and execution of more artistic art effects in the titles of future MacDonald pictures. Rouda designed and dressed the sets for Miss MacDonald in her recent production "The Second Latchkey," the name of which has not yet been announced.

Elegant dancing effects of the Orient and Occident are obtained in "Curtain," Katherine MacDonald's latest First National attraction, which shows the terpsichorean art of Kovert in the dance of a Burmese priest and Ernestina Myers in her ultra-modern novelty "The Cascade." Kovert appears on the screen entirely encased in gold leaf. Miss Myers' work in this picture has already resulted in several attractive film offers it is stated.



Mayflower announces that the adaptation of Robert Chambers' inspiration spirit drama "Athalie," which was directed by Sidney Franklin, with Sylvia Breamer in the leading role, has been titled and assembled. The production will be known as "Unseen Forces," when it is released by Associated First National Pictures next month.

Owing to the peculiar psychic touches which are woven into the story, a great deal of time was spent in editing the production—nearly three months—but with its completion, Mayflower officials are confident that they have one of the most unusual productions of the year.

Mack Sennett announces the completion of his second and last five reel super-comedy for First National release, "Love, Honor and Behave," the negative of which will be forwarded to the East this week. This production will exploit the comedy gifts of Charlie Murray, Phyllis Haver, Marie Prevost, Billy Bevan, Kalla Pasha, Eddie Gribbon and George O'Hara.

Pioneer Will Feature Edith Roberts

An announcement made recently by the Pioneer Film Corporation at its headquarters, 130 West Forty-sixth Street, tells of the preparation of a big production featuring Edith Roberts. The production which the Pioneer is now at work on is the first independent one in which Miss Roberts will be featured.

Discusses Musical Service

Arthur Klein Explains Scope and Purpose of New Amusement Service

ARTHUR KLEIN'S Manhattan Exchange idea for the booking to moving-picture theatre exhibitors a continuous split or full-week service of singers and musical acts has aroused widespread interest in the trade.

Asked as to just what he had in mind as to the scope of the proposed service and why he thought the exhibitor needed it, Mr. Klein admitted that for a year or more he had been studying the possibilities of breaking the monotony of a straight picture program with some sort of entertainment. "Obviously," said Mr. Klein, "the entertainment would have to be of a type that would not too seriously interrupt the photoplay program, but at the same time would really entertain the wise audiences of today.

"There is just one general kind of talent that will serve this purpose, and that is the singing and musical numbers. If it has the class and is presented by finished talent, it can entertain anywhere, anytime, but is peculiarly adapted to photo-theatre needs."

"Between photoplay subjects a relief from eye and mental strain is given an audience, just as it is a relief to have the curtain fall now and then in a dramatic show, and gives the audience a chance to relax, so it is a relief to have the steady progress of a photoplay program interrupted.

"It has been proved," continued Mr. Klein, "that lighter diversion whether it be a song or an instrumental selection has met with all the desired success where it has been tried, and since the idea came to me—and let me admit now that it is not an original idea—I have been contracting talent, sounding managers, and making arrangements to launch my proposition on a national scale."

"Nothing short of the best," said Klein, "will suit me, or the theatres I desire to book. This does not mean that Caruso, Farrar, Mary Garden, or Nora Bayes will play these theatres. It does mean, however, a consistently and continuously high grade of varied talent that has made good here in New York and that we are certain will do the same for the managers we book in other cities.

"The flood of inquiries received shows the exhibitor's need of this service. We are trying to answer the predominating questions in this issue. We intend a frank answer to every inquiry, no evading of issues, no dodging of questions. We have no desire to serve any exhibitor who does not need the service—not serve him unless his audience demands extra diversion."

DeMille's Latest Released

"Something to Think About" and "The Jailbird" Issued October 3

"SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT," the Cecil B. DeMille production, which is declared to be radically different from anything Mr. DeMille has ever attempted before, was released October 3 by Paramount. Simultaneously was released the Thomas H. Ince production, "The Jailbird," starring Douglas MacLean.

The idea of right thinking furnishes the basic idea for the story of "Something to Think About," which was written by Jeanie Macpherson. Its theme is described as being of the loftiest and its treatment, it is stated, is of that same high artistic standard which has made Mr. DeMille's previous productions decidedly distinctive. In the early scenes, the quaint rural characteristics of Luke Anderson, a blacksmith, and his daughter Ruth, are said to have a rollicking humor that is captivatingly presented. When the daughter, already engaged to a rich young man of the neighborhood, elopes with Jim Dirk, a young man of her own station in life, the clouds of tragedy gather quickly.

An all-star cast is featured, the players including Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Roberts, Monte Blue, Julia Faye and Theodore Kosloff.

Julien Josephson is the author of "The Jailbird" the Thomas H. Ince production starring Douglas MacLean, and the direction was entrusted to the hands of Lloyd Ingraham.

Mr. MacLean is seen as a rogue in this picture, but a loveable chap for all that. He breaks out of jail, inherits a small fortune, goes West to edit a newspaper, excites the hostility of the staid old villagers, decides to bunco them into investing in a fake oil scheme, when presto! All his plans are pleasantly upset. He goes back to jail but his action is not without its compensations.

Doris May again plays opposite Mr. MacLean and character parts are interpreted by Lew Morrison, William Courtright, Wilbur Higby, Otto Hoffman, Monty Collins and Bert Woodruff.

"Peaceful Valley" Gets Premier at Strand

"Peaceful Valley," the second of Charles Ray's independent productions to be released, the second in which the star is presented by Arthur S. Kane and the second whose release is handled by First National, will be seen by the public for the first time on Sunday, October 10. It will be the feature offering at the Strand Theatre, Manhattan, during the week opening with that day.

Two weeks later, on Sunday, October 24, the picturization of this Edward E. Kidder drama will be transferred to the Brooklyn Strand, the second of the Mark theatres in Greater New York. Meanwhile, during the weeks just ahead, the picture will be seen also in many other houses throughout the country. Its release is set down on the First National Schedule for October 10.

Sennett and Two Reelers

RUMORS that Mack Sennett was to abandon the two-reel comedy field are met with emphatic denial.

"We are going to make fewer two-reel comedies," says Mr. Sennett, "that much is true. We are also going to continue five-reel comedies. We have no disposition to abandon the field in which, it may be said without egotism, the name of this organization has become identified throughout the world.

"Two-reel comedies are in greater demand than ever. It is merely in the matter of merit that the exhibitors and public have become more critical. This attitude, on the part of the ultimate buyer—the public—is the result of the ambitions of the producer, who, if he is wise, is constantly in the lead of his market, voluntarily advancing the standards of his own efforts, and raising the tone of his art. On this account, if on no other, we have planned fewer two-reel comedies than we made per year in the past, and we plan better pictures in order to measure up to our best standards and keep them abreast with the demand we have created."

Story and Cast to Win for Sennett Comedy

Two qualities promise to invest the humor of Mack Sennett's latest five-reel super-comedy "Love, Honor and Behave," which, it is expected, will establish it as a worthy successor to "Down on the Farm" and "Married Life." It has a distinct and dramatically developed story value, and its cast is of all-star importance just as it was in "Married Life," announces First National.

Two of Mack Sennett's feminine stars will be enrolled in attractive characterizations, Phyllis Haver playing the part of a strangely-neglected wife, and Marie Prevost playing the role of an over-jealous bride. Charlie Murray, Billy Bevan, William Armstrong, George O'Hare, Ford Sterling, Kalla Pasha, Charlotte Mineau, Eddie Gribbon, Baldy Belmont, Fanny Kelly, Eva Thatcher are also in the cast.

Film to Aid "Own Your Own Home" Campaign

A nation-wide "Own Your Own Home" campaign is to be conducted with the aid of a motion picture, which is now being produced by the Rothacker Film Company. While this is a propaganda film—intended to cause people to go ahead and build the homes America needs so badly—it is not an advertising film, inasmuch as no particular manufacturer's building material is exploited in the picture, declares Rothacker Film.

Selected for Capitol Bill

Educational's Slow-Motion Picture of Kellerman to Be in Celebration

AFTER having viewed the latest Educational single reel special, Annette Kellerman in "The Art of Diving," Samuel L. Rothapfel, of the Capitol theatre, announced that it would form a portion of the program for his celebration of the first anniversary of the biggest motion picture theatre in the world. The Capitol observes its birthday the week of October 24, and therefore so far as the New York City territory is concerned, Educational announces that the release will be delayed.

Educational reports that inquiries from the various branches show an unusual interest in the Kellerman picture and that it will probably surpass in number of first-run showings the latest of the special releases, "Babe Ruth—How He Knocks His Home Runs," for which a record in single-reels is claimed. According to reports, the world's series has increased the demand of this picture considerably beyond the hundred prints that were provided.

The Annette Kellerman picture was made at Los Angeles under the personal direction of the "modern Venus" herself and is the first time that she has exhibited her secrets of diving through slow motion. The Cinal process is said to have recorded perfectly every flex of the muscles in the stunts that have made her the highest priced performer in vaudeville history.

"The Art of Diving" is the fourth of the specials that have been released by Educational in the past four months, the others being the Babe Ruth picture just mentioned, "Modern Centaurs" and "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes." Not only have they had exceptional bookings, but it is claimed that not a week passes in which it is not necessary to order more prints to meet the demand.

"Fulfilling Its Expectations"

Opinion Rendered by Vitagraph in Connection With "Trumpet Island"

VITAGRAPH'S production of "Trumpet Island," the first Tom Terriss special production, is fulfilling all the big things expected of it according to a statement from the Vitagraph headquarters. As anticipated, the film version of Gouverneur Morris' story, as edited by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester, has proved one of the most successful pictures of the year, declares the Vitagraph statement, and although released but a few weeks it has been a first-run attraction in the larger theatres throughout the United States and Canada.

In Chicago, it is booked, among other theatres, at the Ziegfeld, where it will be a three weeks' attraction at a dollar per seat. This is decommand this price at the Ziegfeld, the first having been D. W. Griffith's clared to be the second picture to mediately preceded it.

Among the larger theatres which have either presented "Trumpet Island" as a first-run, or have arranged to do so, with the bookings covering an engagement of from one to three weeks, are the Phantom theatre, Toledo, Ohio; the Strand theatre, Akron, Ohio; Tally's Broadway theatre, Los Angeles; Victory theatre, Providence, R. I.; Strand theatre, Flint, Mich.; Imperial theatre, Montreal, Canada; Minerva theatre, Pittsburgh; Empress theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Moon theatre, Omaha, Neb.; American theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah; and many others.

Several circuits also have booked "Trumpet Island." The Fox Circuit, with headquarters in New York, has arranged to show the special production in all its New York City theatres and those it controls in Jamaica, Brooklyn, Newark, Elizabeth, Paterson and other nearby cities; the Gordon Circuit in Massachusetts; and the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, controlling theatres in twenty-six of the largest cities in the South.

Record Bookings in For "The Riddle: Woman"

From bookings recorded four weeks before the production was set for release, Pathe predicts that "The Riddle: Woman," first Associated Exhibitors feature to be distributed through its channels, will far eclipse the records of "Common Clay," "The Thirteenth Chair," "Other Men's Shoes," "One Hour Before Dawn," "A Broadway Cowboy," "Rio Grande," "Passers By," and other big pictures which have been Pathe pace makers in recent months. With returns in from only six of the thirty four Pathe exchanges throughout the country, this prediction seems certain of fulfillment, declares a statement from Pathe headquarters.

Has New Exhibitor Aids for "The Stealers"

Robertson-Cole announces that it is beginning, with the release of "The Stealers," its super-special attraction soon to be given to the trade, an entirely new line of exhibitors' aids "which will enable the showman who books Robertson-Cole pictures to cut his advertising bills and still have at his command a more artistic and attractive line of exploitation matter than he has been able heretofore to use."

The new accessories plan which Robertson-Cole, with the release of "The Stealers" offers to exhibitors includes a program-herald, a throwaway and a window card. These have been gotten up with extra care as to quality of art and printing, it is stated.

Eileen Percy Improves on Her First Hit

Eileen Percy, who is reported by William Fox to have achieved "an enviable success" in "Her Honor the Mayor," her first stellar vehicle under the Fox banner, has scored an even greater hit in "The Husband Hunter," according to a statement from the Fox headquarters in New York. "The Husband Hunter" was shown to capacity business at each performance, says the Fox statement, during its run at the Academy of Music in New York, the latter half of the week of September 19th. The story, written by F. Scott Fitzgerald, originally ran in the Saturday Evening Post under the title of "Myra Meets His Family," and Director Howard M. Mitchell has lost none of the quaint satire which made the story so enjoyable in the reading.

TRUMPET ISLAND—Vitagraph

"TRUMPET ISLAND" will be one of the talked about pictures of the fall and winter. It is easy to believe that Tom Terriss and his cast spent months and endured all manner of hardships that this might be a super-feature in fact as well as in the advertising. The "air stuff," as the climax of which an airplane is sent hurtling through an electric storm and ends with a crash in the treetops of a lonely island, however it may have been obtained, is much the most realistic of any similar scenes to which we have been witness. The story is a Gouverneur Morris romance, which is sufficient to stamp it with a certain originality and charm, and the scenario and titles are by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester, which is something of a guarantee of quality. A young girl, convent reared, falls in love with a soldier boy back from the wars. Her father decrees, however, that she shall marry one of those withered roues of the drama who can bring her wealth but no love. The soldier boy acquires sudden wealth and loses his head, and then seeks to recover his equilibrium by going to live on that good old abandoned island of the movie seas. The girl, dutifully agreeing to marry the roue on promise of being taken in an airplane on her wedding tour, from which she expects to dash herself to death, is eventually dropped at the boy's feet on "Trumpet Island," her memory gone but her sweet self miraculously preserved. Together the youngsters live through several happy weeks, and then they are found and threatened with a separation that you very well know never take place. A big picture in the true sense, and an interesting picture, rich in adventure, not too extravagantly illogical and pictorially arresting. Marguerite de la Motte is an attractive heroine, Wallace MacDonald a plausable and likable hero.

Under the direction of James Patrick Hogan, one of the new directors of the West Coast studios of Fox Film Corporation, the finishing touches are being applied to "The Little Grey Mouse," in which Louise Lovely is to make her debut as a Fox star.

"The Little Grey Mouse," which is from the pen of Barbara Le Marr Deely, was chosen as Miss Lovely's first starring vehicle, it is said, because it appeared to afford her such ample scope for her emotional ability.

Sam DeGrasse plays the leading role opposite Miss Lovely. Rosemary Theby also appears in the cast, and the "heavy" role is assumed by Philo McCullough. Others in the cast are Wilson Hummel, Gerard Alexander and Thomas Jefferson.

Herbert Brenon Adds to "Earthbound" Praise

Herbert Brenon has added his name to those of the other big producers of motion pictures who have written Goldwyn in the highest praise for the production of Basil King's "Earthbound", directed by T. Hayes Hunter. George Loane Tucker, who did "The Miracle Man", and Maurice Tourneur, producer of "The Blue Bird" by Maeterlinck, wrote words of glowing praise for the picture after seeing it at a private showing at the Goldwyn studios. And now Herbert Brenon, just back from Europe where he has been making a series of pictures starring Marie Doro, adds his voice to theirs. Says Mr. Brenon:

"I've just come from "Earthbound" and, while under its spell, I want to let you know what I think about it.

"I think that it's the biggest directorial step forward since the camera first began to blaze its industrial and artistic trail."

"The Green Cabinet" to Show Fire Hazards

A company of Universal players, headed by Captain Frank C. Badgley, left Wednesday night of this week for Toronto, Canada, in the vicinity of which city, several days will be devoted to the taking of scenes for the latest Universal educational production "The Green Cabinet." This production will be unique in that it will show for the first time upon a screen, how valuable papers and securities may be saved against the hazards of fire and water, declares Universal Industrial department.

Luke McLuke to Write "Film-Osophy"

New Pathe Releases for October

"Half a Chance" and "Money Changers" Are Due Soon

THE latter half of October will be a most significant period for the Pathe feature department with two of the biggest productions of the year slated for release, states Pathe officials. Exhibitors who are looking for features that will permit them to use extended exploitation and advertising, will find just such productions in Jesse D. Hampton's "Half a Chance," and Ben B. Hampton's "The Money Changers," is the assertion of the Pathe organization.

"Half a Chance" is scheduled for issue on October 24th and will be followed a week later by the Ben Hampton version of the Upton Sinclair story of New York life. Two famous authors are represented in these productions. The Jesse Hampton picture was adapted from the novel by Frederick S. Isham. Upton Sinclair has aroused much comment by his works in the past decade. In "The Money Changers," he divulges some of the secrets of life in the lowest and highest strata of American society, but his facts are indisputable, for it was only after the keenest investigation that he wrote "The Money Changers."

"Half a Chance" represents again the best efforts of Robert Thornby, a director, who has a reputation for making pictures that "count" at the box office, declares Pathe. Mahlon Hamilton is featured in "Half a Chance" with Lillian Rich, who has become a prime favorite in Jesse D. Hampton attractions. Hamilton will be well remembered for his efforts in support of Blanche Sweet in "The Deadlier Sex." Lillian Rich helped make "One Hour Before Dawn" and Felix O'Day two of the most attractive of H. B. Warner's productions.

Two scenes from "The Money Changers," a Benj. Hampton production, to be released through Pathe

Besides those popular players, there appears in the cast of "Half a Chance" a number of other superb screen performers, among them being little Mary McAllister, who has been starred in many productions: Sydney Ainsworth, Tom Maguire, Wilton Taylor, John Gough, William Lion West, and Josephine Crowell. Fred Myton wrote the scenario for "Half a Chance."

The story is one which deals first with life on the Barbary Coast of San Francisco, and how Sailor Burke, an ex-prize fighter and derelict, escapes while being taken to prison for a murder of which he is innocent. He ships as a stoker and when the boat is wrecked, rescues Jocelyn Wray, the daughter of the judge who sentenced him. He drifts on to a lonely island and studies law from books washed ashore from the wrecked steamer. Ten years later, as John Steele, he is San Francisco's greatest criminal lawyer. He never gives up his search for evidence that will clear him of the murder charge. He again meets Jocelyn Wray and falls in love with her. Her accepted fiancee, Jack Donsdale, recognizes Steele by a tattoo mark and hires a detective to denounce him as the escaped murderer, "Sailor" Burke. With Jocelyn's aid, he escapes the detective, and after a fierce fight, obtains a confession from a witness to the murder, which discloses Donsdale as the real perpetrator of it.

Jack Conway, young and virile in his direction, made of "The Money Changers" a smashing entertainment with the force and dramatic punch a great melodrama demands, declares Pathe.

A strong all-around cast has been assembled for "The Money Changers." Fourteen prominent players have important parts in the production, with Robert McKim, Roy Stewart, Claire Adams, Edward Piel, Audrey Chapman, George Webb, Harry Tennebrook, Harvey Clark, Stanton Heck, Jack Williams, Betty Brice, Gertrude Claire, Laddie Earle, and George Hernandez, portraying the principal parts.

Frances Marion as Director

Has Signed Long-Term Contract to Direct Mary Pickford

FRANCES MARION, the scenario writer, who is at present directing Mary Pickford in a story also written by herself, for release by United Artists' Corporation, has signed a long-term contract with Miss Pickford to direct her in forthcoming productions.

Miss Marion will continue her activities as a scenario writer and will take up her duties as a permanent member of Miss Pickford's organization immediately after the completion of a contract in the East, from which she was granted a leave of absence to direct Miss Pickford in her next two United Artists' productions.

The first of Miss Pickford's photoplays under the direction of Miss Marion to be released in the very near future is an original story which Miss Marion has named "Rag-Tag and Bob-Tail."

The United Artists' Corporation has just issued a statement, containing the following appreciation of Miss Marion's work in the past:

"Since her wonderful success with Miss Pickford's photo-play, 'The Foundling,' which was adapted from Miss Marion's story, this clever young woman has risen to the very top of scenario writers in the motion picture business. She has been responsible for nearly a dozen of Miss Pickford's most successful stories, and in addition she has had the opportunity of writing photoplays for Clara Kimball Young, Sessue Hayakawa, Alice Brady, Billie Burke and the late Olive Thomas.

"She also did 'The World and His Wife,' 'The City of Dim Faces,' 'The Temple of Dust,' 'The Land of Promise,' 'Misleading Lady' and her splendid recent success, 'Humoresque.'

"Miss Marion started on her writing career as a newspaper woman in San Francisco, both as reporter and special writer on several of the San Francisco dailies. Later she came to New York to do similar work, and it was in New York that she first did her stories for the screen, following a part which she played in 'The Girl from Yesterday.'

"Her first story, 'The Foundling,' brought her into great prominence, and since that time she has written no end of successes. From the very day that she wrote the scenario for 'The Poor Little Rich Girl' Miss Marion and Miss Pickford became chums. They have been inseparable companions both in business and pleasure. Together they work out their stories, and together they attend moving-picture theatres to study the works of others.

"Other successes that Miss Pickford has presented, scenarios of which Miss Marion has been responsible for, are 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm,' 'The Little Princess,' 'Stella Maris,' 'M'liss,' 'Joan Enlists,' 'Pollyanna' and Miss Marion's original story, 'Clothes-Line Alley.'

"Upon the completion of 'Pollyanna' Miss Marion was induced to sign a contract with another corporation, for which she has written several successes.

Fox Signs New Directors

Augmented Staff by Acquisition of J. Searle Dawley and Edw. Sedgwick

TWO new directors have taken their places on the directorial staff of the William Fox Film Corporation. They are J. Searle Dawley and Edward Sedgwick. The former has guided the work of many well-known screen stars, including Mary Pickford, and is at the present time busy at the Fox studios making preparations for his first production under the Fox management. Mr. Sedgwick, who has been a soldier, Texas Ranger, spy-chaser, football and baseball player, actor, reporter, playwright and scenario writer, is staging the second William Fox serial, which is now under production at the New York studios of the Fox Film organization.

In a series of statements just issued from the Fox headquarters, the careers of the newly acquired directors are reviewed at some length. The pertinent paragraphs from these statements are submitted as follows:

"Mr. Dawley knows motion pictures 'from the ground up.' He came in as a director when the old Edison Company was making 'Faust,' 'Treasure Island,' 'Carmen' and other classics in one reel. He declares it was at the Edison that he produced a picture called 'Eagle's Nest' and learned years later that David Wark Griffith was in the cast.

"He not only directed, but he wrote the scenarios for over two hundred pictures in those days. And before that sixteen of the plays he wrote were used by stock companies.

"It is quite in keeping with things as they ought to be that Edward Sedgwick now is a director of motion pictures, for he has had experiences that come to few men and that must prove invaluable in his latest line of endeavor. A complete story of what he has done would make a sizable book.

"When Mr. Fox decided upon a regular program of serials Sedgwick proposed that he write the second. In a few weeks he had turned out a story that created enthusiasm in the Fox studios. Then it was decided to give him his first chance as a director, so that he is now busy filming the second Fox serial."

To Star in an Original Play

Fred de Grasse Author of Story in Which Lillian Gish Appears

THE first production, starring Lillian Gish under the direction of Jerome Storm, will be made from an original play by Fred de Gresac, famous French playwright, according to an announcement issued this week by Mr. Storm. Madame de Gresac is the author of a number of stage plays, including "The Marriage of Kitty", "The Enchantress", "The Purple Road", "Sweethearts", "Pamela" and "The Third Moon."

When Mr. Storm was secured by special arrangement with Storm Pictures, Inc., to direct Miss Gish in her first stellar vehicle for the Frohman Amusement Company, he was given the privilege of selecting the story for his production. A number of famous novels and plays were under his consideration, when the de Gresac play was submitted and instantly approved both by him and Miss Gish.

The playwright first conceived the idea of a play for Miss Gish after seeing her in G. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation." The theme was slowly evolved and was put into scenario form only a few weeks ago when Madame de Gresac learned that the young actress would star independently. While the nature of the story, now bearing the working title of "World Shadows", is not being disclosed, Mr. Storm states that he considers it a powerful theme peculiarly pertinent to the situation throughout the world today.

Mr. Storm is now assembling the cast and collaborating with the author on the final draft of continuity. He expects to commence rehearsals next week with a large cast of principals, assisted in this work by Madame de Gresac.

Closes for 100 Per Cent Hodkinson Releases

Harry Reiff, the Pittsburg representative of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, has just closed a contract with Mr. Freeman of the Penn theatre, New Castle, Pa., for all Hodkinson pictures to be released up to January 1, 1921 This adds Mr. Freeman to that constantly growing group of exhibitors throughout the country who belong to what is unofficially known at the home office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation as "The 100% Club."

Word comes from the West Coast this week that "Jimmy" Morrison will be seen opposite Jean Paige in Vitagraph's special production of "Black Beauty," adapted from Anna Sewell's novel. Morrison ranks among the best and most widely-known juvenile actors appearing on the screen. He was with Vitagraph for six years in Brooklyn, and his characterization in Vitagraph's "Over the Top" was said to have been a big factor in the success of that film. His role in "Black Beauty" is that of Harry Blomefield, and it is is regarded as eminently suited to Morrison's personality.

The part of "Jack" Beckett, the polished villain in "Black Beauty," has been entrusted to George Webb. John Spaulding takes the part of 'Squire Gordon, father of Jessie. Mollie McConnell will have the role of the 'squire's wife.

Bennett Starts Third Barrymore Picture

Whitman Bennett announces the starting this week of "The Great Adventure," the third of the series of Lionel Barrymore pictures to be released through Associated First National Pictures. This is an adaptation of the play written by Arnold Bennett, itself founded and adapted from the novel "Buried Alive" by the same author.

Kenneth Webb, who directed "The Master Mind" and "The Devil's Garden" which Mr. Bennett has already produced with Lionel Barrymore as the star for Associated First National, will also direct this third feature. Supporting Mr. Barrymore are Doris Rankin, Ivo Dawson, Octavia Broske, Thomas Braidon, Charles Lane, Jed Prouty, Arthur Rankin and Maybeth Carr. The scenario of "The Great Adventure" is by Dorothy Farnum, based on a synopsis written by Mr. Bennett.

Interesting "Shots" in Fox News, No. 103

The earthquake which wiped out scores of towns and villages in Italy and killed and injured hundreds of persons is a bigger news story than the seventeen wars that are going on today. Fox News No. 103 has exclusive pictures of it—the first to reach America.

A racing automobile tore down a steep hill, turned a corner and then toppled over and over right in front of a Fox News camera between Denver and Pueblo the other day. And a Fox News cameraman caught the action which appears also in Fox News No. 103.

Extensive Advertising for "Down Home"

The advertising department of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, has fired the opening gun of what it to be a most extensive advertising campaign on "Down Home", the first independent Irvin V. Willat production which will be released in October.

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

Universal Has New Series

Two-Reel Dramas Are Built Around the Northwestern Mounted Police

"UNIVERSAL is now releasing a series of the most engaging and picturesque tabloid photo-plays ever screened—a series of two-reel dramas of the Northwestern Mounted Police, written and directed by Jacques Jaccard," announced Harry M. Berman, general manager of Universal exchanges, in a recent statement from the Universal home office.

"The series, which consists of six separate stories dealing with the same localities and the same characters, is called 'The Red Rider Series.' He is supported by a strong cast, including Virginia Faire, the pretty New York girl who won the last year's Fame and Fortune Contest conducted by the Motion Picture Classic a "fan" publication.

The series is built around the character of a fearless leader of one of the most reckless units of the Mounted Police—Sergeant Kirk McLean, six feet, two inches of fighting manhood. Clapham, who plays this role, is not a Canadian, but in his native State of Kentucky, he did similar service as a deputy marshal, ranging the hill country in quest of moonshiners, counterfeiters and other lawbreakers.

"The Red Rider Series is being released one a week. The first, called "A Son of the North" was released October 4. The succeeding pictures of the series are The Girl and the Law, Big Stakes, When the Devil Laughed, The Forest Runners and The Timber Wolf.

"This last one will be released November 8.

"Among the cast which plays with Clapham and Miss Faire in these short photo-dramas are Charles Brinley, Frank Staples, Herbert Bethew and Ivar McFadden. Kay Harrison, who scenarioized the series, also takes an occasional role."

Publisher in Film Tie-Up

Vidor Manager and Grosset-Dunlap Co. Join to Aid "Jack-Knife Man"

Edward Grainger

ARRANGEMENTS are being completed by Ed. Grainger, New York manager for King Vidor, and S. A. Jenkins, publicist for Grosset and Dunlap, publishers, for a combination exploitation plan on "The Jack-knife Man." The success which has come to the screen production of this novel by Ellis Parker Butler, has revived a strong demand for the book; and as Mr. Jenkins has learned the efficacy of using a motion picture production for the purpose of boosting book sales, and knows that a selling campaign on a book will aid a screen adaptation of the same story, it is his intention to make the exploitation of the book fit in with the advertising on the picture.

The campaign on "The Jack-knife Man" will be conducted along lines which Mr. Jenkins has found to be most efficient from the point of profits for both the motion picture producer and the publishers. This consists of keeping in close touch with the bookings on the picture and then getting in touch with book stores in the vicinity of the theatre. The obviousness of the advantage to be gained by the book seller through an advertising campaign and window displays on the book, simultaneously with the advertising of the screen production of the same story at the local theatre, is pointed out. Cut-outs, posters and other displays for use in the windows or in other ways of advertising are furnished by the publishers for the use of the book sellers. As near as possible these are made to conform with the advertising matter furnished the exhibitor by the distributing company.

It is announced that a special edition of "The Jack-knife Man" will be published by Grosset and Dunlap in connection with the exploitation campaign in conjunction with the distribution around the country of the King Vidor production of the same name by Associated First National Pictures. The edition will be illustrated by "stills" from the motion picture production, and the title page will carry an announcement of the adaptation of the book to the screen by King Vidor.

"39 East" Is Selected for Opening Night

The Terrace theatre, Danville, Ill., will formally open October 14, with the Realart production, "39 East," starring Constance Binney.

The Terrace, which is controlled by the Home Theatre Company of Danville, was constructed at a total cost of $250,000. Thomas P. Ronan will direct the activities of the Terrace. A 22-piece orchestra has been engaged, and the opening night will be a gala occasion.

Douglas Fairbanks in his new picture now in the making for United Artists. Margaret De La Motte is his new leading lady

"Doug" in Exceptional Role

Coming United Artists Release to Introduce New Leading Lady

ACCORDING to the news that comes from Douglas Fairbanks' studio in Hollywood, Calif., he has an exceptional character to portray and a new leading woman to introduce in his fourth United Artists production, which will be released shortly. The picture is an adaptation of Johnston McCulley's story, "The Curse of Capistrano," which was a featured serial in the "All Story Weekly" magazine.

The story, laid in Southern California in the midst of the most magnificent settings, simply bristles with action, states United Artists, and into the picture there has been injected an exceedingly strong love interest which is quite different from anything that "Doug" has ever done before. He himself in the story plays a new type of dual role, that of both the bad and the good man, winning the love of the girl in question in both guises.

The girl in question in real life is Miss Marguerite DeLaMotte, who portrays the character of an aristocratic and romantic lady of the early Spanish people who settled California. Some people possess a conception that all those emanating from the Latin race must necessarily possess a dark or swarthy complexion. In this picture, if such were the case, Miss De LaMotte would fail in that requirement, in that she appears to be somewhat of a lighter hue, thereby upsetting more or less an established theory.

As a matter of fact, many of the aristocrats of Spain claimed to be free from all mixture with the darker blood of the natives, a proof being supposed to lie in the blue veins that showed in their fairer skins. Hence, the care and preciseness displayed by "Doug" and his director, Fred Niblo, in selecting Miss DeLaMotte for the feminine lead, exclusive of her dramatic ability, declares the United Artists statement.

Vignola Finishes His Third

Takes Final Scenes on Third of His Specials for Cosmopolitan

ROBERT G. VIGNOLA has taken the final scenes of "The Manifestation of Henry Ort," his third special production for Cosmopolitan-Paramount. All that remains to be done in the titling and editing, after which Director Vignola plans to go to his farm near Albany for a two weeks' rest before he begins his next production.

Working on a close schedule laid out by himself, Director Vignola made his last three productions, in retrogressive order, "The Manifestation of Henry Ort." "The Passionate Pilgrim," and "The World And His Wife," without resting so much as a day between pictures. He has been working under a great strain and now feels that he is well enough ahead of his production schedule to be able to take two weeks off for a much needed rest.

The scenario for his next production is now being prepared. While specific details as to the title and theme are lacking, it is said to be a dramatic story of unusual beauty and atmosphere, a story of plain folks and their ideals and dreams with a rare strain of pathos and humor intermingling.

"The Manifestation of Henry Ort," just completed, was scenarioized by Frances Marion from Ethel Watts Mumford's great short story. It is a satirical comedy drama revolving around a ouija board.

A cast of merit was chosen by Vignola, and the line-up includes such well-known players as Matt Moore, George Parsons, Gladys Leslie, Mabel Bert, Van Dyke Brooks, and Henry Sedley.

Picture in Church Service

Rev. Henry Rose of Newark Uses "Over the Hill" in Preaching

DESPITE the fact that it is only three weeks since "Over the Hill", the William Fox special production, had its initial showing at the Astor theater in New York, this remarkable story of mother love has already found its way into the pulpit and on the lecture platform, declares William Fox in a statement just issued. The screen version of the famous poem by Will Carleton was the subject of a sermon delivered on Sunday night, October 3, by the Rev. Lincoln H. Caswell, pastor of the Crawford Memorial church, 3747 White Plains Ave., New York City. It will also be the subject of an illustrated lecture to be delivered on Sunday night, October 17, by the Rev. Dr. Henry R. Rose, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Newark, N. J.

Dr. Rose who resorts to the illustrated lecture to drive home his sermons, finds themes for his sermons in the modern drama and in motion pictures. These sermons, or lectures, are illustrated with richly colored slides taken from the play or picture. The popularity of this, a regular Sunday night feature in Newark, is attested to by the fact that the capacity of the church, estimated at 800, is invariably taxed, it is stated.

"It is a beautiful picture with a wonderful sermon", declares Dr. Rose, in commenting on "Over the Hill," "and one that really needs but little emphasis by me. In truth the picture speaks for itself, and with the aid of the slides taken from the picture as it is now being shown in New York, few words will be necessary to bring out the wonderful story of mother love and of mother sacrifice."

Following the lecture in Newark, Dr. Rose will occupy pulpits and lecture platforms both in New York and in New Jersey while giving the same lecture on "Over the Hill".

Studio Picture of Service

Wins Business in Far East and Counteracts Foreign Propaganda

GEOFFREY NYE, Goldwyn's Far East representative, who is back from a ten months' most successful trip to the Orient and Australasia, where he placed Goldwyn pictures in every country he visited, asserts that the "studio picture" which he took along was the best selling argument that he had with the exception of the screening of Goldwyn pictures. He is strongly convinced that every agency which handles pictures should be equipped with a "studio picture" and that it should be shown to exhibitors, newspaper writers, and to the general public.

Before leaving Goldwyn's Pacific Coast studios, Mr. Nye packed out 2,300 feet of studio film, showing the size of the Culver City plant, sample elaborate sets, such as those used in "The Flame of the Desert" with Geraldine Farrar, and "Jubilo" with Will Rogers, pictures of the stars in their dressing rooms, acting in front of the camera, etc., and incidentally a hundred feet of film showing himself at the studio and with the Goldwyn officials there.

In India such American studio pictures should go a long way, Mr. Nye believes, toward counteracting the great propaganda being conducted there in favor of European-made pictures as against American-made pictures. The exhibitors of India naturally favor the European production and unless the American producers counteract this propaganda, the market there for Amerrican pictures is going to continue decreasing, declares Mr. Nye.

Robertson-Cole Declares Pauline Frederick Rises to New Heights

"A SLAVE OF VANITY," starring Pauline Frederick, which Robertson-Cole is soon to release as the first in its series of new super-special attractions, for the making of which Miss Frederick recently contracted, shows the famous emotional actress rising to a new emotional plane, states the Robertson-Cole organization.

In announcing Miss Frederick's release, Robertson-Cole has issued the following statement:

"Few women have been endowed with more precious gifts than Pauline Frederick. Her rare beauty combined with a most unusual personality has won for her a host of admirers who have only seen her shadow-self upon the screen, while those who have seen her in the articulate theatre have been thrilled by the quality of her superbly trained voice.

"Her triumph in 'Samson' with William Gillette, in 'Joseph and his Brethren,' 'Innocent' and other dramatic stage plays are still well remembered. But it is probably as a photoplayer that she is best known to the great amusement loving public. Her advent into motion pictures was as brilliant as her achievements that had gone before when she appeared in the role of Donna Roma in the picturization of Hall Cane's 'Eternal City.' Since that time success has followed success until today she holds a most unique and enviable position in the history of the screen.

"'A Slave of Vanity' shows Miss Frederick in the role of an English woman whose husband left his money to her only on the condition that she remains a widow. She loves a young man who has nothing but a chance to go to a far-off English possession and direct a ranch. She is loved by a wealthy financier who is a man of violent and crude personality. The great dramatic situation in the picture rises from her method of answering the momentous question of which man she shall choose."

Pathe Strengthens Position With Release of Santschi Two-Reelers

THE approaching release by Pathe of the first of its two-reel Western dramas, starring Tom Santschi, is made the occasion of the issuing of a statement by the Pathe organization which sets forth a list of the short subjects now being released by the Pathe distributing forces. The statement follows in part:

"The unchallenged supremacy of Pathe in the field of short subjects will be further strengthened by the release of the series of two-reel Western dramas Tom Santschi is now making for distribution by the Gold Rooster organization. Release date of the first of this series will be announced shortly. With the addition of the Santschi subjects, the Pathe short subject calendar now includes, aside from its serial program, the new one-reel Rolins, being produced by Hal E. Roach, featuring 'Snub' Pollard and the 'Vanity Fair Girls'; the Pathe News; the Pathe Review; 'Topics of the Day'; 'Young Buffalo' series; 'Bringing Up Father' series and Mrs. Sidney Drew comedies. Then there is the first and second series of Harold Lloyd two-reel comedy specials, which now have attained the greatest circulation ever accorded any other star in a period similar to that in which Lloyd has been engaged in the production of his two-reel attractions.

"The popularity of short subjects among exhibitors and public is at its highest pitch today, reflected in the sales returns of the various Pathe branch offices. The average program today contains as many as four short subjects, while no exhibitor stages less than two with every show.

"The selling of the 'Young Buffalo' series has been progressing so rapidly that there is hardly a Pathe exchange that has not exceeded its quota, on this excellent series of Western subjects. The same is said of the 'Bringing Up Father' comedies, screen versions of George McManus's celebrated cartoons of Jiggs, Maggie and Norah."

THE MONEY-CHANGERS

ADAPTED BY BENJ. B. HAMPTON FROM THE NOVEL BY

UPTON SINCLAIR

DIRECTED BY JACK CONWAY
WITH
ROBERT McKIM, CLAIRE ADAMS AND ROY STEWART

From the drawing rooms of high society to a back room above a Chinese restaurant; that was the trail he daily followed.

He thought to keep from his beautiful and high-minded society fiancee both the source of his great and ill-gotten gains and the girl who waited for him in Chinatown.

He thought to retain his power, his wealth and his position by sweeping from his path every human obstacle.

But the reformed crook, the hustling young reporter and a girl beat him at his own game,—wits!

A superbly produced picture as fast and as thrilling as a tidal wave.

Here is a hero for men and for women; here is a picture of the great sweep and power, and of the gentleness and god-like beauty characterizing the fine works of literature and of the stage and the screen.

Shipwrecked and left alone with books the power of his mind found itself. He went back to the civilization that had branded him, and men and women bowed before his power.

With his soul aslumber he struck with mighty fists, he defeated champions, he bullied bullies, he cracked hard heads, and he scorned the law.

With his soul aroused he appealed with mighty voice, he defeated the keenest minds of evil, he lived in justice, he loved in tenderness, he was the manly idol of women.

ANDREW SOUTAR

PERSONALLY DIRECTED BY EDGAR LEWIS

In the figures on the ticker tape he read his ruin; he read there the story of the woman who died of hunger when he had all the bread; he read the vengeance of her son who had ruined him.

As these two men battled for power two women battled for the love of the young and determined man who had devoted his life to avenging his mother. One woman was worthy; the other unworthy.

This great fight of finance and the love of women has been woven into one of the most powerful dramas ever created by Edgar Lewis and all who know the history of the screen know the power and ability of this master of dramatic productions.

It has just been announced at the Universal's offices, 1600 Broadway, that Mr. C. H. Macgowan, who recently returned from Europe, where he was on a special mission, has resigned from the company after exactly eight years of service. His work with the film corporation has included almost exery executive capacity possible to one owning no interest in the company.

Twice prior to this Mr. Macgowan has attempted to resign, and both times he was "talked" out of it by Mr. Carl Laemmle, president, and Mr. R. H. Cochrane, vice president of Universal. This time he convinced Mr. Cochrane an opportunity had been presented to him which it was impossible to refuse, and accordingly, his resignation has been accepted.

Mr. Macgowan resigns for the purpose of starting in business for himself as the head of an organization to be known as "Macgowan's, Inc." The business of the company will be the distribution of high class moving pictures in this country and abroad.

Metro Film Purchases "Invisible Ray"

Bob Lynch, of the Metro Film Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., one of the most successful exchanges of that territory, has purchased from the Joan Film Sales Co. the rights to the distribution of "The Invisible Ray," a 15-episode serial starring Jack Sherill and Ruth Clifford, in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey.

Among the devices prepared for the exploitation of "The Invisible Ray" are a series of illustrated booklets to be sent out by Lynch to his exhibitors. The booklets contain the most gripping scenes of the serial, with a caption under each picture in a humorous vein.

Arrangements were made to supply the Metro office with all the electrical contraptions used for the exploitation of the serial, and manufactured by a firm in New York.

Wm. Fox Lists October Releases

WILLIAM FOX presents for the month of October an attractive list of productions. Notable among these is the return of William Farnum in his latest western production, "Drag Harlan," by Charles Alden Seltzer. In this Mr. Farnum is said by Fox to have one of the finest western roles he has ever enacted. J. Gordon Edwards, whose name has been associated with many of the screen's greatest productions, directed "Drag Harlan." Jackie Saunders is the leading woman.

Tom Mix is to be seen in a tale of the great southwest entitled "The Texan,' written by James R. Hendryx. It is declared to be one of the fastest moving stories in which this popular star has appeared —"fairly packed with stunts of sensational horsemanship and tense dramatic situations," states Fox film.

Pearl White appears in her second big feautre production for William Fox, entitled "Tiger's Cub," which is a screen adaptation of the novel by George Goodchild. "Tiger's Cub" is a drama of the great Canadian wilds. Miss White's role is said to be admirably suited to her histrionic ability.

Departing from his familiar field of American ranch life, William Russell appears as a Captain of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, in a story entitled "The Challenge of the Law,' written by E. Lloyd Sheldon. Acording to William Fox, action, and plenty of it, is the keynote of this story, which deals with the activities of fur smuggelrs along the Canadian border. Helen Ferguson appears opposite the star.

Shirley Mason appears in a romance by Frances Marion Mitchell, entitled "Girl of My Heart," which is expected by Fox Film to force both smiles and tears. Its pathetic quality is intense, but this is relieved by action in the lighter vein and by powerful dramatic incident. states William Fox. Raymond McKee, who has appeared as leading man with Miss Mason in several other productions, is again cast opposite the star.

The cowboy star, Buck Jones,

"The Merry Cafe," a Mutt and Jeff cartoon, released by Fox, broke cartoon booking records on Broadway when it ran for four weeks at the Criterion theatre. Here is a scene from the single reel comic will be seen in another Western "thriller'—this one entitled "Sunset Sprague." Clyde C. Westover is the author. The picture was released this wee. Buck manages to pack a thrill a foot into this production with his sensational stunts. In these perilous displays he surpasses his past performances. Patsey de Forest makes a charming leading lady and gives a delightful portrayal of a "regular" western girl.

Eileen Percy appears in "Beware of the Bride," a screen adaptation of Edgar Franklin's magazine story. Miss Percy enacts the role of a little bride, who attends a masquerade ball in the absence of her husband and becomes involved in all sorts of mirth-provoking complications.

Louise Lovely will be seen in her first starring vehicle, entitled "The Little Grey Mouse," written by Barbara Le Marr Deely. "The Little Grey Mouse" provides her with a role that combines the light with the serious. "The Little Grey Mouse" is a strong tale of love of a brave and talented woman for a worthless husband.

The first release by William Fox of the "Clyde Cook Comedies" will be in October with "Kiss Me Quick." This star brought the American theatre-going public to his feet with his droll humor and grotesque antics while he was the leading atttraction at the New York Hippodrome. "Kiss Me Quick" is said by Fox to be "one of the most excrutiatingly funny comedies of the season."

"An Elephant's Nightmare" and "Hold Me Tight" are two Fox Sunshine Comedies to be released in October.

Good Prospects for Pioneer

September's Business Reaches New Mark and October Outlook Is Fine

"REPORTS from all the exchanges of the Pioneer Film Corporation which now extend from one end of the country to the other and embrace all the important points in Canada, show that business for the month of September has reached a new mark in the records of the Pioneer and that the outlook for October is particularly bright with the prospects of breaking all previous records in the history of the concern." This is the main gist of a statement just issued from the pioneer headquarters.

One of the outstanding features in connection with the forthcoming releases of the Pioneer Film Corporation, centers on the series of Nick Carter pictures, based on the famous detective stories. The Nick Carter series will be made up of two reelers.

Under the heading of the "Pioneer Master Specials," comes Daniel Carson Goodman's "Thoughtless Women," which will be the next important release, according to an announcement made yesterday at the headquarters of the Pioneer, 130 West 46th Street.

Alma Rubens is starred.

Thirteen of the fifteen houses in the Lubliner and Trintz circuit of Chicago, are showing Ruth Roland in her new Pathe serial, "Ruth of the Rockies" at special Saturday matinees, reports Pathe Exchange, Inc. The serial episodes occupy the first position on the program at these children's matinees and are reported to be a signal success in swelling the box-office receipts for the week wherever it has been introduced.

The theatres in the Lubliner and Trintz circuit were among the first to introduce the serial as a feature attraction at Saturday afternoon performances. The practice since then has become more general with the managers of first-run theatres in the big cities.

"Ruth of the Rockies" is booked in all the houses employing the scheme, it is stated by Pathe, while "Pirate Gold," the George B. Seitz production, and "The Third Eye," in which Warner Oland is starred with Eileen Percy, are said to be well represented.

Strong Cast is Seen in "Shuffle the Queens"

In "Shuffle the Queens," the latest of the two-reel Christie Comedies to be released through Educational Exchanges, an unusual cast is presented. Eddie Barry is the featured player. In his support are Vera Stedman, Earle Rodney, Charlotte Merriam and Lydia Yeamans Titus.

According to Al Christie, this comedy represents the perfection of Christie work. It is a straight farce, built along the lines of the "bed-room" pictures that have been so popular along Broadway, and it is said to offer more clean laughs than aany picture of this sort ever presented.

Demand for Serials Grows

Their Popularity Shows Marked Increase in West, Says Manager

COMPLETING a tour on which he visited all the key cities in his territory, Western District Manager W. S. Wessling of Pathe Exchange, Inc., in a comprehensive report to the home-office states that there is an increasing demand for serials in the West. Mr. Wessling says that the exhibitors in his district are flourishing and that the market for episode-pictures is more active now than at any time in his experience with Pathe.

"Exhibitors on the West Coast," says Mr. Wessling in his report, "who previously have been more or less fighting shy of serials, are rapidly joining the ranks of those who include them on their programs. These newcomers in the field of serial exhibition have every reason to be gratified with the result and are now convinced of the money-making possibilities of the episode pictures.

"That Western fans are not averse to serials of a high-class order, has been fully demonstrated by the exhibitor's reports, which, in an overwhelming majority of cases, claim that pictures of the quality of 'The Third Eye,' 'Daredevil Jack,' 'Pirate Gold' and 'Ruth of the Rockies' have made the serial night one of the biggest nights in the week.

"'Daredevil Jack,' in which Jack Dempsey is starred, is enjoying a tremendous popularity with the picture-goers, and in my opinion this picture has paved the avenue for this new serial demand in the West.

"The large first run exhibitor is not unmindful of this sudden popularity of the continued photoplay. Many large representative houses in this territory have booked serials as added attractions at their matinee programs. In many instances theatres of this class were compelled, by an irresistible popular demand to repeat the serial on their evening programs."

Board Will Select Stories

Katherine MacDonald to Star "Only in Appealing and Human Stories"

IN a statement issued from the New York headquarters of the First National, the announcement is made that B. P. Fineman, vice-president and general-manager of the newly re-organized Katherine MacDonald Pictures Corporation, has decided to present the star "only in the most appealing and human stories." All these, according to the First National announcement, are to be released exclusively by the First National organization.

A scenario construction board, consisting of Miss MacDonald, J. A. Barry, Gerald C. Duffy, Reed Heustis and Mrs. A. O. Bender, has been selected whose chief duties, according to the First National, will be "to keep the stories logical and human, to eliminate bromides and rank melodrama and to analyze and dissect them so as to turn out pictures of universal interest and lasting impressions. The problems and people to be presented on the screen muse be those the world recognizes, and must appeal to the better qualities of an audience. The male members of the board, in discussing stories, will give particular attention to men's viewpoints and the women will view the situations through the eyes of their own sex."

J. A. Barry, formerly with D. W. Griffith, is to be productions manager and will act in a general advisory capacity.

"The stories to be filmed by Miss MacDonald will be screen adaptations of famous plays or books," continues the First National statement, "or will be originals of an appealingly human type. While her next production is yet to be announced, it is known that it will be founded on a play whose success on the legitimate stage warrants its presentation through the medium of the screen. It is particularly strong in human situations, and is to contain material that will furnish Miss MacDonald with the biggest opportunity her career has yet offered."

Metro Feature Progressing

"Cinderella's Twin," with Viola Dana, Now Well Under Way in West

PRODUCTION work on "Cinderella's Twin," a new starring vehicle for Viola Dana, is well under way at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood, Calif. The cast is now virtually complete, and the company, directed by Dallas M. Fitzgerald is rapidly proceeding with the camera work on several interior sets that were constructed with a special regard for the requirements of the production's unusual plot and story.

"Cinderella's Twin" was written by Luther Reed, and is the first of four original stories sold by him to Metro recently. Another of the four, "White Ashes," is also under production with an all-star cast. The new Dana vehicle has for its theme the novel idea of a pretty little kitchen maid who is lured into a band of crooks and compelled to take part in a series of robberies quite against her will and inclination. With a kitchen maid as its "Cinderella's Twin" has a whimsical twist, which shows Miss Dana's abilities for fun making in the delightful piquant characterization of Connie McGill. Wallace MacDonald will be Miss Dana's leading man.

Lloyd Hamilton in "The Simp," a new Mermiad comedy released by Educational Exchanges

Following the news of the termination of the contract between Marshall Neilan and Marion Fairfax, the well-known writer, comes the announcement from the Marshall Neilan studio that the producer has closed with the author for a new arrangement covering a period of years.

Under the new contract Miss Fairfax will prepare the scenarios of the next four Marshall Neilan productions, which will be released by First National. After that Miss Fairfax enters into a working arrangement with Mr. Neilan in the production of Marion Fairfax Productions. These pictures will feature the work of the author and will be original stories or scenarios based on stories that have already been published in national magazines.

Eva Novak Feature to be Released Oct. 25

Eva Novak, long a screen comedy favorite, has completed her first big picture, a Universal special attraction, from the pen of Edgar Wallace and directed by Stuart Paton, under the title "Wanted at Headquarters." As its name implies, it is a crook drama.

In addition to being Eva Novak's first appearance as a star, and her first big picture with Universal, "Wanted at Headquarters" marks the return to the Universal fold of the director, Stuart Paton. He long was an important figure in the Universal directorial staff, but during the past two years has occupied his time with outside pictures.

The picture willl be released on October 25th.

Fox Issues Press Book on "The Tiger's Cub"

A sixteen-page press book for exploitation of Pearl White in "Tiger's Cub" is now being distributed to exhibitors by Fox Film branch managers. The press book is described as being especially effective and which goes a long way toward helping exhibitors put this picture over "big."

The most important announcement in the season's activities of Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser is their statement that they have secured the direction of the magnificent theatre in the New Ambassador Hotel as the world's premier place for all forthcoming First National attractions.

The theatre is to be the last word in luxury. The well-known scenic artist, Joseph Urban, will paint the curtain and lay plans for scenic equipment. The orchestra, which is to be a chamber musical organization with a predominance of stringed instruments, will be under the direction of one of America's foremost composers and leaders. The foremost concert artists are to be engaged from time to time, and already the names of Carolina White and Orville Harold are mentioned as features of the opening night.

The opening is to be the crowning social event in Los Angeles history. The seat sale for the first night will be announced soon. Tickets will be $20.00 for each seat, states First National. After the opening night the prices of seats will range to $1.50 top, with every seat reserved. They will be sold two weeks in advance.

Realart Finishes "Her First Elopement"

Wanda Hawley, Realartist, spent several days in restful quiet after a "romantic elopement" on a millionaire's yacht. Of course Miss Hawley did not really elope, but it is about an affair of this character that the scenes of "Her First Elopement" are based. Work on this picture has been completed.

First National Enrolls Many

"AN outstanding feature of last week's convention at Kansas City is the reported landslide of exhibitors enrolling as holders of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., says First National in a statement just issued. R. L. Pramer, recently elected president of the Nebraska State Exhibitors League, reported, according to the First National statement, that Omaha and suburbs, for example, had gone one hundred per cent Associated First National by the absorption of the whole quota of franchises allotted to that division; and similar figures were reported, it is said, by other prominent exhibitors attending the convention.

An important social feature of the gathering was furnished by the banquet given by Associated First national at the Hotel Baltimore on the Tuesday of convention week. Stanley Chambers of the Palace Theatre, Wichita, Kansas, acted as chairman and toastmaster and introduced R. G. Liggett, president of the Kansas State Exhibitors Association and Associated First National Franchise holder for the Gene Gauntier Theatre in Kansas City, Kansas. Mr. Liggett commended the franchise and First National pictures, which he characterized as well worth the price paid for them.

Frank L. Newman, president of the Newman Theatre Company of Kansas City, Mo., was the next speaker and was followed by Jack Truitt, Sedalia, Mo.; Charles T. Sears, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri; M. B. Shanberg, managing director of the Midland Circuit of Theatres, and M. Van Pragg, secretary of the Kansas Exhibitors Association and of the National Association.

Mr. Shanburg recommended a "live-and-let-live" policy to be adopted by the men in the industry and stated as his belief that gatherings such as this First National banquet are of special value in enabling exhibitors and exchange men to become better acquainted and so lead to a better understanding.

J. D. Williams, manager of Associated First National, in an informal address said in part: "The men who originated and founded First National did so because they were dissatisfied with the methods and lack of method employed by certain film companies. They were heartily tired of the unfair kind of deals that were being handed to them. They were men who knew the danger to the industry from such methods. These men had millions of dollars invested in theatres and they wanted to protect their interests. They formed an organization which is based on mutual interest and principles. The franchises held by big exhibitors are identical with those held by the smaller exhibitor. They do not make fish of one and fowl of the other.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven have made "Twin Beds" for First National

"If you are an Associated First National franchise holder that organization belongs in part to you. Its board of directors is elective, and itself in turn selects an executive committee and this in turn appoints a manager. You have a voice in all this. All these men can be removed on short notice. In short, Associated First National is a cooperatve proposition in which you have a personal interest and share.

"Our source of picture supply is absolutely secure. Our pictures are bought in the open market, and no matter how hard rivals may try they never can close the market so long as brains exist. Independent stars and independent producers make pictures for Associated First National. It is our aim to encourage more stars and more producers to be their masters. To work for themselves, to break away from monopolistic dictation. In this we have succeeded and are succeeding."

Knoblock Joins Paramount

Comes Here from England and Will Study Methods of Screen Writing

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has received a cablegram from Edward Knoblock, famous dramatist, stating that Mr. Knoblock has sailed for New York, where he will enter the new $2,000,000 studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and learn the technique of writing for the screen. Mr. Knoblock, who is author of "One," the current Belasco success, and numerous other plays in which Francis Starr has appeared, will write an original story for Paramount Pictures while here and assist in its production. Paramount announces, working in close collaboration with the direction and the continuity writer and supervising the details of the production.

Mr. Knoblock's announcement of his coming to America is timed with the departure for Hollywood today of Sir Gilbert Parker, the well known novelist, who is going to the Lasky studio to learn motion picture technique an to write original stories for Paramount Pictures.

"Sleuth" Series to Pioneer

Pioneer to Release Series Based on Famous Nick Carter Stories

THE much-talked of and extensively advertised Nick Carter stories have been acquired by the Pioneer Film Corporation for the entire United States and Canada.

The deal which has brought these famous Nick Carter pictures to the Pioneer, was closed by M. H. Hoffman, vice-president and general manager of the Pioneer Film Corporation, and John J. Glavey, representing the Broadwell Productions, Inc., of which enterprise Robert B. Broadwell is president.

In making public the announcement of the acquisition of the Nick Carter series of 15 pictures, Mr. Hoffman characterized the deal as one of the most important that has been made in some time, inasmuch as hundreds of inquiries regarding the series have been received from exhibitors in all parts of the country and unusual interest is being centered on the series.

Pioneer has issued the following statement in connection with the deal:

"The name of Nick Carter has meant a great deal to two generations of American readers. It stands for a good, clean, swiftly-moving detective story, which has an unqualified appeal to man, woman or child, and it has been truly said that no character has ever lent greater possibilities to the cinema than the famous Nick.

"Needless to say, every possible care has been exercised in the production of the Nick Carter two-reelers, and in every instance crime is punished as it should be.

"Some idea of the demand for the Nick Carter series can be gleamed from the fact that Street & Smith Corporation, publishers of the Nick Carter books, in a statement just issued, show that over thirty million copies of Nick Carter stories have been sold, and the demand is just as great to-day as it ever was."

No Villian in Metro Drama

Elaborate Settings Also Feature of "White Ashes," Rosen Directing

A VILLAINLESS drama, with throbs of the eternal triangle developed in a most unusual manner, is the distinct novelty that Luther Reed has prepared for followers of motion pictures in his newest original screen story, "White Ashes," now under production at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood, Calif., with an all-star cast.

That background of villainy accepted traditionally as being necessary to set off the virtues of the hero and heroine has been submerged by Mr. Reed in this fascinating story of social upsets and gilded love. Its swift action and unexpected situations as the country boy is projected from his prosaic job of soda clerk in a drug store into the maelstrom of feverish gayety among the beauties of the stage pique the curiosity and arouse wonder as to how he will guide his stormy career without arousing the antagonism of what in an ordinary play would be the villain.

But not alone in its villainless feature is "White Ashes" an unusual production, it is said, for it will have the added novelty of presenting a series of elaborate settings of a variety never before attempted, according to Metro. These "sets" were prepared by D. Anthony Tauszky, portrait painter, in accordance with a "camera color chart." Every scene is painted with a view to the scientific requirements of the color eye of the camera, states Metro.

Strong Cast for Hodkinson

Hugo Ballin's Production Is Due for Early Release by Hodkinson

THE first Hugo Ballin independent production, which the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has scheduled for early release, under the working title of "The Honorable Gentleman" has an "extraordinarily strong cast," in the opinion of the Hodkinson organization.

The line-up as reported by W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is as follows:

"Rockcliffe Fellowes will be seen in the leading role. Mr. Fellowes is a great favorite with the theatre-going public and has been seen to good advantage in a number of Goldwyn productions in the past. He has also played opposite Constance Talmadge and is one of the foremost figures among the male leads appearing before the camera today.

"Mabel Ballin, another very popular artist, is seen as the little blind girl, a most sympathetic role to which her talent and beauty do full justice. Togo Yamamato, a successful actor both in his native Japan and in America plays the central role, and it is promised that his work in this production will be a revelation to those who have seen him in the past. Such praise as this carries much weight when one takes into consideration the fact that he has been entrusted with many important roles, prominent among which was the part of the Chinese Prince in 'The River's End.'"

"Nellie Filmore, one of the greatest character women on the silversheet, who is also appearing in a current Broadway success, plays the part of the blind girl's Aunt with all her accustomed skill. Little Charlie Fang, who has been seen for the past six years in many Mack Sennett productions, is cast as "The Hatchetman" and proves himself to be probably the most consummate Chinese actor on the screen.

Announce Curren Releases

Thomas Meighan and Dorothy Gish Are Starred in Paramount Issues

THE Paramount release schedule for September 26 includes two productions which already have had successful pre-release engagements in several of the largest cities, including New York. These are Thomas Meighan in "Civilian Clothes," a Hugh Ford production, and Dorothy Gish in "Little Miss Rebellion."

That the picture version of "Civilian Clothes" is better than the stage production, seems to be the concensus to those who have seen both the film and play in which Thurston Hall and William Courtney were seen in the leading role. Here, indeed, they said was an ideal role for Thomas Meighan.

Thompson Buchanan, one of America's best known playwrights, was the author of "Civilian Clothes," which was presented by Oliver Morosco at the Morosco theatre, New York, September 12, 1919, and ran there far into the next spring.

The task of adapting the play to the screen was entrusted to the capable hands of Clara Beranger, and the picture was the last directed in this countrty by Hugh Ford before he left for England to become Director-General of the Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd.

Supporting Mr. Meighan are Martha Mansfield, who was seen opposite John Barrymore in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde;" Marie Shotwell, Frank Losee, Alfred Hickman, Warren Cook and Maude Turner Gordon.

"Little Miss Rebellion" was written by Harry Carr, editor of D. W. Griffith's scenario department, who, besides being a newspaper and magazine writer of prominence, was the author of "I'll Get Him Yet," one of Miss Gish's previous Paramount starring vehicles. The scenario was written by Wells Hastings. George Fawcett, veteran actor of both stage and screen, was the director..

Ralph Graves is Miss Gish's leading man and George Seigman, Riley Hatch, and Marie Burke also have prominent parts.

"Legion" Convention in International News

Excellent pictures of the recent big "doughboy reunion" in Cleveland are announced for release in International News 66, are contained in International News No. 66, released October 1. New cameramen attending the convention of the American Legion "shot" the former warriors in a series of inspiring activities, including the grand parade in which 20,000 veterans of the Great War marched once again shoulder to shoulder to the strains of the patriotic airs that inspired them to victory two years ago.

Special Service Section on

"So Long Letty"

THESE Special Service Sections are written with the purpose of suggesting to exhibitors how to get the most out of pictures that they have booked. They are prepared after studying the picture and the best way of exploiting them. Won't you let us know any use that you made of suggestions printed here and the original ideas that you have used in putting over this picture?

General Summary of the Picture

"SO LONG LETTY" is an adaptation of the real stage hit of a few seasons past in which Walter Catlett and Charlotte Greenwood were starred, being the story of two married people apparently mismated and living in adjoining houses who decide to trade life partners, or rather the two husbands conspiring so that such an arrangement may be brought about.

It is of course a purely farcical idea. On the stage it was very much burlesqued. In the picture less resort to eccentricity has been made, carefully selected types having the four principal roles, same being T. Roy Barnes, Walter Hiers, Colleen Moore and Grace Darmond.

The cast therefore may be justly termed all-star. T. Roy Barnes is a newcomer to the screen, making his first appearance of importance in "Scratch My Back" and registering as a distinct screen personality. Walter Hiers is as well known as any comedian in films today who has not been starred. Colleen Moore and Grace Darmond are both players of reputation and ability.

In point of opportunity all four roles are about equal. Mr. Barnes is a husband who likes "class," a gay time, etc., and is presented as something of a sport. His wife, Miss Moore's role, is a fine housekeeper and cook but inclined to be dowdy and not at all interested in her husband's ideas of life's pleasures. Mr. Hiers is the opposite of Mr. Barnes, in the role he portrays and has also a fondness for good things to eat, especially since his principal food at home has been sardines. Grace Darmond, who has the part of Mr. Hiers' wife, is presented as a butterfly, an impractical gadabout.

Each husband sees in his neighbor's wife what he believes to be the ideal qualities. They agree that all are mismated and plan to have matters arranged to their mutual satisfaction. Each husband is to woo the other's wife with the idea of making the transfer agreeable all around.

The wives become informed of the bargain and plan a counterplot in which each wife is to take the other's husband for a week, ostensibly on trial but really for the purpose of curing the men of their idea of trading wives, by presenting themselves in an unfavorable light.

Danger that the complications arising from such a plot might make the production suggestive have been carefully avoided. In addition to the sequences having to do with the theme, there have been interpolated a number of bathing-girl scenes which are pretentious. Also a cabaret scene of real caliber has been used. All of these have little to do with the real story but give the production considerable class.

"So Long Letty" was directed by Al Christie. The original production was classed a "farce with music," and was staged by Oliver Morosco.

The accessories trat may be obtained from your exchange are two styles of one-sheet posters, three, six and 24-sheet stands, window cards, photographs both small and large showing interesting scenes from the picture, squeegees in sets of twelve, announcement slides, music cues, press book, heralds, throwaways, oil paintings, thirty by forty inches, three to a set, mats for one to four column newspaper displays and cuts for from one to three column use.

Exploitation and Presentation

"So Long Letty" is an exploitation picture or rather a presentation picture where the manner of putting it over should be so elaborate that the presentation will resolve itself into exploitation.

The presentation angle naturally is the music of the original stage farce from which the picture was adapted.

The principal song hit of the original was the title number "So Long Letty" sung first by Charlotte Greenwood and then used at various times throughout the production. Other song numbers that were popular were, "On a Beautiful Beach," "All the Comforts of Home," "That Rushin' Rag," "To Hear Your Voice" and "Here Come the Married Men."

It is suggested that all these numbers be used in presenting the picture both vocally and in the instrumental numbers.

The opportunity is presented for your musical director to write an overture score with "So Long Letty" and the other song numbers used as a basis. If he cannot or will not attempt this go to one of your local musical celebrities and have him write the composition and then play his work up from a local talent angle.

Select such of the songs as are best fitted for solo numbers and present them as near to the way they were sung in the original production as possible.

For instance "So Long Lettey" was sung by Miss Greenwood with every effort made to get comedy from the number. The singer who is eccentric in personality, being extremely tall and slim was attired in a "slouchy" kitchen gown, with hair disheveled and run over shoes. Select a singer who can and will make up to the way Miss Greenwood looked in putting over the song and announce what you are doing on the program. Make the number an impersonation event.

There is an opportunity for a prologue in a bathing girls' scene from the picture itself.

Have your artist build and paint the side of an ordinary summer street car with the sliding curtains of plain white muslin down on six of the openings between the posts upholding the roof.

Back of this "car" place sufficient light so that with the house and stage lights off any figure standing behind the curtains will be visible. Select six dancers who have good forms and parade them in front of the "car" drop and through an opening that will represent an entrance to the car where one of the curtains is up. Have your dancers clad in the latest summer togs with fancy bathing suits carried in bags. The girls will pass through the opening and distribute themselves back of the curtains, their forms showing to the audience. Here they disrobe from their street clothes and don bathing suits after which they again make their appearance.

With the girls on send six chorus men in from the wings with the double sextet singing "On a Beautiful Beach" one of the song numbers of "So Long Letty" and with a little dance following. The degree of "exposure" for the shadows must be determined by the individual exhibitor. Lighting effects can be used to advantage. A display of the girls gowns before they change to the bathing suits and some posing after the change would also work in well.

Full details for staging a number of this sort may be obtained from an inspection of the scene in the film to which we have referred.

Since contests are still very popular the prologue idea may be linked up with a "Venus" contest.

Arrange preferably in conjunction with a newspaper for the awarding of prizes for the best formed girls who will present themselves back of the screen we have mentioned and disrobe—to fleshings of course. Since any contest is of greatest value where the audiences select the winners you can arrange to leave the selection of the best model to the public if you desire. You might also plan the affair so no one would know who has been entered with only the winner's names announced after the event and in that way create a lot of curiosity for the prologue providing you are in a city of sufficiently small size where personalities count. The cooperation of the newspaper with cuts and stories about the various contestants is another angle that should be productive of results.

Outside Exploitation

For lobby exploitation, we would not use anything of an elaborate nature confining our efforts to stills from the production, one and three sheets, the oil paintings available from the exchange and perhaps some novelty cards written in a humorous and slangy vein about the production.

For these suggested cards something like the following would get attention. "If your wife insisted on serving sardines as a breakfast food, wouldn't you want to swap her off for your next door neighbor's better half?"

"Tommy slept in the bathtub, Harry in the kitchen when each had a wife and half of a comfortable bed unoccupied. Why? They agreed to swap wives but the wives couldn't see it."

"Which would you prefer as a wife? A humdinger of a looker whose pedigree as a cook never got better than opening sardines for breakfast or a housekeeper de luxe who looked like the last rose of summer three hundred and sixty-six days out of the year?"

If we were going to use 24 sheet stands we would select only those showing the bathing scenes.

Newspaper Advertising

This is what we term a "newspaper campaign" picture for it permits the use of something besides stereotyped announcement displays and commonplace readers.

In framing our display copy we would begin with good head cuts of the four players using novelty captions under each one something on the order of the following:

For the cut of Walter Hines—He loved to eat and all his wife could deliver in the culinary line was sardines. No wonder he longed for an old fashioned wife who would cater to his insides!

For the cut of T. Roy Barnes—He said he loved class, the gay white lights, Kelly pool and didn't give a hang about roast beef, au grautin potatoes and strawberry short cake which was where his frowsy little wife was ace high, so he planned to swap a real cook for the fanciest clothes rack in the block. For the cut of Colleen Moore—Housekeeping was her middle name. Cooking was her pet hobby. Making beds was a pleasure, but hubby didn't appreciate anything but glad rags and the srimmy dance.

For Grace Darmond's cut—She looked like the wax figure in the dry goods store. As a model for a magazine cover she was a hit. But hubby wanted a cook, a word that was left out of her vocabulary.

For selling talk we would mention the name of the original production, the bathing girl sequences, promise a lot of farce comedy fun, with a line or two that would give them the "swapping partners" idea.

If you make your presentation pretentious then that angle should be played up above all others. Vocal or instrumental numbers in which the music of the original selections are used should be given attention.

Catch Lines For Advertising Purposes

A real farce comedy idea, developed in a purely farcical style by a cast of farceurs who miss no opportunities.

How two fellows swapped wives that didn't want to be traded.

The story of two wives who had husbands that wanted a change of pasture.

How mismates that were became aware that maybe the best apples grew on the trees in their own back yard.

Lots of pep and real comedy back of a clever idea made into six reels of just entertainment.

Lots of people think they picked out the wrong mate until they get a look into the other fellow's family closet.

Thumnail Snyopsis of "So Long Letty"

Story—Farce comedy development of a theme that has to do with two husbands who determine to trade wives.
Players—T. Roy Barnes, Walter Hiers, Colleen Moore and Grace Darmond, with a bevy of pretty bathing girls.
Author—Elmer Harris and Oliver Morosco. Adapted from the farce with music produced by Oliver Morosco with Walter Catlett and Charlotte Greenwood.
Locale—A suburb of a city with the principal scenes transpiring in or about two bungalows next door to each other.
Director—Al Christie.

October 25 has been definitely selected by Robertson-Cole as the date for its special premier showing to the trade of "Kismet," the super-special production, starring Otis Skinner, and based on the famous play by Edward Knoblock, in which Mr. Skinner appeared on the American stage for three consecutive years. The Astor grand ball room will be the scene of the presentation

Louis J. Gasnier, who directed "Kismet," which was produced at the new Robertson-Cole property in Hollywood this summer, being close to four months in the making, is now in New York engaged in the final cutting of "Kismet." The production is to be dustributed soon after the trade showing.

Robertson-Cole has selected for "Kismet" the descriptive line, "The most magnificent production ever recorded in the history of motion pictures," and those who have been privileged to preview the production assert that it rises completely to this level. "Kismet" is to be distributed by Robertson-Cole as the most notable the fall list of "only super-specials," which is the regime upon which Robertson-Cole has entered.

Says Chicago District Is Most Optimistic

The prosperity of the present and immediate past has had its effect in bringing about an attitude of marked optimism in Chicago film circles, according to Manager William Aschmann of Pathe's Chicago branch, who visited the home office recently.

"The exhibitors in my territory," said Mr. Aschmann, "have come through the Summer with flying colors. In looking ahead, great significance is attached to the fact that this year no falling off whatsoever was noted in box office returns during the months of July and August, an unprecedented thing."

Mary Minter Will Have Two Directors

Beginning immediately Realart is to inaugurate a "two-director" system in the production of Mary Miles Minter features. Chester Franklin and Thomas Heffron been signed to direct Miss Minter alternately. One man will be shooting a picture, while the other is preparing another story. When number one finishes, Miss Minter will get a short rest and time to gather her costumes. Then work will start under director number two. Director number one will devote his entire time to the cutting and titling of the film first completed. After this is done he, in turn, will take over a new story and prepare it for the screen. Then when number two finishes his play, number one will be ready to start again and soon.

Holubar Finishes A Big Series

Dorothy Phillips Has Strong Support in Last of Series

R. H. COCHRANE, vice-president of Universal, has just announced the early release of "Once to Every Woman," a Universal-Jewel production, starring Dorothy Phillips, and directed by Allen Holubar. It is the last of a series of super-productions made for Universal by Miss Phillips and her husband director.

Begun last winter, many months were taken in its production. Following Miss Phillips' great war success, "The Heart of Humanity," and "The Right to Happiness," the producers faced a difficult task in making "Once to Every Woman" the superior of the star's former success, states Universal.

Every facility of the big picture-making plant at Universal City was placed at the disposal of Allen Holubar, according to Universal. He was assured that no expense would be spared to make the picture the most remarkable one turned out by Universal. This plan was carried out so extensively that more than $100,000 was spent on sets alone, it is declared. The more costly of them was the reproduction of the stage, the boxes and the lower floor of the great Metropolitan Opera House of New York.

The story is described by Universal as being "a simple one, full of homilies and gripping interest. It is the chronicle of a village girl, petted and pampered because of a wonderful voice, whose heart is frozen by ambition and who cruelly neglects her family to chase the bubble of fame. On the threshold of her operatic career she loses her voice.

"Her disillusionment, the return to her home and the chastening she undergoes before waking to the meaning of true happiness is said to afford Miss Phillips the supreme role of her career. There is not an emotion in the range of womanhood that she does not have to portray in 'Once to Every Woman.'

"She first is seen as a care-free school-girl, vivacious and charming. Later she has to portray the part of a young woman forging ahead in her chosen art, and rising to the call of her music teachers. Then she takes the difficult part of a successful prima donna, surrounded with the bounty of success and matching her wits with countless admirers. Finally she is the broken-hearted woman, rich in experience, but with a nature at last attuned to the simple pleasures of small-town existence."

The story is from Holubar's own pen, and was written especially for Miss Phillips. He is said to have built it with an eye to the especial screen accomplishments of his wife. He also helped in writing the scenario, co-operating with Olga Linek Scholl. The action of the story varies from a small American village to Milan, Italy, to the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, and to the picturesque country estates on Long Island.

In "Once to Every Woman" Miss Phillips is supported by a strong cast. Opposite her is Robert Andersen, the young Danish actor. Others are Mrs. Margaret Mann, who plays the role of the mother; Rudolph Valentino, as a young Italian nobleman; William Ellingford, as the aged father of the ambitious girl; Emily Chichester and Eilinor Field, as her two sisters, as well as Mary Wise, Dan Crimmins, Rosa Gore and Frank Elliott in strong roles.

"Once to Every Woman" marks the latest step in a series of increasingly successful pictures she has made under the Universal banner, most of them under the direction of her husband, Holubar. Among the notable photo-dramas in which she has been starred by Universal have been "Destiny," "Hell Morgan's Girl," "Paid in Advance," "The Heart of Humanity" and "The Right to Happiness."

It is expected that "Once to Every Woman" will be presented to the New York public in one of the leading Broadway theatres in a week or so.

De Havens in Former Roles

Will Make Screen Version of Past Comedy Hit "The Girl in the Taxi"

THE first comedy in the series starring Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, to be produced by Mr. De Haven under the new contract made by him and his eastern affiliation, the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, with First National, is to be the old popular stage favorite "The Girl in the Taxi." By the time the picturization of "Twin Beds" is first presented to the public—the release is scheduled for October 18—the star will be well along in the production of this no less successful and taking comedy hit.

Even before he signed with the releasing organization for the big new series, Mr. De Haven, it will be recalled, declared his purpose to confine his attention in future to the production of great stage successes exclusively. In procuring the picture rights to "The Girl in the Taxi" he has obtained a piece which not only created a furore among lovers of high-class comedy in every section of the country, and which is peculiarly adapted to purposes of picturization, but one in the presentation of which he will be quite at home. Indeed, he is merely renewing an acquaintance with an old and faithful friend.

Mr. De Haven created the leading male role in the stage production but his contribution to its success neither began nor ended there. On the Astor theatre program of October 24, 1910, when "The Girl in the Taxi" launched forth on its career of triumph, appeared the announcement, "Produced under the Personal Supervision of Mr. Carter De Haven." Beneath this was the line, "During the Play Specialties Will Be Introduced by Mr. De Haven."

Coming on the heels of "Twin Beds," whose reception by the First National officials was so enthusiastic that they insisted that Mr. De Haven begin at once the production of further comedies, the filming of "The Girl in the Taxi," it is expected, will mark a new era in motion picture production.

"All Soul's Eve," Adapted From Anne Crawford Flexner's Drama

PRODUCTION work has been started at the West Coast Realart studios on "All Soul's Eve" with Mary Miles Minter, under the direction of Chester Franklin. This is a screen version of the Anne Crawford Flexner stage play of last season. The task of placing it in scenario form was assigned to Elmer Harris.

"All Soul's Eve" deals with an old Irish superstition that once a year the spirits of the departed return to earth to advise and counsel those left behind. Nora O'Hallahan, an Irish colleen, becomes nursemaid in the home of Roger Heath, a sculpter, looking after his young son, Peter. Mrs. Heath dies and Nora, who has become very much attached to Peter, now has sole care of him.

On "All Soul's Eve" Peter, who is ill, calls for his mother. In a dream, Nora sees the spirit of the mother return and try to ease the suffering of Peter and arouse Roger, all without success. When Nora awakes she hastens to do these things, saving Peter's life. It is a part of an Irish legend, says Realart, that if a child recognizes its mother when she returns in spirit, the spirit may enter the body of a person who will always love the child as her own.

Nora is so inspired by the spirit of Peter's mother that she gradually comes to resemble her, and her devotion awakens a new love in Roger Heath.

In the dual role of Nora and Mrs. Heath, Mary Miles Minter is said to find a real challenge to her dramatic ability. The supporting cast includes Jack Holt, Carmen Philips, Clarence Geldart, Fanny Midgely and Lottie Williams.

Kendall-Chambers at Work

First Kendall Production Based on Chambers' Story Started in East

WORK on the first of the Robert W. Chambers stories is to be produced by Messmore Kendall and the author at the Kendall Studios, Astoria, L. I., has been started, Goldwyn Pictures announces. It is a picturization of one of the novelist's romances, "Cardigan," a story of American Revolutionary days in different vein from Mr. Chambers' recent successes. It is being directed by John W. Noble, who directed the first Messmore Kendall Production, "The Song of the Soul," starring Vivian Martin, which will be released soon through Goldwyn.

Mr. Kendall and Mr. Chambers selected Madeline Lubetty, one of the beauties of Ziegfeld's "Midnight Frolic," to act the role of the coquettish Marie Hamilton. This marks her first appearance on the screen.

The role of Cardigan will be played by William Collier, Jr., the adopted son of the famous comedian. Betty Carpenter has been selected for the role of Silverheels. Others in the cast are Charles Graham, Dick Lee, Frank Montgomery, Colin Campbell, Jere Austin, William Pike, John Dillon, Florence Short, Hattie Delaro and Eleanor Griffith.

"Cardigan" is the first of a series of Robert W. Chambers novels which will be translated to the screen by the novelist in association with Mr. Kendall. The productions will be released through Goldwyn. "Cardigan" was selected by Mr. Kendall and the author as the first Chambers picture because the story lends itself readily to screen adaptation, it is stated, and because of the picturesqueness of the scene and the dramatic strength of the story.

Many of the scenes of the photoplay are being taken at Mr. Kendall's home at Dobbs Ferry which was Washington's headquarters during much of the military action about New York in Revolutionary days

Ina Claire Finishes Picture

"Polly with a Past" Now Being Edited; to Be Released by Metro

INA CLAIRE has finished her work before the camera in "Polly With a Past," Metro's special picturization of the Belasco stage success by George Middleton and Guy Bolton, and is again devoting herself exclusively to her stage work in "The Gold Diggers."

For seven weeks "Polly With a Past" has been engaging the attention of Miss Claire and her supporting cast. With the completion of camera work on the novel and striking set representing the Salt Air Pavilion of Salt Lake City, work on the picture was finished and the picture turned over to the cutters.

"Polly with a Past" in its screen version tells a somewhat amplified story of the stage play, in which Polly, a maid in the household of two young bachelors, is prevailed upon to impersonate a French adventuress in order that a young man may gain the affection, though presenting himself as an object of salvation, of a young lady who is interested only in what is called "saving souls." Polly, who is in reality the daughter of a clergyman, earning money to go to Paris and study music, enters so thoroughly into the spirit of the adventure that she not only shocks everyone with whom she comes in contact, but succeeds in making the young man fall dead in love with her.

ABOUT PLAYERS

ROCKLIFFE FELLOWES, to be seen in the leading masculine role of Hugo Ballin's first independent production "An Honourable Gentleman," believes in surrounding himself with a bit of atmosphere upon his own initiative. The characterization is one of a medico, the expert who restores the eyesight to the girl who is beloved by an aristocratic Chinaman, his former collegemate.

In order to perform the operation upon the eyes, convincingly, and with the proper amount of quiet dignity. Fellowes visited a famous Eye, Ear and Nose Hospital, and through the influence of a friend, was permitted to be present at several operations.

His observations, it is believed, are responsible for the realism and technical correctness noticeable in his interpretation of the rather difficult role, but this painstaking care on the part of Mr. Fellowes is undoubtedly responsible for the fact that he has never been in an unsuccessful picture, his most recent work having been with Constance Talmadge, Norma Talmadge and Elaine Hammerstein in widely praised features.

Added to the already long list of Fox stars, has been the name of Eve Balfour, placed under long time contract negotiated by George L. Clarke, formerly a screen juvenile, who for the past few months has devoted his time to representing artists of the screen, and is now upon the second month of a business identified by his own name.

Two members of George D. Baker's "Proxies" company, will finish their work this week, i. e., William H. Tooker and Jack Crosby.

Helen Ferguson has done more or less of her share in the film world. Now, with a said to be beautiful sister, just out of school, she is introducing the young one into picture work, bringing the screen debutante from Chicago to Los Angeles.

Two stage celebrities making their screen debut in Willard King Bradley's "Idle Hands," are Mlle. Dazie, last seen in "Aphrodite," and a former "Follies" star—also Ted Lewis, he of the world-famed saxaphone, supported by his equally famous jazz band. If film could only sound!

Helen Dahl, with the experience of having been head of the Welfare Department of the Cable Census Office, during the war, is filling her first professional engagement since the close of the office, in Billie Burke's new picture for Paramount, "The Education of Elizabeth."

Barbara Castleton shrinks away from "The Branding Iron," a Reginald Barker production for Goldwyn

Madge Bellamy, who supported William Gillette in "Dear Brutus." will be leading woman for Douglas MacLean, in "One a Minute."

Gordon Standing should prove "quite the type" for a doctor, lawyer or merchant. The doctor part he can prove. Recently his friend, and fellow player, Wilton Lackaye, suffered an accident, a painful "something wrong" with his ankle. When it developed it was only broken, Gordon Standing was selected to administer the anaesthetic. Mr. Lackaye knew that Gordon was efficient, for hadn't they been on location together for seven weeks? They will both appear in the screen version of Ralph Connor's "The Foreigner." in which Mr. Lackaye and Gaston Glass share honors, playing father and son. Being on location in Canada, in close association, Gordon Standing learned that Wilton Lackaye's real name is William; Wilton Lackaye learned that Gordon Standing is a graduate physician and among other things, can "set bones." They both learned and believe that Gaston Glass is French, and now maintain they never thought he was anything else.

Frances Eldgridge, one of the well-balanced cast said to be the "make up" of "The Foreigner," Dominion Film Company's picturization of Ralph Connors story by the same name, was originally engaged by director Henry MacRae, for an ingenue. A dainty blonde, five feet four, she will be remembered for her work in B. A. Rolfe's "Madonnas and Men." "Wings of Pride," with Olive Tell "A Good Woman, with Gail Kane," and then some. Arriving in Winnipeg, on location, however, Mr. MacRae took another look at Miss Eldgridge and requested her to assume a role of more seriousness, offering, he said, wider scope for her talents. The results, to both director and player, as Ernest Shipman, production Chief of "Dominion," are said to be satisfactory, indeed.

Miss Virginia Lee, who was described by the world famed artist, Howard Chandler Christy, as "the ideal Christy girl," will be seen in an important role in "Three Women Loved Him," the work for which she has now completed. Her next engagement, an acceptance of one, between three, has not yet been decided upon.

An important male role in Hope Hampton's production, "The Better Way," was given to Percy Marmont, who was the choice of both the star and the director, and author of the story. During the course of filming, director Gilbert was so impressed with Mr. Marmont's work that when the original scenes for the story were all completed, it was decided to add several developments in which Marmont would figure. Quite a tribute paid the actor by the star and director.

James Morrison, who recently completed work in "Sowing the Wind," with Anita Stewart, will be seen in the leading masculine role opposite Jeane Paige in "Black Beauty."

ABOUT DIRECTORS

WE wish to congratulate David M. Hartford, not only upon his splendid work in "Nomads of the North," but that with his screen credit he identifies himself as a member of The Motion Picture Directors' Association.

"Is it any wonder," is the query of Edward Sloman, director of May Allison, "that so many tourists who come to Southern California want to see the motion picture studios, when it is a fact that 85% of the pictures exhibited in the 16,000 theatres in the United States are made in Los Angeles and environs?" The motion picture industry now tops all the California industries with an investment of $150,000,000—nearly twice the volume of its nearest competitor—oil, with $87,000,000 invested.

Arthur Berthelet, Bessie Love's director, with his star and some members of the company, found it necessary to journey into Arizona for the filming of the great groups of cattle on the ranges and other scenes requiring the rugged background according to the story of the photoplay, based on "Penny of Tophill Trail," the next new picture in which Bessie Love will be seen.

Frances Eldridge, who will appear in "The Foreigner" for First National release

"Curiosity once killed a cat." Now, after many years of believing the old saying was not based upon fact, director Wally Van is convinced the proverbial cat was over-indulged in finding things out. Recently Mr. Van carried advertising space in this paper. The copy left the reader, "guessing," as it were, and from the interested inquiries of friends and varied investigators, he has come to the conclusion that curiosity is a most deadly weapon. Upon meeting an old business associate he was asked "What is it you know about pictures that I don't know?"—and Wally Van, always politely courteous, felt it not in order to quote the "cat" adage, so he resorted to a popular retort, originally credited to Eddie Cantor—"You'd be surprised." Now, curious masculine reader "Who was the man?"

Ida May Park, among leading feminine directors, lays down a peculiar law to the producer of motion pictures. She says: Keep extreme, modish dresses "out," if the picture wishes to enjoy enduring value and earning power. And this, from a woman!

George Everett, director of "The Crimson Cross," a Fanmark production

Richard Stanton has returned to New York, after spending three months in Europe, investigating producing conditions in Italy, France and England.

Next week it may be the pleasure of this column to announce what has occasioned the return, to New York, of T. Hayes Hunter, whose previous trip from the coast was to witness the opening of his masterpiece, "Earthbound." Would that he had another picture like it tucked away in his trunk. But that would be asking a lot.

Jack Dillon, and his newly acquired camera-man, Gilbert Warrenton, have been spending their time most judiciously making "tests" and becoming thoroughly familiar with what they may expect to encounter in making the next feature starring the Realart acquisition, Justine Johnstone. Mr. Dillon made Miss Johnstone's first picture, and is now ready to "shoot" on the second, at the new Famous studio on Long Island.

E. H. Griffith, director of "Three Women Loved Him," has completed the work insofar as retaining the cast is concerned. Mr. Griffith was formerly with Vitagraph, and has encouraging expectations for the "three women"—in the cast and the object of their affections, portrayed by Robert Gordon.

Tribute Paid to Stars Who Passed Beyond

The film colony of Los Angeles, paid a tender and impressive tribute to the memory of its illustrious departed this week, at a memorial service held on "Longacre," perhaps the largest of studio stages. A crowd of players and studio attaches packed the pews that were arranged across the stage by the studio property department and thrilled to reminiscences of Bobbie Harron, Ormer Locklear, Clarine Seymour and Olive Thomas, recalled in a splendid address by William Desmond Taylor. Others remembered in the services were Harold Lockwood, Eric Campbell, John Burton, Fred Mace, Lillian Webster and Charles Gunn. Robert Harron's brother, James, and several other members of his family were present.

Music for the memorial was furnished by a symphony orchestra and the choir of St. Paul's procathedral, the services being conducted by the Rev. Neal Dodd, rector of the Motion Picture People's Church and a committee of the Actor's Association, consisting of Dorothy Farley, A. F. Fitzroy, Mrs. Vin Moore, Joseph J. Dowling, Roy Stewart and Raymond Cannon.

Virginia Fox Engaged for Keaton Comics

Virginia Fox, the dainty little comedy queen whose dimples have been indelibly impressed upon the minds of motion picture fans throughout the country, hereafter will be seen in Metro Keaton comedies.

For Buster Keaton, the merry comedian who never smiles, has selected her from a long list of candidates for honors as his new leading woman.

Tom Douglas, playing opposite Dorothy Gish in "A Cynic Effect"

Jessen's Notes from the West Coast

Jacques Jaccard is making rapid progress in filming the final scenes of his latest story "The Throw Back" at Universal City. Much atmospheric color has been thrown into the picture, being a romance wound around the South American rubber country.

Lon Chaney who is playing one of the principal roles in Tod Browning's "Outside the Law" was a conspicuous figure in San Francisco Chinatown this week.

Morris Schlank who is producing Hank-Mann Comedies announces this week that he will spring some unique surprises in his forth coming Hank-Mann production.

Hank Mann, who is now appearing in his own productions was a visitor at the Majestic theatre, Los Angeles this week. Hank attended the show more for the purpose of obtaining new comedy ideas than for the entertainment it afforded, he said.

William Duncan who is finishing the fifth and sixth episodes of "Fighting Fate" his newest Vitagraph serial will film some shipyard scenes at San Pedro next week.

Rex Ingram has just completed the picturized version of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" from the novel by Vicente Blasco Izanez for Metro. Nearly 12,000 men and women participated in the production.

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

Some of Hal Roach's "Vanity Fair" girls, who will be seen in Pathe Comey releases

Happy Combine Preferred by George Walsh

THOUGH the number of years can still be told in one figure, it was some time ago that George Walsh was an "ever ready" boy, indulging in all the games popular among the children in the neighborhood where he "grew," a neighborhood right in New York City. He was "ever ready" for anything from a show costing ten pins admittance, to a game of baseball. It didn't matter a great deal, either on which team he played, so long as he was out-of-doors and in the midst of strenuous exercise, which in those days he did not realize, was laying a foundation for his famous-to-be athletics.

To spoil a perfectly good day, some times the girls in the neighborhood wanted to "play." And in order to keep in good with the parents, some of them being sisters of the fellows, the boys were forced into an evidence of chivalry, undeveloped, and would drop their masks and ball bats to quiet down for a nice, safe game like "London Bridge."

Picture George Walsh, the daring, all-round athlete being the one to be "caught" in the "bridge," spirited away far enough so the other "kids" couldn't hear, to make his decision: "Which would you rather be—an athlete, with the most expensive accessories, a "sweat blanket," lined with gold, or an actor, and wear wonderful clothes like "King Henry, VIII, and allowed to make love to beautiful ladies in the play?"

That was a pretty hard thing for a growing youngster to decide, and now, after several years as an all-round athlete, and a few years as an actor in motion pictures, George Walsh is still unable to state which he enjoys most, his athletics or his acting. And since there is no strenuous rule in the "motion picture game" demanding immediate decision as to which he would rather do, he will make no decision, but continue to do both. While his athletic abilities were, in the main, responsible for his having become an actor, yet he has learned in the years of his "acting activities," to like acting for the sake of the art.

For a period of months, Mr. Walsh has been a star under William Fox banner. At the termination of his contract, he decided to avoid placing himself under contract until he could be sure he might have a dominating voice in selecting the kind of pictures in which he will play, for he has developed ideas of his own regarding what his followers prefer to see him in. He wants to play in pictures, hereinafter, which not only offer opportunity for his athletic "stunts," but also one to develop his dramatic ability, which, according to his worthy-director-brother, R. A., is predominant. Mr. Walsh firmly believes in answering the demands of the "fans," and that his popularity as an actor has become an asset, is proven by a recent cable received from Havana, Cuba, announcing George Walsh as the winner of the big motion picture popularity contest which La Noche, the largest evening newspaper of that city has been conducting. Mr. Walsh's votes totaled 26,487. Frances Bertini, a well known Italian star, carried off the honors among the feminine competitors, with a vote of 26,215, surpassing Pearl White, who had 24,304.

Mr. Walsh's nearest competitors were William S. Hart, with 25,072 and Wallace Reid, with 22,478. Douglas Fairbanks, Tom Mix, William Farnum and others following.

It is the opinion of George Walsh, that the very best support should surround a star, regardless of his magnitude. And with the kind of pictures he believes in, coupled with his own popularity, he assures us his temporary retirement is but temporary, but it shall remain until he can command that which satisfies him to be what his followers will appreciate to the good of everyone concerned.

Maurice Tourneur Seeker of Young Talent

"BIG industries need young men and young women."

This according to Charles M. Schwab and Frederick A. Vanderslip, as well as other kings of finance.

These names may mean more in the financial world than in the motion picture industry, but what Maurice Tourneur, noted artist-producer of famous film plays, says, has a more pertinent appeal.

"If big business needs young men and women," says Mr. Tourneur, the same applies in screen art." That is why he carefully trains up "young timber" for important posts, contrary to the more prevalent custom among producers, of going outside their own organization for trained people. He looks over the field when in need of new talent, picks a likely subject and then assumes the role of tutor, with gratifying results.

Maurice Tourneur has discovered stars, created wonderful character actors and brought out scenarists and other artists, including cameramen. He takes a nonentity, so far as screen fame is concerned, and the selected one stands a chance of becoming a celebrity under the guidance of the French director, who is responsible for the success of many of his former pupils.

There is Jack Gilbert, for instance, who was a leading juvenile with a talent for writing and directing. In speaking of him Mr. Tourneur explains his method:

"I noticed this boy when he worked in one of my pictures. He had brains. He could act. He was young—and, ambitious. He had the foundation of stagecraft enabling him to recognize dramatic values and screen situations. I let him do a story. He made an excellent script. I predict he will do big things—some day.

"What we need in pictures is youth and brains, just as business clamors for them. Only the young can bring freshness and new color to the screen; imaginative vizualization that makes pictures ever new and interesting. Youngsters have it; so we need them—every day."

Another example cited by Mr. Tourneur is Barbara Bedford, who is playing the lead in his initial Associated Producers picture, "The Last of the Mohicans," by J. Fenimore Cooper. She had never seen a studio until her trip to California, but was one among those waiting on all sides, possessed with art, waiting, crying to be found. Every studio has plenty of talent at hand, but seem afraid to take a chance and let the youths work out a success for themselves, and for the producers."

Using himself as another example Mr. Tourneur describes his own efforts to obtain recognition:

"When I was struggling on the stage, I often dreamed of directing a play, but the chance did not come easily. It was then I decided I would make a picture, somehow, somewhere—and I had supreme confidence in myself. One day my chance came. I made a film. Fortunately, it went over and from that time on I have made pictures. My earlier experience have stood me in great stead. That is why I believe in listening to the ambitions of youth. When a man ceases to find inspiration in others, that day he begins to slide backwards. No man is so great that he cannot afford to hear the ideas of his co-workers."

Mr. Tourneur recommends exercise, mental and physical, to attain success—mental gymnastics and incessant observation.

DOINGS IN LOS ANGELES BRIEFLY TOLD

Production on the West Coast

BY J. C. JESSEN, 412 WEST SIXTH STREET

UNIVERSAL

TWO feature pictures were started at Universal City this week, one being "Out of the Sunset" directed by Stuart Paton and the other "The Flip Flapper" supervised by Rolin Sturgeon. "Out of the Sunset" is an adventure romance by George Rix. Eva Novak is the star and prominent in her support are Jack Perrin, Leonard C. Shumway and Oleta Otis. "The Flip Flapper" is a comedy drama with its scenes laid among the society set in Palm Beach. Gladys Walton is featured in the title role and in the company are Lillian Lawrence, Maud Wayne, Fred Malatesta, Grant McKay and others.

Tod Browning after four months of work on "Outside the Law" in which Priscilla Dean is being starred announces the completion of the picture in another three weeks. The next two weeks will be devoted to night scenes of San Francisco Chinatown erected at Universal City. In the supporting cast are Wheeler Oakman, Lon Chaney, E. A. Warren, Ralph Lewis, Welton Taylor, and Melbourne McDowell.

The final scenes in "The Throw Back" directed by Jacques Jaccard were filmed at Universal City this week. Frank Mayo is cast in the stellar role. "The Throw Back" is a romance of the South American rubber country and in the supporting cast are Edward Coxen, Helen Lynch, Irene Blackwell, Dagmar Gadowsky and others.

Eddie Polo's serial "The King of the Circus" directed by J. P. McGowan is now in its ninth episode.

Harry Carey is filming the final scenes of "West Is West" under the direction of Val Paul. Mr. Carey's next picture will be a story written by himself tentatively titled "Heart Strings."

BRUNTON

EVELYN SELBY who plays an important role in Robert Brunton's feature "The Devil to Pay" was the guest of Mayor Rolph and a Moving Picture and Projection Machine Operators' Society at a benefit ball given at San Francisco this week. Miss Selby addressed the assemblage and led the grand march with Mayor Rolph.

Robert Brunton left Los Angeles this week for New York on a short business trip. While in the East he will complete plans for the filming of a new series of Brunton productions this winter, it is announced. He was accompanied by Mrs. Brunton.

Jay Chapman, publicity director for B. B. Hampton, returned to Los Angeles this week from Chicago.

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

THE Maurice Tourneur Company, now filming J. Fenimore Cooper's story, "The Last of the Mohicans," is now in the Yosemite Valley filming exteriors. Mr. Tourneur did not make the trip, but sent the company out with his assistant, Clarence Brown. Among the players making the trip are Wallace Beery, Harry Woodward, Albert Roscoe, Barbara Bedford and Lillian Hall. The picture will be completed within the next two weeks, it is announced.

"The Forbidden Thing," Allan Dwan's first production for Associated Producers, was completed this week. The locale of the story was laid in the Cape Cod fishing district. In the cast are James Kirkwood, Helen Jerome Eddy, Marcia Manon, King Baggot, Gertrude Claire and others.

James W. Horne is directing "The Bronze Bell," Thomas H. Ince's special production. Horne was formerly a serial director.

"The Leopard Woman," produced by J. Parker Read, Jr., and starring Louise Glaum, is being cut and titled by Wesley Ruggles, who directed the picture.

GOLDWYN

SIX new motion picture stories will be put into production at the Goldwyn studios within the next week, it is announced. Mason N. Litson on Wednesday started taking the ninth of the Booth Tarkington Edgar series, which has as its working title "The Little Saw."

Clarence Badger is selecting exterior locations for his next picture, "Boys Will Be Boys," by Irving Cobb, in which Will Rogers will be starred. Reginald Barker, who has just completed "Bunty Pulls the Strings," will direct Thompson Buchanan's story, "The Bridal Path," in which Helene Chadwick will be the featured player. Frank Lloyd will direct Gouverneur Morris' original screen story, "The Water Lily." The continuity for this vehicle was written by Charles Kenyon. Wallace Worsley is to direct Gertrude Atherton's story, "Noblesse Oblige," continuity for which was written by Louis Sherwin.

Tom Moore will be directed by Alfred E. Green in "Made in Heaven," a story by William T. Hurlbut, which has been placed in continuity by Arthur F. Statter. Production work on each and all of these pictures will be started within the next six days.

METRO

MAY ALLISON'S next starring vehicle for Metro will be "Are Wives to Blame?" a screen version of Ben Aimes Williams' latest story of city life. The story was selected by Bayard Veiller, chief of production at the Metro studios. The continuity has just been completed by Edward Lowe, Jr. The story deals with the adventures, financial and otherwise, of the youthful husband of a socially inclined young woman. Edward Sloman will direct.

Robert Edson, star of the speaking stage was a visitor at the Metro studios this week.

Fred Kelsey who played the part of a detective in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" with Bert Lytell starred, has been cast for a sailor role in Viola Dana's new picture titled "The Offshore Pirate." Viola Dana and twenty members of her company left this week for Catalina Islands where exterior scenes will be filmed for the "Offshore Pirate." A special yacht and motor boat will be used. Dallis Fitzgerald is directing.

"The Back Yard" the fourth Buster Keaton comedy made for Joseph M. Schenck and released through Metro was completed this week. Eddie Cline co-directed with Keaton and Virginia Fox plays the comedian. Big Joe Roberts is the foil.

Percy Heath has completed the screen version of Jackson Gregory's novel "Lady Fingers." It is not announced what star will play the leading role in this story.

Mrs. Neill Wright, sister of May Allison has returned to Tennessee after a two months visit to her famous sister at her Beverly Hills home.

Mitchell Lewis featured in Metro's production "The Mutiny

Plug hats and evening gowns as they look in an Arizona mine shaft, where Harry Carey is making his next picture for Universal. It is called "West is West" of Elsinore" has returned to Hollywood after six weeks in New York. While in the Eastern metropolis he made several personal appearances in connection with the showing of the picture. Mr. Lewis expects to start work within the near future on the remaining Jack London story in which he is to appear for Metro.

1st NATIONAL

THE second and last Mack Sennett comedy for First National release entitled "Love, Honor and Behave" has been completed. This production will exploit such well known comedy stars as Charles Murray, Phyllis Haver, Marie Prevost and others.

J. G. Bachmann treasurer of the Katherine MacDonald Pictures Corporation left this week for New York. Mr. Bachmann has been in Los Angeles for several weeks conferring with B. P. Fineman, vice-president and general manager of the company. Production work has begun on a new Katherine MacDonald picture with J. A. Barry directing, but the title of the play has not been made public. Arthur I. Rouda former supervising art director for Metro and Allan Holubar has been engaged to supervise the designing and execution of art effects in the titles of future Katherine MacDonald pictures.

Mayflower announces that the adaptation of Robert Chambers' drama "Athalie" which was directed by Sidney Franklyn with Sylvia Breamer in the leading role will be released under the title of "Unseen Forces." Nearly three months time was spent in editing this production.

Carter de Haven arrived in Los Angeles from New York this week and he announces that he will begin immediately the production of two additional comedies to be released by Associated First National. The first will be an adaptation of "The Girl in the Taxi" in which Mr. and Mrs. de Haven appeared in New York during its stage presentation by Al Woods several years ago.

Definite announcement was made this week that Allan Holubar's first independently produced picture "Man, Woman, Marriage" is now completed and it is estimated the average cost of the film is $700 a foot.

VITAGRAPH

EARLE WILLIAMS this week commenced work on his new feature taken from "Diamonds Adrift" a magazine story by Frederick J. Jackson. Chester Bennett is directing. Beatrice Burnham plays opposite the star. The story will be filmed along the Pacific Coast where the original romance was built upon a tale of coastwise shipping.

William Duncan is finishing the sixth episode of his current serial "Fighting Fate." He will leave next week for location along the coast where a sequence aboard a house boat will be taken.

Antonio Moreno has returned from Catalina Islands and San Pedro where he was filming final scenes in "The Veiled Mystery" his current serial.

Joe Ryan and his cowboys left this week for Campo California where a ranch has been obtained for the use in filming exteriors in "The Purple Riders." Elinor Field is playing the leading feminine role.

INCE

"THE MAGIC LIFE," Thomas H. Ince's second special picture has reached the third week of production. The sequence swings from an English manor house to the Canadian cattle country and back again to England. Among some of the novel photographic effects entering into the picture was a Canadian blizzard scene which was shot this week on the Ince lot. House Peters and Florence Vidor are the featured players in the production.

Douglas MacLean this week began work on his newest comedy titled "One a Minute." Story was adapted to the screen by Joseph Franklyn Poland from the stage farce by Fred Jackson. Jack Nelson is directing and Bert Cann is in charge of the cameras. In the supporting cast are Victor Potel, Frances Raymond, Andrew Robson and Graham Pettie.

"The Inner Sight" a drama of the underworld by Martha Lord has been purchased by Mr. Ince for production in the near future.

Clarke W. Thomas, production manager at the Ince studios has been appointed honorary fire chief on the Pacific Coast Association of Fire Chiefs. The honor was conferred upon Mr. Thomas during the recent convention of the Pacific Coast fire fighters in Los Angeles.

TRUMPET ISLAND—Vitagraph

TRUMPET ISLAND" will be one of the talked about pictures of the fall and winter. It is easy to believe that Tom Terriss and his cast spent months and endured all manner of hardships that this might be a super-feature in fact as well as in the advertising. The "air stuff," as the climax of which an airplane is sent hurtling through an electric storm and ends with a crash in the treetops of a lonely island, however it may have been obtained, is much the most realistic of any similar scenes to which we have been witness. The story is a Gouverneur Morris romance, which is sufficient to stamp it with a certain originality and charm, and the scenario and titles are by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester, which is something of a guarantee of quality. A young girl, convent reared, falls in love with a soldier boy back from the wars. Her father decrees, however, that she shall marry one of those withered roues of the drama who can bring her wealth but no love. The soldier boy acquires sudden wealth and loses his head, and then seeks to recover his equilibrium by going to live on that good old abandoned island of the movie seas. The girl, dutifully agreeing to marry the roue on promise of being taken in an airplane on her wedding tour, from which she expects to dash herself to death, is eventually dropped at the boy's feet on "Trumpet Island," her memory gone but her sweet self miraculously preserved. Together the youngsters live through several happy weeks, and then they are found and threatened with a separation that you very well know never take place. A big picture in the true sense, and an interesting picture, rich in adventure, not too extravagantly illogical and pictorially arresting. Marguerite de la Motte is an attractive heroine, Wallace MacDonald a plausable and likable hero.

Lloyd Ingraham Will Direct DeHavens

Carter De Haven is back in California and is now busy, according to the latest reports from his Hollywood studios, selecting and assembling the cast for "The Girl in the Taxi." This is to be his first production under the new contract with First National, made by him and his eastern affiliation, Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, for a series of comedies starring Mr. and Mrs. De Haven. Mr. De Haven has announced the selection of Lloyd Ingraham to direct the production of "The Girl in the Taxi." Mr. Ingraham directed "Twin Beds," the picturization of the Selwyn hit in which the De Havens are starred and which is about to be released.

Dead Men Tell No Tales

Exhibitor Classes Compared

Neighborhood Manager Must Employ Real Showmanship

IDENTIFYING the "family exhibitor" as an outgrowth of the modern neighborhood house and explaining his somewhat unconventional business methods, N. A. Benson, manager of the Stadium theatre at Pittsburgh, Pa., has cast a new light on this type of exhibitor and his exploitation policies. Holding that this class of exhibitor represents the true progressive type of neighborhood showmen and avering that he stands "ace-high" in matters relative to neighborhood promotion, Mr. Benson submits a discussion of keen interest to the large class of exhibitors who are known as "neighborhood managers." In his own language, "the family exhibitor can not be beat for the clean-cut, neighborhood exploitation to which he devotes himself."

"Down-town exhibiting and neighborhood exhibiting," said Mr. Benson, "are as vastly different as daylight and darkness. Two distinct classes of showmen are found, by a careful analysis of the managerial efforts of each. A great many people—not the ignorant, but the average—are of the sincere belief that the neighborhood showman is the 'small-town guy' who could not make good in a thickly populated district to save his neck. They hold that the downtown exhibitor, on the other hand, is the true modern type of motion picture showman, representing everything that is dignity and success in the field. It is exceedingly peculiar in what different lights these two classes of exhibitors are held. But the discrimination is pure rot in my estimation. I do not seek to take away any part of the downtown exhibitor's laurels, but I do wish to make myself clear on one point, at least, that it takes just as much ability just as much showman foresight, just as much natural tact and managerial quality to propell successfully a neighborhood house, as it ever did to conduct a downtown theatre. And also I wish to state that the downtown exhibitor would find as much difficulty in doubling in the neighborhood man's shoes, as the outskirt-showman would encounter in filling the downtown caliph's office. It's a universal rule that works both ways.

"The downtown exhibitor is not entitled to all the credit relative to the exhibiting game. The neighborhood-man, his brother, can split fifty-fifty with him any day in the week. If he doesn't think so, let him step out to a settlement house for a brief time and try to put it over. He would soon realize that there is more to exhibiting than he picked up in his downtown sanctum.

"The two types of exhibiting are at variance in many respects, although there is but one big outstanding difference, which curiously enough takes in the entire business, and that is exploitation. The downtown exhibitor finds himself forced to uphold his dignity and reserve at all times. He is not allowed to lower the barrier for fear of ridicule or criticism. People patronizing a downtown theatre look for high-class effect, dignified management, cold reserve and the luxurious conveniences. In his exploitation he must not stoop to the level of his public. He must at all times maintain the high-class standard set up by his theatre policies. In other words, he does not get familiar with his patrons. That is his job.

"With the neighborhood exhibitor it is exactly the opposite. People will not patronize a neighborhood exhibitor that is unusually dignified or held in a position of esteem. The neighborhood house must be a gathering place, in a manner of speaking, a 'friendly' house, one in which people will find themselves at home. The neighborhood exhibitor must do his duty by showing as much unconventionality and familiarity with his patrons, within the limits of respect, as possible. There is no other way for him to successfully conduct his business. That is what his vocation calls for. If he supplies it he is putting over his project. If he fails to supply it, he is falling down on the job. Because the neighborhood exhibitor adheres to these policies he has been given the name or reputation, as you wish, of the 'small town guy' when as a matter of fact, he is just as successful a business man as his brother of the downtown district; the only difference being in their modes of doing business. Because his work must take on the atmosphere of 'familiarity' and 'unconventionality' there is no reason why the neighborhood exhibitor should not be given credit for his work. He is just as essential to the exhibiting industry as is his downtown competitor or rather, his downtown kinsman, the BIG exhibitor."

Blackton Addresses British

Picture Has Become a Power for Social Betterment, Producer Says

"NOTHING in the entire history of the world has developed so wide and beneficial an influence as the motion picture; and the effects of that universal appeal and power are only just beginning to be realized."

This is the opinion of J. Stuart Blackton, expressed by the American producer in a statement issued after his arrival in the British capital. Mr. Blackton's statement continues as follows:

"The whole thought of the world has been affected and greatly changed for the better; the characters and modes of living of people the world over have been improved by the great far-reaching influence of the screen.

"As art, as education, as entertainment, as a great social influence, the film already has achieved much—and its future lies along the broad highway of public betterment that will reach the masses of people of the world as has no previous art or any form of appeal.

"The film as a thing of art, as an educating medium, as a thought energizer, as a creator of love of beauty and as an inspirer to a finer understanding of life and a broader conception of the purposes of life, has a function in the world exceeded by nothing else in importance to the peoples of the world."

"I like to think of the motion picture in its broad aspects. It would be narrow to consider the screen today merely from the viewpoint of art or entertainment. While both as art and entertainment, the film has made notable progress, and, in fact, today occupies a position of prestige in the theatrical world, it is good to consider the influence of the motion picture in its big reactions on the people of the world.

"Since I came to London, I have been frequently asked what I thought would be the future of the screen. My answer invariably has been that the future of the motion picture may be judged by its past. Think of the progress of screen art during the last decade—indeed, during the twenty years since photoplays were first attracting public attention, and then consider the possibilities of the screen for the next twenty years."

"My own belief is that the motion picture has within it all the elements of art that lie in painting, in photography, in acting and in the larger interpretation of the finer things of life and art. I believe that the vital art of the old European pantomime will be fully restored on the screen."

Stage Director of Note Tries Hand at Studio

Homer St. Gaudens, son of the world famous sculptor, Augustus St. Gaudens, is the latest example of a prominent director of the speaking stage turning his attention, at least, temporarily, to the art of screen direction, according to a report of current activities at the Whitman Bennett studios in Yonkers.

The temporary accession of Mr. St. Gaudens to the motion-picture directorial ranks comes as a result of the plan which Mr. Bennett advances as of the utmost importance to the welfare and progress of screen productions, and the readiness with which Mr. St. Gaudens has fallen in with Mr. Bennett's plan to lay aside, for a while, the important position he is known to hold in the world of the speaking stage, while learning the art and practice of screen direction, promises well for the success of the conception and furnishes a notable example for others of his type.

Mr. St. Gaudens is at present assisting Director Webb in the forthcoming production of "The Truth about Husbands"—the Pinero stage play whose run as "The Profligate" was one of the notable successes of a London season.

Maxwell Karger Takes Vacation in Canada

Upon completion of the three new special productions at Metro's New York studios in West Sixty-first street on which the work of assembling, cutting and titling will be begun this week—namely, "Polly With a Past," starring Ina Claire; "The Misleading Lady," starring Bert Lytell, and "Fine Feathers," with an all-star cast—Maxwell Karger, Metro Director General will go away for a fortnight's vacation. Mr. Karger will forsake the realm of the Kleigs and Cooper-Hewitts for the solitude of the Canadian forests.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

Urban Movie Chat No. 12

A CHAT showing how American boys in France enjoyed seeing the "sights," after the fights. Not the kind of sights their younger brothers and sisters would have been barred from, had they been along but places and illustrations of historical interest, for those who stayed at home and have heard about them There is but a few feet of this film, nevertheless, while it lasts, is of decided interest. A peculiar characteristic noticed in Mr. Urbans "Chats," is that he never "chats" long enough about any one subject to tire the spectator. In the midst of an interesting episode, the scene suddenly changes, such as in No. 12, from the boys exploring French territory, to a sort of illustrated lecture about the effect of certain chemicals upon metals. If it were not for the convincing photography, one would suspect a magician, seeing metals branch and grow into tree-like constructions, and then, upon another application, absorb into themselves, again. In the same reel, we see the different kind of monkeys, in existance, that is, the kind using all fours in order to navigate. Each has his own ideas and characteristics, and their antics form interesting, laughable comedy. All this in one reel, with no time to think of the feature to follow.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Kiss Me Quick"

(Fox—Two Reels)

Clyde Cook makes his screen debut in this Fox comedy under the direction of J. G. Blystone and personal supervision of Hampton Del Ruth. His initial venture augurs well for his future. He is a slapstick comedian with a distinct style of his own—a rather unique combination. He is always serious, never once smiling, and provides some laughs by his unfailing deadly earnestness when in the most absurd situations. Of course, his most noticeable accomplishment is his ability as a tumbler and a contortionist. All of his peculiar poses and "rubber-boned" tricks, while familiar enough on the vaudeville stage, have strangely not been seen in pictures very often.

As to "Kiss Me Quick," it's one fault is that it serves too much as a vehicle for Clyde Cook. But then Cook is equal to the task. His stunts are varied and do not weary. The opening shot shows him as a lazy janitor and illustrates the scheme he has worked out for washing dishes without any labor. It will be good for a laugh anywhere, and is an excellent start. Then a kicking donkey is introduced. This animal shows not only great accuracy, but also a marked willingness in using his rear legs. Bert Gillespie, who must weigh almost 250, helps in the fun. It is rapid action, and funny without being vulgar.

The action shifts to a roller skating rink, where some feminine beauty enlivens the picture. Then comes a screening wrestling bout, between Big Gillespie and the lithe star. Cook rolls himself into a ball and unties himself; walks on his hands and feet (with knees stiff); and crawls under his opponent's legs in rapid succession. After this comes a chase and an aeroplane ride. The machine does considerable damage by means of the swinging anchor which trails along the ground, upsetting automobiles and wrecking telegraph poles. The machine however, has not been well made and looks artificial.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"My Goodness"

Two Reel Mack Sennett Slapstick Released by Paramount

EVEN Louise Fazenda fails to extract much humor out of the opportunities presented in this Mack Sennett two-reeler, since it is very much old stuff with a lot of "shooting in the rear" and other familiar gags used to excess.

There are, however, a couple of pieces of business that are more or less new and possibly to people who do not see a half dozen slap sticks a week, there will be some laughs in the offering.

The usual Sennett company of farceurs including the Sennett dog are in support of Miss Fazenda and the story is also the regulation concoction.

Not worth being called anything but a filler and hardly that.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"The Suitor"

(Released by Vitagraph)

IF the first four episodes of "King of the Circus" are a criterion of this picture Universal has one of the best serials the writer has ever seen.

It has about everything the serial loving public wants; stunts galore, thrills, fights, shootings, escapes and villains. Then to make it more interesting and to take it away from the usual cut and dried pictures of its kind, a pretty love story is introduced.

This is woven around the circus atmosphere, so dear to the hearts of children and strong in its appeal to adults.

Eddie Polo is a very busy man through these reels, for they abound with action. When he is not fighting three or four villains at one time, he is either climbing the roof of a burning building or extricating himself from the many entanglements the "bad men" have set for him.

He is ably assisted in this work by Corrine Porter, who is an adept in doing stunts.

The story which is said to depict incidents in Polo's life shows the star as Eddie King, a prominent performer in the circus world, whose fortune is seized by James Gray, the owner of the circus and an unscrupulous villain.

When Gray learns that old John Winters, a half wit, whose memory has been dimmed has a recovery and is about to confess the truth, the bully shoots the old man.

From then on the action is "fast and furious" with the villain and his accomplices doing their darndest to end King's life. Up to the fourth episode, however, Eddie was still alive and kicking.

The episodes are well acted and directed, the circus atmosphere being well injected.

Prominent in the supporting cast are, Harry Madison, Charles Fortune, Corrine Porter and Kittoria Beveridge, a pretty ingenue.—FRANK LEONARD.

Urban Kineto Review

THERE are lots of people who have never been to Philadelphia and believe the greatest sight is the Liberty bell. It would be well for them to witness a review of the Philadelphia Zoo, and know that the Quaker City's inhabitants are not all quakers. Some of them are the most interesting species of animal life in captivity. Little children who have been deprived the look into the city zoo, or children of the smaller cities where there are none, will be enabled to do the next best thing by seeing the Urbanized portrayal of every kind of animal and bird known to modern science, which can live in the air supplied by Philadelphia. One gets a squint at the acquarium, too, and a safe close-up of perhaps the largest boa-constrictor ever posed before a camera. A little thing like a human life to Mr. Urban's camera-man or men, must mean little. There is nothing too dangerous to thwart the inevitable close-up.—LILLIAN GALE.

Some More Samoa

(Educational)

THE title tells the story. A Chester Outing which might be termed a sequel to a previous Chester, portraying life in Samoa. The sub-titles are by Catherine Hilliker, which is an asset. In this "Outing," we see the novel way the feminine of the species prepare to outdo one another in matrimonial prospects. It all depends upon how many "mats" or shawls a debutante has made and how beautifully they are stenciled. By these, her cleverness is determined. They are fast becoming Americanized in Samoa and have already adopted the "parade," for the celebration of holidays. Usual splendid photography.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Why Worry?"

(Special Pictures)

AN average slap stick production with much running about and the usual wedding at the end.

Has a few laughs, keeps going fairly well, but lacks any particular class. Some of the sets used are terrible even for comedy purposes. The story, what little there is, is of about average quality. Will pass as a filler, but is scarcely worth being given any attention as real entertainment.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"The Wanderlust"
(Educational)

A ROBERT BRUCE scenic, dedicated to the "restless" human possessed of the "wanderlust," selecting for sub-titles, and detail a foundation based on the widely read poem of the same name. In this particular vehicle to portray beautiful scenery, Mr. Bruce has selected a man who finds it fascinating to stray from his comfortable bungalow, apparently in California, and seek to be a temporary hermit of the hills and surrounding waters. Well selected for scenic value, moonlight upon placid waters and depicting the results of the malady within described in the poem "It works in me like madness to bid me say good-bye." But the man in this had a habit of saying good bye and then coming home, after the fashion of the well behave rooster, "to roost."—LILLIAN GALE.

Urban Chat No. 25

THERE is considerable scenic value in the gardens where flowers blossom from rope-like stalks, upon the leaves and upright foundation of all, settle tiny parasites with one evident purpose in life. To eat while others hatch and hatch while others eat. One may mean fifty, within a few minutes, and it is all done with the camera registering the procedure of rapid propagation. Along comes a spray, directed by a human hand, spreading a liquid over all, cooking the devouring gribes in the midst of their feast, mowing them down like a machine gun.

There are species of insects with glorious wings, belonging to the fly family, but better dressed. Close-ups of them at feeding time tells why. They eat of more beautiful plants, is perhaps the reasons, but to see them in all their glory, accentuated by delightful tinting, forms the basis of a most entertaining reel of movie chat.—LILLIAN GALE.

Urban Kineto Review

IN England, staid, dignified isle of Lords and Ladies, is a park, very likened to Luna, in New York, or Riverview in Chicago. It may be hard to believe, but folk in England, according to the camera following these people about, indulge in the same sort of amusing life- risks as are practiced in America, a shoot the chutes, ferris wheel, scenic railway and all. The scenes showing the travels of these amusement seekers from Liverpool to Blackpool, scene of the merriment, is instructive, as well as entertaining. One might almost believe he would know what car to take. The subject matter of this Kineto Review proves that Mr. Urban is not always as serious as his classics imply, and proves, too, that the camera "stepped" lively, and must have moved often enough to command the assistance of a first aid to injured shoulders and tired eyes. He made it snappy.—LILLIAN GALE.

South Sea Naids
(Educational)

IT is the popular belief that the inhabitants or natives of the South Sea Islands put their time in at everything but washing, for the purpose of keeping their bodies clean. It may be true, but when they finally decide to "wash" in one of their natural pools, with a nature's own "chute the chutes" to slide in upon, they do a good job of it and seem to have no respect for time. The entire family go at once, and all take the "toboggan of water" in close embrace. Father seems to get the worst of it and the youngest child the best. Perhaps not as strong in interest as other Chester Screenics.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Field and Stream"
(Educational)

THERE is a magazine of the same title. Here it is in screen form, rather in the form of a Chester Screenic, showing the celebrated peaceful Potomac at peace, and sportsmen hauling in the more celebrated fish of Potomac waters, which seemed to "bite" obligingly, both for the fisherman and cameraman. The photography is pleasing, and acts as sort of a propaganda for life in the open. A particularly good subject for "atmosphere," to run preceding a feature laid in kindred territory. Of great interest to "fishing fans."—LILLIAN GALE.

"A Trek Into Swaziland"
One Reel Scenic—Released by Prizma

AS is indicated this is an educational reel showing views of some South African native tribes in their habitat with many interesting types and customs of the people presented.

The reel has an added interest in the Prizma process colorings used for the costumes, some abbreviated, of course, of the natives who have been caught by the camera.

A tribal celebration in which dances are given is one sequence. This has been staged rather better than most scenes of its kind and is quite a feature in itself.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"The Heritage of the Red Man"
Special Pictures Corporation Colored—Scenic—One Reel

THIS offering especially recommends because of the natural colorings rather than an extra number of beautiful scenic shots. In fact if it were not for the technical skill displayed the reel would hardly be up to an average.

The scenes shown are the usual array of sky, mountains, waterfalls, and views of primitive parts of our own West, alleged to be authentic shots of what is known as the "Bad Lands." Suitable for any program and will please because of the artistic colorings.—J. S. DICKERSON.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

BUFFALO

William F. Brooker, who is now in the publicity office of the Fox Film company in New York where he has been about two months, has been appointed manager of the new Mark-Strand theatre, which will open in Albany November 1, according to an announcement by Walter Hayes, an official of the Mark interests.

J. S. Hommel, who has been assistant manager of Realart here, will become manager of the Pittsburg office, where Henry E. Wilkinson, has resigned. Mr. Wilkinson went to Pittsburg from the local exchange, which he opened originally. Otto Schroeppel, office manager at Universal, takes Mr. Hommel's post at Realart. The changes became effective Monday, September 27.

J. D. Williams, president of the Associated First National Exhibitors' Circuit, was in Buffalo, Friday, September 22, and attended a meeting of Shea Amusement company and Strand theatre officials. It is understood that some agreement was reached whereby the Shea Hippodrome will show some of the First National product. It is reported that the Elmwood and Regent have also signed the F. N. franchise.

The policy of extended presentations at the Shea Criterion has proven unusually successful. Advanced prices are in vogue. "Humoresque," has opened the second week to tremendous business and the opening attraction, "Something to Think About," broke records.

C. A. Taylor, general manager of Gardiner Pictures, Inc., announces that on account of greatly increased business, his company will move to the offices formerly occupied by the Hallmark company in the new Warner building, 220 Franklin street. "Buck" announces that Gardiner has signed for the Pinnacle two-reel comedies and "Uncle Sam of Freedom Ridge," 20 copies of which have been ordered for the Buffalo and Albany territories. It is announced that the company will soon add a prominent exhibitor to the sales staff.

G. P. Aarons, formerly with the Superior Film company in Philadelphia, has joined the local Vitagraph sales staff. J. Kaufmann, has resigned from Vitagraph to accept a position with Universal.

Ben Fitzer, former Syracuse theatre owner and exchange manager, who recently opened a state right office in the Palace theatre building, 327 Main street, has engaged Fannie Bernstein, formerly with Triangle and Goldwyn, as office manager. Ben reports much interest in his big feature, "Madonnas and Men."

A large stuffed lion in an iron cage was used in the lobby of the Palace theatre the week of September 20 to exploit "Shipwrecked Among Cannibals," which enjoyed capacity business, according to Manager Howard Smith.

CLEVELAND

"Women Men Love," filmed from the story of the same name by Charles T. Dazey, was completed last week at the Bradley Studios, Euclid Ave. and East 30th Street. The picture, which has been in the making for the past eight weeks, was made entirely under the direction of Samuel R. Bradley.

A fire in the Niles Opera House, Niles, Ohio, caused a $10,000 loss to B. Warner, owner and manager of the theatre. Mr. Warner is the father of the Warner brothers who are conspicuous in the production and distribution of stirring serials.

"Homespun Folks," the first of the Associated productions, opened at the Alhambra, Toledo; Southern, Columbus; Liberty, Youngstown; and Strand, Akron, simultaneously Sunday, September 12th. H. A. Bandy, local manager for Associated, says that every one of these houses reported excellent business for the week.

H. R. Skirboll, manager of the Ohio Exchange for Educational Films Company, is just stating facts when he announces that his comedies are making a clean sweep in this territory. His bookings show more runs and longer runs than any comedies shown heretofore. The Mermaid comedy, "Duck Inn," played for four straight weeks at the Euclid theatre. In fact, the Euclid theatre has used only Educational Film Comedies ever since the Ohio office was opened in June.

"We need more high class one-reel comedies." It was Moe Horwitz talking. Horwitz owns a string of five big motion picture theatres in Cleveland, and he says there's a crying need for big stuff condensed to one-reel. "Most of the good comedies of the present day are two-reels in length," Horwitz said. "Now I find that the average feature of seven reels needs a single reel comedy to relieve the tenseness of the program. We have to have a news reel, and we have to have some light stuff on our program, but with the length of the average feature production, we find the two-reel comedy makes our shows too long. Patrons get restless when the shows are so long. They want a little change from the feature, but they don't want to sit through two-reels. If the producers would only make some classy single reelers, they'd find they were filling a big want in the motion picture business."

"The Lost City," which has exceeded the fondest hopes of its Ohio sponsor, The Standard Film Service, in the number and the length of its runs in this state, will open in Michigan, early in October. During the month of September, Detroit citizens will be made familiar with the serial by means of twenty-four sheets, put up in the most conspicuous places in the city.

Bill Hoffman, well-known film salesman in Ohio, has just been appointed office manager of the Special Pictures Corporation. Until recently, Hoffman has been associated with the Cleveland Pathe office.

Jim Flynn, who has steered the Detroit Goldwyn office through several successful seasons, has just been named division manager for Goldwyn. Flynn's territory includes Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

H. A. Bandy, manager of Associated Producers, has just made the first announcement of Ohio bookings for "Homespun," the initial release of Associated Producers' pictures. Sunday, Sptember 12th, "Homespun" opens at the Strand, Akron; Liberty, Youngstown; Alhambra, Toledo, and Southern, Columbus. The picture opens its Cleveland run the following Sunday at the Mall and Alhambra theatres simultaneously.

E. W. Elder, former city salesman of the Quality Film Company of Pittsburgh, has been made manager of the Lande Film Exchange, Cleveland, with offices at 2163 East Ninth street.

E. A. McAuliffe, manager of the B. and B. Film Distributors, Inc., has moved into new and spacious offices in the Erie Annex building, 2169 East Ninth Street, where he says there's plenty of room to swing the right arm and to sign names to contracts.

Max Stearn, former owner of the Majestic theatre, Columbus, Ohio, is planning to put up a large picture house on the site of the Neill house, one of the erstwhile prominent hotels of Columbus.

Walter Brandt, one-time exploitation manager for the local Goldwyn exchange, is now connected with H. E. Bandy in the sale of Associated Producers' pictures in the northern Ohio district.

SAN FRANCISCO

Jack Brehany, until now general manager of the San Francisco Equity exchange, has, now that the latter concern has been absorbed by the All Star Features distributing concern, re-entered the employ of D. W. Griffith, and will act as Griffith's representative here in charge of "Way Down East," when it opens at the Curran, October 3 for an indefinite stay in this city.

Top price here for at least the first two weeks of "Way Down East," will be $2.50, with a 50-cent price in the gallery of the Curran, which seats 1,760. Stories concerning the picture's New York engagement are being exploited here with great effect by Brehany. He will also utilize 150 stands, 600 three sheets and 300 eight sheets, besides many thousands of snips and cards and a large newspaper campaign.

Motion picture theatre owners of Northern California and Nevada will assemble in convention here, October 5, 6 and 7. A large attendance is expected according to D. S. Markowitz, president of the exhibitors' organization. Important questions affecting the industry will be discussed say officials. Motion Picture stars from Los Angeles studios are to be recruited as attractions for the Theatre owners' ball which is scheduled for the final night of the convention at the Scottish Rite hall. Convention headquarters have been established at the St. Francis hotel, where the banquet will be held on the second evening.

ATLANTA

Rumor has it that Juan Carbonelle of Key West, Fla., and Hugh Thompson have allied their interest in Key West and that a new theatre is to be operated jointly there.

Four theatres in Louisville, Ky., have increased their admission prices, according to film salesmen. The houses are now charging twenty-five cents for matinees, with thirty cents for the evening performances. No advance in children's prices have been made. The houses in question are the Alamo, Strand, Majestic and Walnut.

The Princess Theatre, Nashville, Tenn., a $200,000 house, has just been opened to the public. The program will consist of Keith vaudeville and pictures.

A new theatre is being constructed at Griffin, Ga., to cost approximately $100,000. This will be opened in the very near future.

W. L. Harris, of Forest City, N. C., is building a new theatre, the first of a chain to be erected by him throughout North Carolina.

The Imperial Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., has been remodelled at a cost of $10,000.

The Columbia Stage Society, of Sumter, S. C., is to construct a new theatre there.

The Loyal Order of Moose, Appalachia, Va., will erect a $50,000 theatre in that city. There will be clubrooms for the order in the same building.

Knoxville, Tenn., is to have another theatre, the Riviera, which is now being rushed to completion. The theatre is in an excellent location, being next door to the Farragut Hotel, and will be one of the best planned and equipped theatres in the South.

T. M. O'Dowd of the O'Dowd Theatre, Florence, S. C., has remodelled his theatre, and is "all set" for the 1920-1921 season. His program will consist of road-shows, vaudeville and pictures.

Albany, Ga., is much incensed over the leasing of the city auditorium for a permanent motion picture theatre. Between 400 and 500 men and women attended the last meeting of the city council, to register their protest, which was unheeded. Arthur Lucas, who owns a number of theatres in this territory, offered a bid on the auditorium, but a bid from the Gortatowsky Brothers, of Savannah, which covered a seven months a year rental, wont out. There was some talk of injunction proceedings from the townspeople to prevent the consummation of the contract, but this fell through, and the deal was settled Wednesday afternoon.

The Garden Theatre, Pensacola, Fla., has been leased by H. J. Sahm, and M. J. Ewing, of Washington, D. C. These gentlemen have completely remodelled the theatre, installed an eight-piece orchestra and are ready for their big opening.

DETROIT

The New Home theatre, Detroit, passed into the hands of W. Wilczynski, formerly owner of the Fredro and Free Poland theatres, September 20. George Hoffman, who made the sale, is one of the pioneer exhibitors in Detroit. He and his manager, Jack Edwards, do not intend retiring from the show business, it is said, but are looking around for another playhouse seating about 1,000. Alexander Hareski will do the booking for the New Home.

The Bijou theatre, Lansing, seating 1,400, has been taken over by W. S. Butterfield of the Butterfield circuit, under a long lease contract. The theatre will undergo extensive alterations, and will be re-named the Regent. Another Butterfield theater in Lansing, the new Strand-Arcade, is now under construction, and will open about January 20, with a seating capacity of 1,800.

A new theatre will be opened shortly in Lincoln, Mich., by Wright & Martin.

A. J. Berube, of East Tawas, is building a new theatre in Tawas City. The recently-opened Maxine theatre, in Croswell, is said to be doing very well.

Clifford B. Planck, cashier of the Paramount office for the past four years, has been appointed as short subject representative. Fred North has been transferred from Detroit to Toledo territory, and Harry B. Dodge has been appointed a feature salesman for Michigan. Charles Perry, Paramount manager, made these announcements.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Announcement has been made today that Spartanburg has been selected as the distributing point of the International Church Film Corporation for the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. A local corporation, to be known as the International Church Film Corporation of South Carolina, has been formed, with a capital of $50,000, and operations will begin about October 15th. The company will distribute to churches in the four states named above films especially suited for display by churches and Sunday schools. A number of films already have been made. The pictures are first-class in every way, dealing with clean subjects, including dramas, travel, comedies, etc., in fact, the usual run of moving pictures.

Changes in the management of the Casino, Garing and Rialto theatres, owned by the Southern Enterprises, Inc., and located at Greenville, S. C., are announced. John L. Crovo, who has been in charge of the Greenville movie houses for several years, has been transferred to Atlanta, Ga., and will be succeeded by J. H. Hursey, who has been in charge of the Imperial theatre in Columbia. Prior to going to Greenville, Mr. Crovo was located in North Carolina as manager of a chain of theatres in Charlotte, Wilmington, Asheville, Winston-Salem and other cities.

INDIANAPOLIS

J. T. Flanagan, formerly feature salesman has been made feature sales manager for the Indianapolis Pathe Exchange, succeeding A. W. Carrick, who has been transferred to Philadelphia. Flanagan is also Pathe news cameraman for Indiana. He covered an important assignment at the international motorcycle races at Marion, Ind., Labor Day.

Things generally have been pepped up around the Pathe offices since P. B. Elliott, manager and R. S. Schrader, district manager, came back from the general conference of the Pathe sales force in New York several days ago. Elliott got so full of confidence or something or other that he openly boasts that film men in New York can't play golf any better than those of Indianapolis.

September 5 to 11 was a busy week for C. C. Wallace, manager of the new Indiana exchange of Mamous Players-Lasky Corporation, 40 South Capitol avenue. Besides attending to the thousand and one odd jobs incident to the opening of the new exchange Wallace had to keep things moving toward an excellent showing on "Paramount Week" in the state. Among other publicity stunts Wallace arranged for the delivery of films to local theaters by airplane from Cincinnati, Dayton and Richmond. The landing of the "Paramount Pictures Express" was filmed and later shown in local theaters.

City school teachers and principals, members of the board of school commissioners, of the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations and other organizations attended a private showing of educational motion pictures at the Circle theater Saturday morning, September 11. The films are those produced under the direction of the Society for Visual Education. The showing was accompanied by an explanatory lecture by Dr. F. R. Moulton, University of Chicago.

Ben V. Barton, owner of a photoplay house in Crawfordsville announced during the week of September 19, that until he was convinced that a harmonious public demanded Sunday entertainments that he would discontinue them at his theatre.

The Crawfordsville Ministerial Association has been fighting Sunday shows, having organized a "civic league" into which some of the city's most influential business men were drawn for the purpose.

Harry A. Porter, 52, widely known among Indiana theatrical men, both movie and legitimate, died at the Methodist hospital here September 24.

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces that the title of J. Parker Read's production, starring Hobart Bosworth, has been changed from "Bucko McAllister," the title which was selected for the picture while it was under production, to "The Brute Master." The change was made after numerous suggestions as to a fitting name for the production had been received, it is stated. The picture is scheduled for release by the Hodkinson organization in the month of November.

Anna Q. Nilsson, the beautiful Swedish actress, whose portrait by Rolf Armstrong, adorns the cover of the November issue of the Photoplay Magazine, will be seen in this next Hobart Bosworth production, released under the Hodkinson banner.

SAN DIEGO

Another motion picture house is to be added to the chain of the Bush theatres, the new one to be located at East San Diego, a suburb of this city. While Camp Kearny was used as a training camp and cantonment by the War Department the Bush people maintained a motion picture theatre there, known as the Kearny, but now that the troops stationed at Camp Kearny are so few in number it has been decided to dismantle the Kearny and construct a new house as stated. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 600 and it is planned to have it opened for business before the holidays.

At the Superba theatre recently, the management gave a special showing of the recent Ince feature, "Homespun Folks," which was directed by John Griffith Wray, formerly directing manager of the Brissac Players, who have been playing in stock at the Strand theatre here for nearly three years. Miss Virginia Brissac, who is the wife of Mr. Wray, and all the members of her company viewed the film. Lloyd Hughes, star of the production, and Director Wray made some informal remarks from the Superba stage, going into details concerning the making of the picture.

Following the showing of "Homespun Folks," a film showing the players, directors and studio attaches at the Ince studio, together with scenes in and about the plant, were presented.

The Plaza theatre has installed a new curtain, which has been called "The Goddess of the Crystal." It is designed in the futuristic style, Edwin H. Flagg, of Los Angeles, being the artist. The curtain, which is opalescent and transparent, fills the entire proscenium arch. Changing lights and colors are thrown upon it front and rear by means of spots, floods and border lights, controlled by 28 dimmers. An almost unlimited number of combinations is obtainable. The curtain is used as a background for musical settings for organ solos, and the changing lights follow the mood of the music. It is the Plaza's original idea of color harmony, and with all its accessories cost over $5,000.

OMAHA

The moderately cool weather throughout the Middle West was the main reason of huge box office receipts of Omaha theatres. Managers of the Rialto, Strand, Sun and Moon vouch for that.

An immense cooling system that was installed in the Rialto theatre was not even used. Cooling systems in the Moon and the Sun theatres were an attraction, however, on an occasional warm day.

The management of the Rialto theatre and Harry Watts, manager of the Strand theatre, declare that box office receipts during the months of July and August were double those of the same time a year ago. The Sun, Moon and Muse theatres also experienced a marked increase of receipts over the summer of the previous year.

Omaha accorded Bruce Gordon, film star in J. Stuart Blackton productions, an ovation upon his presence in that city on October 1 and 2, in company with his director, Frank B. Rogers. Both dignitaries were the guests of Howard D. Graham, manager of Pathe in Omaha.

In due honor to the movie star, the Muse and the Hamilton theatres presented his latest starring vehicle, "The House of the Tolling Bell."

C. R. Carrick, of New York City, has been appointed feature sales representative of Pathe at the Omaha office. A business trip through Iowa and Nebraska with Howard D. Graham, branch manager, was made during the past week with surprising results, Mr. Carrick said.

Though bill posters are on a strike in Omaha, Harry Watts, manager of the Strand theatre, let the public know all about his forthcoming presentations; he did much pasting himself.

An all-night showing of Douglas Fairbanks in "The Mollycoddle," at the Rialto theatre, Omaha, following the electrical Ak-Sar-Ben pageant, was a big success as shown by receipts, the management of the Rialto declared.

SEATTLE

During Paramount Week, many unusual "stunts" were pulled off. One of the biggest stunts put over was the seaplane flight over the city, during which heralds, advertising the idea, and passes to some theatres were dropped on the crowds below. The stunt was arranged by Wayland Taylor, Paramount's "live wire" publicity agent. The nearly hundred per cent bookings for the week was the work of George P. Endert, local Paramount manager. The flight was made by Frank Steffy, manager of the Coliseum, and Albert Malotte, the Coliseum's organist. The machine was piloted by Eddie Hubbard.

Seattle has an unique little theatre in the form of the "Picture Book," with movies for young folks located in the Park Building, at Broadway and Howell Street, a residential section. With the slogan: "Where every page is clean," it intends to do a big business. Fairy stories, animals and wholesome funnies are delighting the children.

Designed along quite original lines, the promoters of the "Picture Book" carefully thought out every detail to add to the delight of the children and at the same time give to parents a feeling of security in bringing or sending their children.

Tickets are sold inside the lobby, which is furnished in bright blue wicker and orange hangings, in harmony with the signs and letterings on the front of the building. One of the managers, Miss C. Brakel, plays the violin.

It is proposed to make the "Picture Book" a children's rendezvous, and children's parties and clubs will be welcomed.

The three weeks of "Humoresque" were great ones at The Strand. Not only did this picture appeal to the crowds, but the comedy, "Four Times Foiled," was as big from a comedy standpoint, according to Manager Ruffner.

CINCINNATI

J. F. Potts, recently of Portsmouth, Ohio, has purchased the Variety theatre, Vine and McMicken streets, for $14,000.

Roy Haines, manager of the local First National office, has compiled some interesting data from the yearly report of the board of censor, which has just been announced. According to the censor's report, 28,745 reels of film were reviewed, of which 24,395 were approved without an elimination. "Cutouts" were ordered in 4,175, while 175 were rejected in their entirety.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.

The old Central Baptist church building at Cabot and School streets in Chicopee was this week bought by Nathan Barowsky of Easthampton and Fred J. Burnham of Holyoke for $34,000. They plan to convert it into a motion picture and vaudeville theater, work to start as soon as details can be arranged with intentions of having it ready for winter patronage.

Amid the great amount of praise which has been showered upon Goldwyn, Basil King, the author, T. Hayes Hunter, the director, and the others responsible for "Earthbound," Goldwyn's successful photodrama, one man who deserves a great deal of credit was overlooked. He is Alexander Troffey who edited and cut the film. It was more than a two months' job and the smoothness with which the picture runs bears testimony to the thoroughness of his work. Mr. Troffey had nearly 200,000 feet of film to choose from.

"Art-i-Jokes" is the novel title of a half-reel series that will be released every two weeks through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. They are described by Educational as an unusual novelty combining the cleverest written humor of American publications with animated sketching that not only reproduces the original illustration but adds the interpretations of the designer of the pictures."

"Art-i-Jokes" are the work of Vance de Bar Colvig, a well-known newspaper artist of the Pacific coast, who works under the name of "Pinto." Mr. Colwig has been connected with the San Francisco Bulletin for the past year and was first led into experimenting with motion pictures through doing work for San Francisco theatres. It was he who designed the bear that has become so closely associated with the exploitation of Eugene Roth's California Theatre.

There is said to be very little "reading matter" in Art-i-Jokes." The words are flashed on the screen, and then the drawings are seen in the course of their creation, the original work of the author-artist finally resulting. Various original tricks of "Pinto" are introduced in the various pictures, so that, according to Educational, the single reel is a succession not only of laughs but of surprises.

OKLAHOMA CITY

Plans for the erection of a large moving picture studio in Oklahoma City and for circulating moving pictures made in Oklahoma City throughout the Southwest were announced by Dee Turner, president of the Oklahoma Motion Picture Company. Offices of the company have been opened at 518 and 519 Security building. "In the Bosom of the Comanches," will be the first pictures which will be screened. Turner says he believes Oklahoma City is the logical center of moving picture activities in the southwest. The stock of the company is capitalized at $100,000.

The old Overholser theater at Oklahoma City has been completely remodelled and made over, with December 1st set for the opening date. The new theatre will be operated by John Simopoule, the owner, as an exclusive vaudeville house, but which will also show feature pictures. The full seven-act Orpheum road show will be given. Oklahoma City will be the only stop on this circuit between Kansas City and Fort Worth, Texas.

CONNECTICUT

The William H. Bristol Andio Picture Corporation of Waterbury, Conn., has filed an incorporation certificate in the office of the secretary of the state. It will manufacture sound records with moving pictures and musical instruments. The stock authorized is $1,500,000. William H. Bristol, Harns Whittemore and T. F. Carmody are the incorporators.

The Park theater building at Manchester, Conn., has been sold by Deputy Sheriff John F. Sheridan to Jacob M. Weigel of Hartford, Conn. It was built about 10 years ago and has been leased by John F. Sullivan as a motion picture and vaudeville house. Future plans have not been announced.

Lighting System of This Theatre Controlled from Two Sources

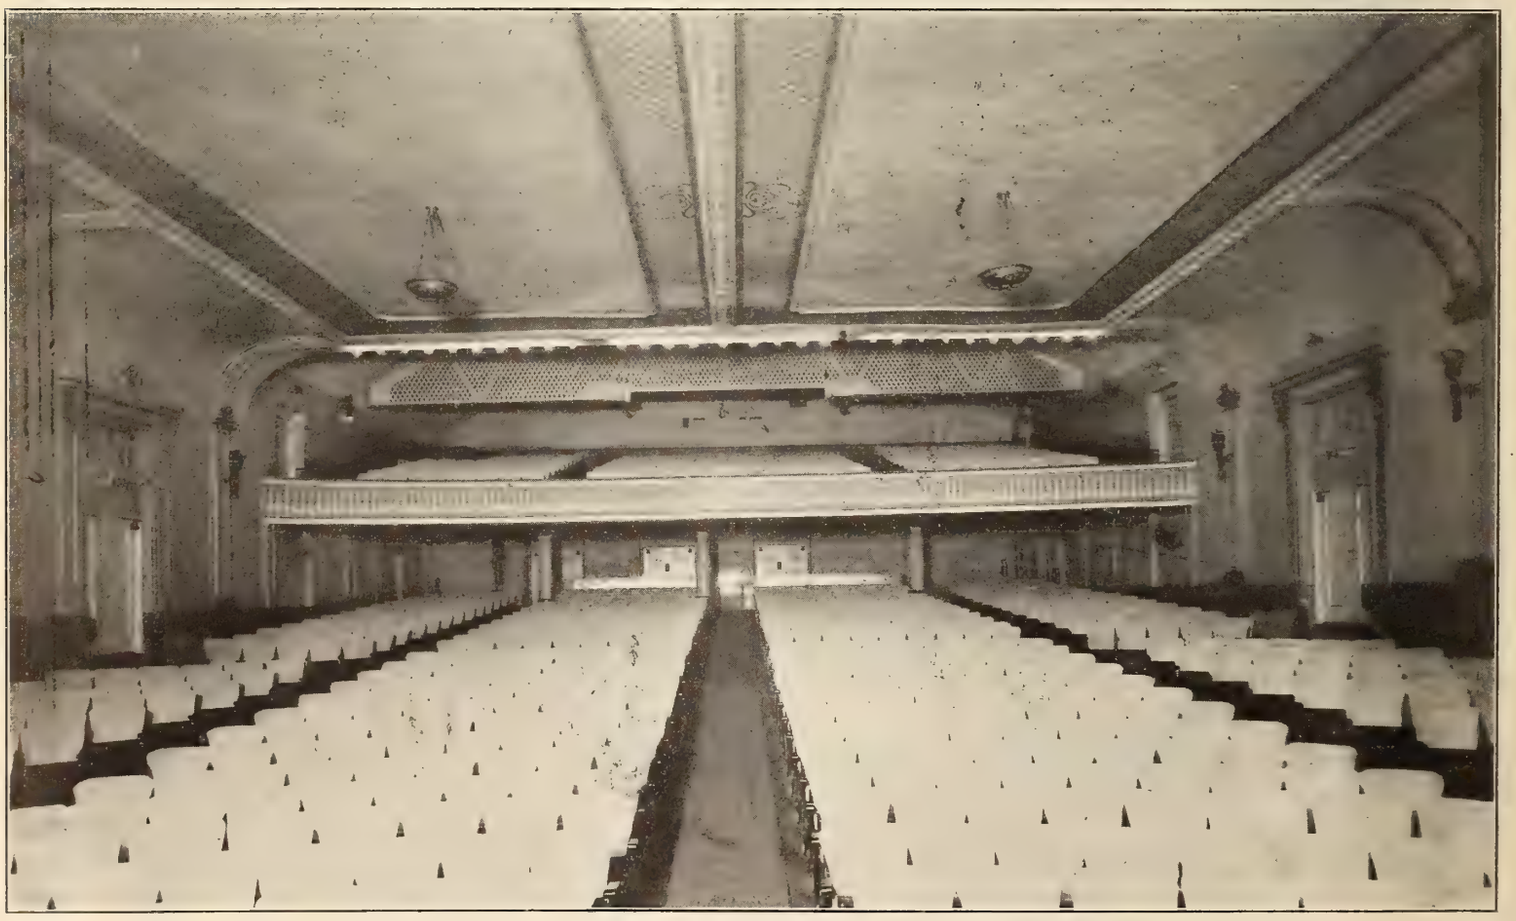
Projectionists and Stage Electricians Control Effects at Laurier

THE latest addition to the amusement houses of Woonsocket, R. I., is the new "Laurier Theatre." The theatre is the most beautiful in the city and compares favorably with those of the largest cities in the country. It is of brick and is located in the heart of the city, near the Normandy Hotel.

The theatre is entered through a vestibule with marble tile floors and oak and plate-glass doors. Overhead is a dome done in bright colors surmounted by a star picked out with electric lights. A marquise of metal and glass, brightly illuminated, extends over the sidewalk, and the whole is topped with a large sign with the name of the theatre and an American flag lighted with many colored lights.

From the entrance vestibule a long corridor extends with mosaic floor and stamped metal ceiling and cornices. Against the walls of the corridor are lattice ornaments between which are spaces for photographs of the current attraction at the theatre. The corridor extends to the spacious lobby which is the entrance proper of the theatre. The stairs to the gallery lead up to the right and at the foot are the ticket offices. These are finished in oak, plate-glass, and polished brass. A full length oil painting of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, after whom the theatre was named, hangs in the lobby. A group of five doors in oak and plate-glass leads into the parquet of the theatre.

The parquet is very spacious with wide aisles and is furnished with comfortable seats. The auditorium proper is 65 ft. x 100 ft. There are no columns to obstruct the view of the stage. The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,200 persons. Proscenium boxes with comfortable chairs are located two tiers in height on each side of the stage, and have separate staircases. In connection with the gallery and parquet are toilet and coat rooms with wide corridors and stairs. The chief point of interest in the theatre is the proscenium opening, which is 24 x 30 ft., with its framing of sculptured and delicately colored mouldings, the boxes on either side with arches and modeled lattice ornaments, escutcheons and the gallery front with groups of dancing figures. Crowning the proscenium opening is a large mural painting in oils of female figures portraying music and the dance. This painting is about 16 feet wide and 35 feet long, and was painted by Lorenzo DeNevers.



The theatre decoration is in the old Adam style with gold, Japanese lacquers, rose and cream, delicately bringing out the beauty of the architecture. The galleries and boxes have railings upholstered in green velour, and have metal guards.

A large orchestra pit is provided. The stage itself has every modern convenience for the proper production of all kinds of entertainments from vaudeville to classic drama. Ornamental program frames are placed on both sides of the stage. An asbestos curtain and full sets of scenery complete the stage from a dramatic standpoint.

Wide aisles and roomy corridors lead to seven exits on the first floor and the gallery has six exits all prominently marked. The stage is supplied with fire hose and is cut off from the audience by a smoke tight wall. The heating is by steam and the boilers will use oil instead of coal.

Proper ventilation will be provided by means of two large 36-in. blowers that will

A Striking Example of Italian Renaissance Design

Lavish Decorations Developed to High Degree in Toledo Rivoli

THE Rivoli theatre, which opened in Toledo, Ohio, early in September, is said not only to be the finest theatre in Ohio, but is claimed to be the last word in theatre construction. Everything that can add to the comfort and pleasure of its patrons has been provided. The physical comforts have not been neglected for artistic effect, and at the same time artistic effect has nowhere been sacrificed for expense, for the Rivoli theatre is nothing if not expensive. Originally planned to cost about $250,000, the house finished stands its owners in the neighborhood of a million dollars. In extravagance of design and decoration, the building looks more like a hotel than like a theatre. The lobbies are spacious like in a hotel. Also they are commodious. Small lounge rooms leading from the second floor foyer, spell something new in theatre building. There is a special little writing room, fitted up in the finest furniture. There is a rest room. And, of course, there are smoking rooms for the men.

C. Howard Crane, of Detroit, drew the plans for the Rivoli theatre, which are of Italian Renaissance design. The main characteristic of the Italian Renaissance style of architecture is the return to the outward forms and ornamentations of Roman art. In the Rivoli, this is expressed by the high archways leading to the loges, and by the elaborate bas relief work to be found encircling these archways, and the entire auditorium.

Everything in the Rivol theatre is elegant. The main lobby, on entering, impresses one with its dignified simplicity. The entire width of the house, 100 feet, is uninterrupted. The grand staircase stands out alone in the lobby. The staircase leads to a circular lobby upstairs. This second floor lobby is in the nature of a lounge. Large easy chairs with tall reading lamps next to them, inviting davenports, appeal to the eye as well as to the physical comforts of the patrons. The side bracket lights, as well as the shades for the standing lamps, are all of parchment, hand painted, with color and design in harmony with the theatre decorations.

The Rivoli theatre has three thousand seats. All of them are upholstered in heavy mulberry and grey striped velour. The entire floor space is heavily carpeted with the kind of carpet that feels inches thick when one treads on it. The side walls are of a neutral shade. It seemed to be the idea of the Shackney Studios, of Dayton, Ohio, who had entire charge of the decorations, to make the theatre a background for a series of harmonious colors. Most modern motion picture theatres have decorated walls, and tone down the rest of the house. The Rivoli reverses this idea. The house is sufficiently beautiful architecturally to stand on its merits, and let the decorations go into other channels.

Measuring one hundred feet wide, and one hundred and fifty feet deep, the Rivoli gives the impression of great depth. This idea is accentuated by the high arches to the boxes, by the slope of the boxes and by the pitch of the balcony. Everything is open. The balcony is as luxurious as don, the vice-president; H. Begin, treas- the main floor, which furthers the impression of largeness, because it's all alike.

The most approved heating appliances have been installed in the theatre, guaranteeing a steady heat at all times. The lighting system is something new, however. Getting away from the generally adopted inverted bowl system, the Rivoli has a huge sunburst fixture, right in the middle of the house. There are hundreds of lights in this sunburst, operated on many switches, which enables various degrees of light to be obtained. The house is never dark. But the kind of light obtained from the sunburst, operated in conjunction with side bracket lights, never interferes with the projection.

The Rivoli theatre, of course, is an entirely fire-proof structure, done altogether in steel and concrete.

Powers' projection machines are used throughout.

S. Barrett McCormick is manager of the new Toledo million dollar house. McCormick is known all over the country by his unusual exploitation stunts pulled while manager of the Circle theatre of Indianapolis. As yet, he hasn't done any exploiting in Toledo. "But I shall," he said last week, "just as soon as I get all the physical things in connection with my theatre done. I am a great believer in exploitation, as everyone knows. No picture is so good that a little boosting won't make it go a little better. I am beginning to feel the exploitation itch right now, so I guess it won't be long before I break out with some stunt."

Mr. McCormick is operating the Rivoli on a five-show-a-day policy. It is also the policy of Mr. McCormick to bring the Rivoli theatre within the reach of all Toledo citizens. With this idea in mind, the admission prices have been arranged on a graduated scale ranging from 20 cents to 75 cents, war tax included.

After a specially conducted tour of the theatre, with special attention to details of architecture and decoration, the next thing to attract attention is the ushers. Here again originality is the keynote. The ushers of the Rivoli theatre wear wide striped orange and grey bloomers made of the popular comme ci comme ca silk that has been so modish all season among the feminine sex. The bloomers are full and are confined just below the knee by a tight band of the same material. Black velvet coats with perky little sashes complete the costumes. There's something very attractive about well costumed ushers. They add class to a theatre. They fit into the atmosphere of a theatre where everyone lives in an imaginary land. They look as if they came with the theatre, just like the fixtures.

Situated down town, with theatres on all sides of it, the Rivoli shines forth in all its newness, promising a season of big productions, presented in a big way, at popular prices.

send fresh air throughout the auditorium and also be used to draw out the vitiated air. Besides this numerous electric fans will keep the audience cool during the warm weather.

The electric lighting fixtures were especially designed for the theatre and the control is very flexible. The whole of this system is controlled from a switchboard on the stage with a duplicate control in the projection room.

Floor-Covering— built to your specifications—

If your theatre presents some particular floor covering problem, call upon our Service Department for any advice you may require.

THOSE beaten paths — up and down the aisles, in and out the lobby! Floor-covering that can stand this constant, gruelling test of service must have durability built all the way through it.

Gold Seal Battleship Linoleum is making good in hundreds of theatres throughout the country. The fact that it is made to more than meet the rigid specifications set by the U. S. Navy, accounts for its exceptional wearability.

Your own specifications — "floor-covering that is easy and inexpensive to clean — that is quiet underfoot — that will harmonize with the decoration of the theatre" — are all met by this superior floor-covering.

And to the standards of the U. S. Navy and those of theatre owners we have added our own standard of satisfaction — the Gold Seal Guarantee. "Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back" is a definite promise—no "ifs", "buts", or "ands", no strings of any kind tied to it.

Gold Seal Battleship Linoleum is a guaranteed safe investment in enduring floor service.

Gold Seal Cork Carpets

If you want absolutely silent floors in your theatre—lay Gold Seal Cork Carpet. Springy, yielding and comfortable underfoot, this floor-covering is as restfully silent as the softest woven rug. Film Inspection in Exchanges

From recent talks with workers in exchanges aided by letters from actual Exchange Managers one is inclined to the belief that the Producer who gives one thought to the conditions of film inspection as carried out in Exchanges is as rare as the Dodo, the Dufangel and the Purple Cow. The entreaties of the small town theatre managers for better films is like a cry in a desert. There is no one interested in heeding such calls for help. It seems to be the feeling of Producers that theatre managers should consider themselves fortunate to get films at all. And there's that!

Said an Exchange worker the other day:

"I took a position in an Exchange to see just how they did the work. I've found out. They don't do it. It's a question with the Exchanges of getting the films in and out again with a minimum of time and labor. Why, I handled films that belonged in the junk pile but the manager ordered me to ship it out again. Say, it's a wonder the theatres stand for it."

Says a letter received from an Exchange manager a few weeks ago in reply to a query as to the cause of film being sent out in such poor condition:

"We're not to blame. We have tried to get the main office to get us a renovating machine but they ignore all our requests. What more can we do?"

All of this discussion is not brought up here for the sake of making the task of the projectionist easier although that is one of the reasons. A considerable portion of the film received by the smaller theatres particularly if they happen to be on a "circuit" is in an atrocious condition of repair. Such film is a fire hazard of the worst type and no end of skill and patience on the part of the projectionist can make it otherwise. The fault lies in the system of inspection carried out in Exchanges and from there the fingers of guilt point directly to the main offices. When action is started in the sanctums of the executives and not before will the condition of film be noticeably improved.

That Phrase "Photographed By——"

"Credit where credit is due" has been for some time the cry of cinematographers. Shortly after feature films began their rise the makers of films commenced to give others than the stars the credit due them by mentioning their names and the part they had played in the production of the feature. Came the author, then the director, and then the scenarioist but there the custom halted. The cameraman on whom almost as much depended as on the director was overlooked. Although the thought did not occur to the producers at the time this custom of slighting the cameraman had the effect of tending to kill the ambition of those dependable and resourceful workers.

Certain members of the profession—we say profession because it had attained to the distinction at the time whereof we speak—who were foresighted enough to realize that this disregard of the men working the cameras was liable to hinder the advance of the art, proceeded to put into action a carefully planned propaganda to bring producers to their senses. For several years their work has continued until today probably nine tenths of the features credit the cameraman with the photography. A lesser proportion of the shorter reels carry this credit line, but their number is increasing daily. This is as it should be.

This hall-mark of accomplishment has the double effect of Approval and Criticism. If the cinematographer's work as pictured on the screen is of a quality to call forth praise he will receive it in full measure for despite the many press-agented stories of the wonderful photographic effects devised by directors it is well known that they would be impossible without the expert knowledge and resourcefulness of the cameramen.

On the other hand if the consensus of opinion seems to be that the photography has been poorly executed the cinematographer should be present (in name at least) to bear the blame. In this way is the man continually spurred on to better work.

The American Society of Cinematographers stands forth firmly for the employment of the credit line "Photographed By——" and to a large extent it is through their endeavors that it is now so frequently seen.

Equipment Operating Projection Questions Answered

The "How" and "Why" of the Mercury Arc Rectifier

A Treatise on This Piece of Projection Room Equipment

ALTHOUGH the mercury arc rectifier for the larger houses of the motion picture field has been somewhat replaced by the motor generator set yet it is still extensively used for changing alternating to direct current for the smaller theatres. The large number of bulbs in present use for motion picture work is emphasized by the requests received for information on the theory and operation of the mercury arc rectifier or converter.

As far as the various types and makes are concerned the mercury arc rectifier is practically standard. The different manufacturers use different methods of arranging the bulb and its connections and also the switchboard layout and equipment but the fundamental principle of operation of all is the same. Figures 1 and 2 show the necessary connections for the operation of a mercury arc rectifier as a means of obtaining a current of continuous flow in one direction from an alternating current circuit. Additional circuits and apparatus are added in order to make the rectifier automatic in operation, and these will be discussed later on.

The "heart" of the rectifier is the peculiar shaped tube by which the apparatus is easily recognized. The successful operation is due to what is often called "Valve action" of this tube which allows current to pass in one direction only, namely, from the graphite electrodes to the mercury pool.

In Fig. 1, A and B are carbon or graphite electrodes to which the alternating current line is connected. C is a mercury electrode and forms the positive terminal of the D. C. circuit. The negative terminal for this circuit is the center of a reactance placed across the A. C. line. An additional electrode shown at D is connected in the bulb for use in making a contact with the mercury pool; C to start the operation of the bulb.

The fundamental principle of operation depends on the fact that a very high voltage is required to start an arc between terminals A and B. There is also a high resistance to the electrode C but this resistance is broken down as soon as the current starts flowing.

During the time which the terminal A is positive current will pass from A to C, the path and direction of current being shown in Fig. 1. Half a cycle later when A is negative and B is positive the current will pass from B to C, the path for this condition is shown by Fig. 2. No current can pass in other directions because of the high resistance set up. Therefore the current in the arc circuit is continuous and in one direction only.

Should the flow of current to the electrode C cease entirely then the high resistance would again be set up and the operation of the rectifier stop. In order to prevent this the negative lead of the D. C. circuit is connected to the center of the reactance coil so that the current lags slightly behind the e.m.f. of the A. C. circuit and there is still a small current flowing when the voltage of the line A is zero and the arc from terminal B is ready to strike.

In order to start the rectifier the tube is tilted so that a circuit is made by a mercury bridge between contacts C and D, the tube is then raised and an arc is drawn for half a cycle between these two electrodes. This arc vaporizes some of the mercury and fills the tube with ironized vapor such that the resistance of the electrode C is broken down and a flow of electricity takes place from whichever of the two anodes is positive of the cathode C.

VE POWER'S IN THE CAPITOL

Paul's New Million Dollar Theatre a Marvel in Construction, One of the Finest Theatres on the Continent

pitol is New Link in Chain of Finkelstein & Ruben and Hamm Interests

apitol, St. Paul's newest motion heatre, and the largest in the st, and one of the most artistic in itry, was opened to the public ay evening, September 8th, to a shed gathering that numbered state headed by Governor J. A. A.

The short-reel programs will be chosen from the best, beginning with Educational Films, which contributed "Modern Centaurs to the first entertainment.

The conception, development and erection of The Capitol theatre are the logical sequence of the city's trend toward more and better buildings, embodying more pleasing features in construction and the demand for a photoplay theatre that will keep pace with the artistic pictures presented. The grand total of theatres in St. Paul, sixteen years ago, was but three. Gigantic strides have marked the city's progress in the amusement field, until today more than ten times that number of theatres exhibit pictures to the public within the city's limits.

In the early days the "nickelodeon" was the popular motion picture theatre. With a store for the house and one rickety projection machine, the picture bounced and joggled on a makeshift screen. But in this day the motion picture is different—decidedly so. Master musicians interpret the screen stories penned by the world's most noted writers of fiction. Casts for these productions are picked from the country's leading artists, and the pictures take months to complete.

Has 2,503 Seats

Constantly growing and keeping abreast of the pace set by other cities for better theatres and better pictures, St. Paul's theatre rialto has been enlarging year after year, until now we have the first $1,000,000 playhouse in the city, The Capitol theatre. Not only being the largest motion picture theatre in the city, it is the largest in the whole Northwest with a seating capacity of 2,503.

The main entrance and exits of the theatre are on the Seventh street side. Three large decorative entrance doors nearest Wabasha give access to the main lobby. Toward St. Peter street three large double-door exits lead to the sidewalk. In addition to these doors a separate double set leads to and from the Hamm building.

Fig. 3, and increases to its maximum positive value at b and falls back to zero at c the flow then reverses and the value increases to a maximum negative value at d and returns to zero again at e. The current flow with regard to direction is opposite in X and Y so that while X is positive Y is negative and while Y is positive X is negative.

We will now follow the flow of current in line X, Figure 1 and compare it to the wave form of Figure 3. The value of the current at A shown by Figure 3 increases positively and since because of the high resistance it cannot pass to electrode B it therefore passes to mercury electrode C and thence thru the arc to the center of the reactance and to the line thus completing the circuit. All this takes place while the current passes from a to c of Figure 3.

Wants More Light on Screen

F. V. H., Texas: I am using alternation current. My throw is 82 feet with a 10 x 13 screen, but I am not getting a good light on the screen. I have two Ft. Wayne Compensarcs and want your opinions on connecting them up so as to get best results. I am using two Motiograph machines.

Where can I buy a Crystal Bead screen? And are they a good screen. I am now using a gold fibre screen but it is getting awfully dirty.

Reply. Sometimes the Eidtors are of a mind to disregard questions which supply so little information as the one above. With only the facts given by F. V. H. to work on, our best efforts are hardly more than guesses. How do we know what amperage he is using? And how about the carbon sizes? Perhaps he is using the wrong carbon combination which produces a light source of low unit intensity. And perhaps—several other possibilities.

All we can say is this. If he is at present getting the maximum current from his Compensarc, providing he has one Compensarc on each machine, and providing that he is getting maximum illumination efficiency for this value of current, his only hope lies in paralleling his Compensarcs. This would make it necessary for him to "steal" his arc at changeover periods which is not to be recommended in present day practice.

The Bead Screen is made and sold by the Argus Enterprises, Cleveland, Ohio. It is an excellent screen when used on straight-away (or approximately so) projection. When writing to the manufacturers be sure to mention the angle of your projection.

Projectionist Invents Dissolver

Mr. Alfred Werhan, a frequent contributor to the Projection Department, has recently applied for a patent on a new method of dissolving lantern slides. Mr. Werhan is an experienced projectionist and is connected with the Victor theatre at Akron, Ohio, as Chief of Projection. He is a member of Local 864, I.A.T.S.E.

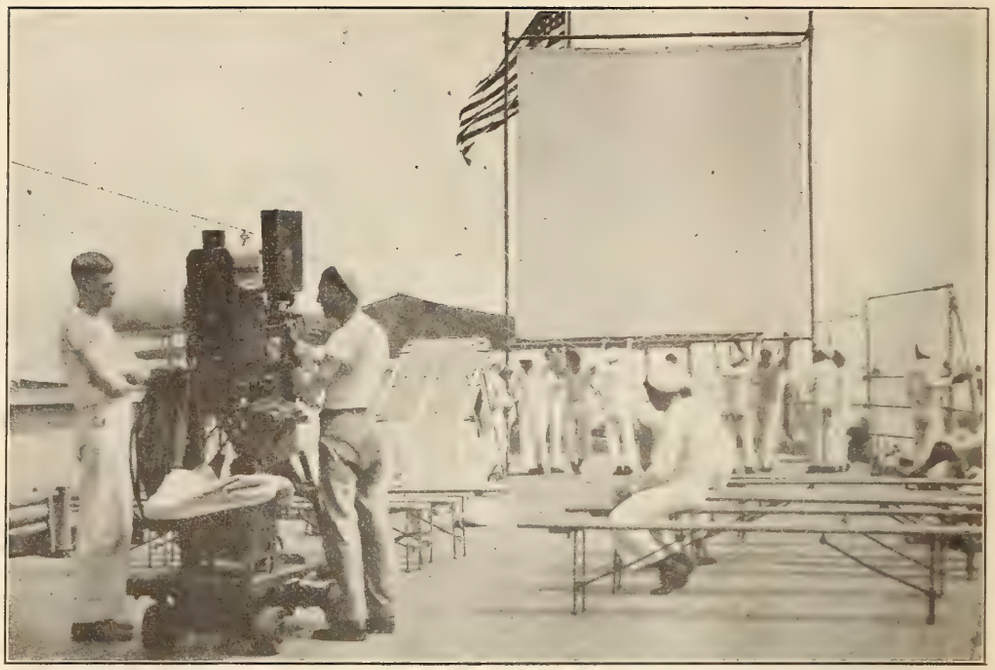
Making Film Fans in the Navy



THE Navy has become a splendid field for the development of film fans, and just what is being done for the sailor-boys will be of interest to producers and exhibitors. The Navy's motion picture activities are more immediately important to producers because this department of our Government has already become a large purchaser of motion pictures. The exhibitor will be interested from a business standpoint because the Navy is developing a taste for the right kind of pictures which will some day make the sailor laddie a profitable patron. The Navy has bought a large number of projectors and conducts a school for the instruction of projectionists.

Commander Walter S. Anderson, in charge of the United States Navy Recruiting Bureau, New York City, has furnished some details regarding motion pictures in the Navy, and speaks enthusiastically of films for everybody abroad ship while at sea. Hardly a night goes by without films being shown and every man off duty goes to see them.

Admiral H. B. Wilson, Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, indicates the attitude of the Navy toward motion pictures by the interest he personally takes in the selection of films for the fleet. Few films get by without his inspection, and he sees to it that the pictures are the kind that the men like. Pictures that keep the men laughing are the kind he prefers. He said recently, "While we draw the line at vulgar and obscene pictures, we certainly don't want any namby-pamby ones. The men on board ship want to see the same films that the public see. In my opinion, we are getting very high-class movies these days.

"In the past, we have not been able to get the best films on account of the expense, but now the Sixth Division is organized to supply the demand, and we have also established a Navy Motion Picture Exchange. At the Exchange, all the films which can be obtained within our appropriation are shown before experts; their first consideration is based on whether or not the film will interest the man.

The Navy Recruiting Bureau has widely distributed a poster showing some of the activities for the entertainment of the men aboard ship, and one of the pictures used shows the Power's Projector on board the United States Battleship Pennsylvania, Flagship of the Atlantic Division. It is needless to say that this is one of the largest, finest and newest battleships in the American, or any other navy. The picture shows a type of Power's Projectors which is used by the Navy, and thousands of these posters are being shown in public places all over the United States.

Invents Change-Over Signal

George Behlan, an operator at a Greenville, S. C., movie theatre, has just perfected a device for synchronizing the operation of two projecting machines so that when one reel of film is used up, another can be started and the audience not be aware that a change has been made. The device invented by Behlan enables the operator to know when the reel is nearing the end, and he can start another machine in time to catch the picture in the middle of a scene. Instead of the picture being broken and showing a line of white dots on the screen, the picture, as the audience sees it, is continuous. Behlan expects to apply for letters of patent on this invention, as well as on another invention that he expects to have completed within a short time. One of his inventions is expected to be shown at the Southern Textile Exposition next month.

Projectionist Invents Reel

According to an item appearing in the Macomb (Ill.) Daily Journal, Ira T. Rouch, projectionist at the Grand Theater in that town, has applied for a patent on a unique reel for motion picture projectors. The idea of the reel:

A study of the somewhat meagre description indicates that Mr. Rouch's reel embodies a non-rewind feature. Its use makes it unnecessary for the projectionist to rewind the film after each showing, since it is so designed that when applied to the lower magazine of the projector the film is automatically reversed.

Makes Additional Suggestions

C. W. Bennewitz, projectionist at the Strand, Sioux Falls, S. D., believes that he can help out Carl Wright in the latter's trouble with his projection. Mr. Bennewitz's letter follows:

Just took a glance at this week's News and noticed the trouble that Mr. Carl Wright of Sac City, Iowa, is having. I think that the following will help him locate and overcome his difficulties.

He says that he pulls about 50 amperes so will give him the line up for 45 and 50 amperes. For 45 amperes D.C. use a 6½ and 6½ plano convex condenser spaced 1-16 in. apart, with 17½ in. between center of condenser combination and aperture. For 50 amperes D.C. use a 6½ and 7½ plano convex condenser spaced 1-16 in. apart, with 16⅞ in. between center of condenser combination and aperture.

Lenses may have been cleaned with some liquid that has left them hazy, which would cause the trouble that he mentions. Check over your lenses and see that the combinations are properly placed and see that they are free from finger marks and oil. If oily clean with a little gasoline on a soft rag and then polish. Go easy on lense cleaners put out by supply houses until you know that they are approved by lense makers. Stick to the old way and play safe. Breath on them and then polish with a handkerchief that has been washed several times or a soft rag that will not leave them covered with lint.

Unstable arc may be caused by many things and here are a few. Loose and dirty connections, variations in line voltage of motor, poor contact at generator brushes, commutator dirty and out of true, dirty carbon jaws, poor connections on lamp leads. Trim lamp leads and check all connections from generator to arc, also have line voltage tested.

As to R. P. M. of drive wheel I presume he means fly wheel or crank shaft. At 60 feet a minute the crank shaft will revolve at 60 R. P. M. and the fly wheel at 960 R. P. M.

Always place the shutter at the aeriel image of the condensors which in this case will be about thirteen inches from the aperture. And don't just place it there but trim it down as much as possible without injuring screen results. Make a shutter out of cardboard and trim a little off at a time until you get a little travel ghost both up and down. Then cut your metal shutter a little larger than your test blade.

New Lucas Catalogue Is Out

The Fourth Edition of the Supply catalog of the Lucas Theatre Equipment Co., of Atlanta, has made its appearance. Practically everything that would ever be needed by a theatre, large or small, can be found in its 180 pages. The book is plentifully illustrated and bears a complete index.

One of the most interesting points in connection with the catalog is the fact that it was printed stitched and bound in the publication department of the Hakilu factory. There are few equipment firms in the industry able to turn out this sort of work.

Camera Laboratory — Picture Making — Studio Technique

Artificial Lighting and Equipment of Studios

A History of the Progression of Studio Technique by L. Guy Wilky

THE early application of electrical lighting in the making of motion pictures was very much different than it is today. The first pictures were made with daylight entirely, but many difficulties were encountered, due principally to changes in weather conditions. Electrical light first became useful when it was used on cloudy days to help light the set, and at the end of the day when the light was bad, thus making it possible to finish the work planned.

There is a great difference in the electrical equipment that was used in the early period of pictures and that which we use at present. The early equipment consisted of mercury vapor tubes and Aristo arc lamps. Later the spot lights and Kleig lights were introduced. The Kleig lights were called hard lights and were developed from the Aristo arc lamp.

Before electrical lights became generally used, sunlight effects through windows and high lights or back lights were obtained by reflecting the direct rays of the sun by the aid of mirrors. The same effects are now obtained by using Kleig lights and spotlights.

A number of experiments were made a few years ago with blue globe nitrogen lights. These globes gave a light of good photographic quality but the greater part of the electrical energy was converted into heat, which made it prohibitive for motion picture use. The heat generated became so intense that the actors were unable to work, and the grease paint of the make-up soon began to run. The furniture became so warm that one could not touch it.

The general equipment used today in the majority of the studios consists of mercury vapor tubes, Kleig lights and spots. While a few studios depend entirely upon daylight they are very few, because the advantages of using electrical lighting over the old daylight methods are very many. The equipment used today gives the best balance for lighting. When used on a dark stage any character of lighting may be obtained with any degree of contrast between the high lights, half-tones and shadows. If the set is on an open stage the mercury vapor lights do not prove satisfactory because the light from them does not mix well with daylight. Excellent results may be obtained though, by mixing daylight with electrical light from Kleig lights and spots, and almost any results desired may be obtained, provided the daylight is under proper control.

We also have special equipment which consists principally of open arc or miniature arc lamps. This type of light is used for stand lamps, table lamps, open fire-place effects and match and candle effects. Very beautiful effects may be obtained in lighting with this equipment when properly used.

Mr. L. Guy Wilky is Second Vice-President of the American Society of Cinematographers, and one of the charter members. He is cinematographer with the Wm. DeMille Productions, his latest success being, "The Prince Chap," starring Thomas Meighan.

A light that has proved very useful lately is known under the trade name of The Sun Light Arc. This light is built on the principle of the spotlight but is very much larger, and has remarkaeble penetrating power. It has a large reflecting mirror and a movable arc by which the rays of light may be spread and a whole street may be illuminated at night, or the rays may be converted into a small spot giving a strong light of high actinic value which is very valuable for spot lighting. When a large amount of light is needed from a single source, the Sun Light Arc may be used to very good advantage instead of a number of Kleig lights or spots.

Something of the same type of light has been gotten out by the General Electric Company. It is built on the plan of the large naval search lights and consists of a revolving arc which is revolved by motor power and has a large parabolic reflecting mirror. This light generates about three million candle power, and is very valuable for special effects. When it is equipped with shutter diffusers, by which the light is more under control, some very beautiful sun-light effects may be obtained, such as sun-light streaming through open windows, or the sun-light on open sets for back-light effects. This light at present is very much in the experimental stage, but the possibilities seem very promising when used for sun-light effects.

Much progress has already been made in the perfecting of electrical equipment, and experiments are being carried on by electrical engineers at the present time in the hope of bringing the equipment to a higher state of perfection. The future of artificial lighting in motion pictures depends very much upon the type of equipment that comes to the industry. Motion picture photography has developed quite remarkably during the past few years, especially along purely artistic lines and much credit is due, to the excellent electrical equipment that has been perfected.

Every cinematographer who hopes for the greatest success in his work should understand electricity, and he must necessarily know the value of electrical light. Motion pictures are getting better photographically and much more emphasis is being placed upon the art of the pictures. The future has a lot in store in the line of electrical equipment and the development of artistic photography in motion pictures.

Portable Lighting Plant to Make Possible Photography of Night Scenes in Wilderness

Two 50 K.W. Motor Generators of New Type Will Supply Current for Sixty Lamps

THE most remote desert or mountain wilds soon will be as available for night photography as if constructed on an enclosed stage through use of a unique portable electric plant now under construction at Metro's West Coast studios.

The completed lighting plant, mounted on a specially built motor truck and furnished with power by a four hundred horsepower liberty motor, will be used by the company in the taking of night scenes that once were posssible only when reproduced on enclosed stages. Under the present plan, however, all the realism for which art directors have striven will be possible without the construction of the make-shifts that were once thought essential.

The new plant will be of sufficient power to light a village of respectable proportions and, when its power is concentrated in the sixty great lamps that may be used in conjunction with it, will flood a space with a brilliant white light so desirable for night photography. When completed it will be the largest portable electric generating plant ever constructed, according to Walter Gram, chief electrician for Metro, who is directing the construction.

The entire plant will be installed on an especially constructed five ton truck. The truck is equipped with compound transmission which gives it twenty-one speeds, thus making it possible to climb the steepest grades. It will carry two hundred and fifty gallons of gasoline to meet the requirements of the liberty motor which burns twenty-five gallons of gas an hour.

Two fifty kilowatt Westinghouse generators of the submarine type will be driven by the powerful motor to generate the electric power. This is the first time that a submarine type of generator has been utilized for commercial purposes. In the past, these generators have been used only for under water craft and dirigibles.

A steel frame has been built on the truck to hold the electric outfit set which will weigh six thousand pounds. The truck is equipped with cushion wheels which eliminate all vibration. Another feature of the plant will be a portable bed installed in the frame. Here the man in charge of the truck will sleep while on location. The grade climbing ability of the truck was tested by going on a trip to Squirrel Inn, a resort located 9,000 feet above sea level in the San Bernardino mountains. A five ton load was carried on this climb. In low gear, the ratio of the transmission is 138 to 1, which means that the motor revolves 138 times while the wheel revolves but once. The average motor car is geared 4 to 1.

Portable Generating Set

According to present plans this portable power plant will be ready for use in about three weeks. It will be used for the filming of the night scenes of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," which are to be taken near Los Angeles. In case of emergency, this portable power plant could be attached to the Metro generator room and supply electricity to the studio.

With the addition of this portable motor driven power plant and a motor generator outfit consisting of two 50 kilowatt generators mounted on a three-ton utility trailer, which is to be used where power lines are available, the Metro studio electrical equipment is the most complete of any studio in the world.

One of the features of the motor generator outfit is a folding tower which reaches forty feet into the air. This device will be used to carry power from feed wires, where such service is available.

M. P. Apparatus Co. Moves Office

The Motion Picture Apparatus Co., Inc. of 110 West 32nd street has just required the sole rights to the new upper stereospeed camera, which is the ultimate word in the high speed camera.

We understand in tests this apparatus has run 200 feet in seven seconds, that is over five hundred images per second.

The company, however, guarantees this camera to produce three hundred perfect images per second.

The new apparatus is really a combination of two cameras. One side of which takes the picture at the regular sixteen images per second. The other side can be run up as high as three hundred or more per second.

The camera is equipped with three matched lenses, one of which is used to view the picture all of the time during the progress of the work.

The field for such an instrument is large and varied especially in manufacturing and scientific field for analysis of motion.

Watch For This Man

WE have been requested by the Burke & James, Inc., of Chicago, to publish a notice calling attention to the fact that a man posing as a Mr. Warren J. Armstrong secured from them a Universal Camera, 200 foot capacity, complete with Dissolve, for which he gave a spurious draft.

The Camera number is 2604 and the lens number, 3050268.

According to reports he has registered at some hotels as J. J. Kumler and has given the impression that he was connected with the Smithsonian Institution of Washington in Volcanic Research Work.

He is described as 5 ft. 8 in. tall, of slender build with thin features. His hair which is black is parted in the middle and in all ways his appearance is such as to stamp him a gentleman.

If any of the readers happen in touch with this individual they will help the "game" by wiring or writing either this office or direct to Burke and James.

A $50 reward is offered for the return of the camera.

Paper on Exchange Fire Hazards

Mr. George A. Blair, sales manager, Motion Picture Film Department, Eastman Kodak Company, is the author of a paper to be read at the Dayton convention of the S. M. P. E., on the subject of "Reducing Fire Hazards in Film Exchanges." Some of the points to be discussed are:

1. General characteristics of motion picture film having a ntro-cellulose base.
2. Brief review of the events which led to the adoption of the present standards of protection and storage of motion picture film, including resume of the tests conducted by the National Fire Protection Association and the Eastman Kodak Company.

News Musico-Musical Conference Rouses Country

Authorities in Every Division Send Greetings—Give Promise of Aid

ALTHOUGH the opportunity to sound out the real sentiment of the country at large on the musical-motion picture conference has not been fully opened, nevertheless there is no doubt of its certain success. There is no question of its live interest. In fact, from every city in the country have come letters of congratulation, of commendation, of support. In the correspondence are represented theatre owners, managers, conductors, producing directors, producers, directors, authors, composers, cue-sheets makers, newspaper editors, instrument manufacturers, music publishers, societies, etc.

Digest of the Comments

The conference is a necessity is the consensus of opinion.

There are live and valid reasons for the meeting.

The results of a conference which drew up decisions on any one of a score of problems would amply justify the effort.

The NEWS, they say, is to be commended upon for the step. Almost any time is as good as another, excepting the holiday season, but it is better to give you ample time for preparation.

Advance work in preparing all the objects, subjects, letters for discussion will save time and should be done before the date of the session.

So Far Decided

The conference will not be called until January—the second week in the year.

It will be open to all who desire to attend, but it is requested that you send notice of your intention to the News Music Department.

From week to week until the date of the meeting all information necessary to a full understanding will be carried in brief form in this department. Watch it and you'll miss nothing.

Things to Be Done

Send along your suggestion concerning the ways and means of carrying the conference to the most lasting and productive results. Remember that the purpose of the conference is to thrash out and settle all questions related to music and pictures —not pictures alone or music alone, but the two in combination. Remember the intention is to bring all the successful ideas of the past to the attention of all—to aim to eliminate the mistakes—to facilitate the development of musical numbers —to encourage the newly growing agencies—to make cue-sheets better—to make it easier to amalgamate the performance of orchestra or soloist with the picture, to discuss prologues, novelties, etc.

Do everything you can to bring the conference to the attention of all who ought to know of it. Send along word of it to your movie editor in the newspaper.

Remember that you are needed in the discussions. Remember that you will get more out of the idea in proportion to the way you get into it.

Heralding a Movie Conference

Karlton Hackett

in the Chicago Evening Post

THERE is no need at this day to discuss the importance of music in the movies since the public has long since decided the question. However, this is the age of combination and standardization, and it is evident that the powers that be in the motion picture world will have to take up the question and make some new rules. The pressure of the music department all over the country is becoming so great that some practical scheme will have to be worked out if everything is to move comfortably and to the reasonable satisfaction of all concerned.

A number of the principal figures in the business, including artists, producers, managers and orchestra conductors, are feeling the need of getting together for mutual benefit and protection. The old free-and-easy days, when anybody could rent a store, fit it up as a picture house for a few dollars, hire a professor to pound the box and make money, have gone, never to return. A successful movie thetare is now but one cog in a great machine and the necessary financial outlay is such as brings it within the realm of big business.

How much influence any combination can bring to bear on the subject is something of a question since the public has a way of deciding such matters for itself, sometimes refusing in the most disconcerting manner to be driven, but almost always quite willing to be led.

There are theatres where the music has attained to the importance of symphony orchestras, which have made their offerings so attractive as to divide the honors with the pictures. Naturally such theattres can exist only in large communities, but they have exerted an influence all along the line and made it altogether out of the question for the old-fashioned piano pounder to satisfy the public. Nevertheless, the capable pianist still has a place in the picture house which he can fill with remarkable power.

Better a good pianist or an organist than a mediocre orchestra. But there is no place in the movie houses for the academic musician with owl-eyed notions of educating the popular taste. There is an unlimited future in the motion picture business for the musician if he have the wit to understand what is wanted. The popular composer now finds here a great field. Some people still affect to roll up their eyes in horror over "rag," despite the fact that herein we have made a genuine contribution to music, and one indigenous to American soil. Jazz is, of course, one step lower down in the scale, with the black earth from which it sprung clinging to it, yet here again is a genuine creation which in course of time will make its influence felt in the symphony halls.

There has been a pretty nearly unbridgeable chasm between the music of the symphony hall and that of the people's affection. The best of music was so guarded in temples set apart that the great mass of the people had no opportunity to learn of its beauties. In the movie house there is a practical meeting ground. Here the people have shown a keen appetite for music, if only it were brought to them in attractive form. Greater use should be made of this melting pot.

If a conference is held of the powers that be, something ought to come of it that would be for the benefit of the public and the profit of the movie men. The people want music in the movies. There are a vast number of people capable of giving it to them. There ought to be some way of bringing them toether to their mutual benefit.

Wants Producers Included

Music Editor:

May I suggest that you include all producers and distributors as well, for in the last analysis, the exhibitor's problem is the producer's and distributor's problem. I believe it is high time such a move were made, and an efficient, standardized music service be effected, so that our pictures may not be marred in their presentation by lack of appropriate musical setting.

I agree with you heartily that the cry of the industry today is for prologues with musical accompaniment. It might interest you to know that Equity Pictures was the first to include prologues in every press book, beginning with the very first Young production over a year ago, and that it has found a keen demand among exhibitors for these preludes. Going a step farther, Equity has recently officially affiliated with the New York Concert Bureau—the musical agency you so rightly praise—to supply first-run houses with the soloists and ensembles as a prelude to the picture.

I sincerely trust the conference will be a reality, and that it will have the co-operation of every member of the industry.—J. I. Schnitzer, President Equity Pictures Corporation.

Of course, Mr. Schnitzer, you're invited. So are all producers.—MUSIC EDITOR.

Further Letters About the Big Conference

Hugo Riesenfeld wrote a second letter, following his first brief comment last week:

Please accept my heartiest congratulations on the progress you are making toward bringing about a convention of the men most interested in motion picture music. If your latest announcement in the NEWS is any index of what you expect to accomplish it will have the hearty support of every person interested in improving the programs of American film houses, which, even as they are now, are the best in the world.

So much waits to be done in a field that is richer in promise for real music than any that had even been dreamed of before the arrival of the motion picture. At the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion, we have been trying not only to please the public with our accompaniments to pictures and our incidental programs, but to create a taste for a knowledge of good music, which we can satisfy later. Each year has seen a steady progress toward better music. Numbers that we would not have dared to put on our programs three or four years ago are now played as a matter of course.

But it is not for my theatres that I am most interested in your proposed convention; it is for the smaller houses throughout the country and the millions who attend them. The good that can be accomplished by a combination of effort between producer and exhibitor is beyond estimation. If proper scores were prepared, scores that were as available to the house that has only one instrument as to the theatre with an orchestra of fifty musicians, if some thought were given to the music when the film is made, so that selections might be played for a minute or more instead of a few seconds, as we often have to do now; if, in a word, more attention were paid to the music that accompanies the film, we would have better music and, ultimately, the films would be benefited.

If there is anything I can do to help further your laudable work in this matter, please do not fail to call upon me.

Very sincerely,
HUGO RIESENFELD,
Managing Director, Rialto Theater.

Representing the entire musical world, C. M. Tremaine writes as follows:

Early next week I plan to send out to the trade papers an article about the motion picture project, and will be glad to invite the manufacturers to participate in the conference in the article.

My suggestions regarding the specific points in your last letter are:

1. The time you mention for the conference, the end of November or the beginning of December, coming in between Thanksgiving and Christmas, seems to me a pretty crowded time for most of the people who would attend the conference, and I am wondering whether early in January might not be better. That is a natural time to set new forces in motion. So far as I am concerned, or the people of the music industries, one time is as good as the other.

2. The conference ought not to last longer than two days. As I understand it, it is not the thought to map out detailed plans looking to immediate results, but rather to get fresh influences working, with developments to follow gradually.

3. The session I think should be held in some hotel rather than in any theatre.

4. Subjects to be discussed might include: How to put more emphasis on the musical part of the program, both in the outside advertising and with the audience present; improving the music in the smaller picture house, or how the motion picture theatre can serve to popularize good music in its community and so win more prestige; concerted action to make available more music adapted to the needs of the small orchestra; opportunities on the program for local musical talent in solo work; cooperation with local musical movements such as Music Memory Contests among the school children, Christmas Eve Caroling, Music Weeks, etc.

I shall continue to give the whole matter thought and as further ideas occur to me will be glad to pass them to you.

C. M. TREMAINE,
National Bureau of the Advancement of Music.

John C. Freund is active. He is editor of Musical America, the leading magazine of the musicians.

I would suggest the first week in December for the meeting. By that time the result of the elections will not only be known but will have been threshed out and explained and we shall have settled down to normal conditions again, so that we will have free minds to deal with.

As I suggested to you before, I think that there should be a meeting at a luncheon the latter part of the week when most newspaper men on the daily papers are fairly free, where we could thresh out the course of proceedings to be followed at the real meeting.

The duration of the conference will depend a great deal upon the matters which are brought up naturally. It should take place at 2 p.m. in the afternoon, as you won't find it possible to hold the people much after half past four or five. That has been my experience. If a good deal of interesting matter develops, it will probably mean an adjournment, which I would advise rather than finishing the conference at a later hour with half the members having left. It should not be held in a theatre but in one of the leading hotels and don't go to the Commodore—even Caruso couldn't stand that.

With regard to specific subjects and exhibits I would say that that would be a matter for discussion at the preliminary.

With regard to inviting the members of my staff to discuss the matter, I would suggest that be done after we have had the preliminary meeting.—John C. Freund—Editor, Musical America.

From those who are imposing the music tax:

Regarding the proposed Motion Picture Musical Conference, we are of the opinion that your plan is a meritorious one and should result in bringing about a cooperation between the author and composer and publishers of music, the musician, the theatre owner, and other industries affiliated with the general development of music.

We shall be pleased to appoint a committee of our members to attend the conference, so that the aims and purposes of this society will be clearly presented to those in attendance.—AMERICAN SOCIETY OF COMPOSERS, AUTHORS and PUBLISHERS.

From a leading agency for music in theatres:

I am more anxious to do anything to help bring the finest music into the Motion Picture theatres, and I think I may say, that I have done a great deal. A look at the list I am enclosing of artists who have honored me by asking me to book them in the motion picture theatres, will show that I think nothing too good for this style of entertainment. As a matter of fact I think it is doing more toward the education of the so called "masses" for an understanding and appreciation of really good music than anything I can think of at this moment.

I also am informed by my artists that the courtesy shown them by everyone connected with the management of the theatres where I have sent them, is equal to that shown the finest artists in the finest opera companies. In fact in my opinion, fortunate indeed is the artist whose voice qualifies them to sing in the theatres of the motion pictures. They must be very good indeed to please.

Your articles in the Motion Picture News are wonderful and may I tell you how much I enjoy reading them?—Mrs. A. K. Bendix—Bendix Music Bureau, 701 7th Avenue, N.Y.C.

Jules Daiber, prominent concert manager, writes:

"I have received your letter of September 7th, and you can count me in to join in the Motion Picture Musical Conference to be held sometime the beginning of November."

A number of prominent newspaper men have written. For instance:

I think that your plan is a splendid one, as there has really been a remarkable development in the musical part of picture presentation.

Despite the increase in the prominence of music in the picture houses within the past two or three years, I believe there is much opportunity for critical comment with a view to clarifying the conception of music's place in the film theatre, especially now. Still more important perhaps, would be some discussions of the proper synchronization of melody with the photoplay, and of the tiresome commonplaces which music directors are prone to fall into.—EDWIN SHALLERT, Music Editor, Los Angeles Times.

"I believe in music in the motion picture theatre and shall be glad to help in any way I can. What practical benefit I can give I do not know, but I am always willing to try. Here is something from an article I wrote after your announcement was made."*—KARLETON HACKETT, Music Editor, Chicago Evening Post.

*See reprint from Karleton Hackett's article in other column.

From a noted composer (of "The Robin Woman" and "Land of the Sky Blue Water"):

Dear Friend Isaacson:

I have no doubt that such a conference as you propose would be a fine thing for musicians and for the picture house. I am very much interested in getting together the big producers and the composers of the country. It will be but a short time till the various companies now using scores with music culled mostly from old stuff already in print (classics of course which will always be needed in the make-up of a good synchronized score) will go afield for brand new material and will come to the American composer for SPECIAL music. The matter of always using the older familiar things with the pictures will be exhausted after a while, it seems to me, and the fresh and specially written material will be called for. The independent companies are beginning this work, but the larger companies are as yet satisfied with a score made up of "things already in print." Perhaps you have seen the account of the music I am doing for the new Omar Khayyam picture.

CHARLES W. CADMAN,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Theatres Want Instruments Installed

Music Editor:

I am remodeling a theatre here and when completed will seat about 425. This is a town of about 8,000 people with two state schools, students numbering about 2,500. There are two other shows here, one about 400 seats, the other about 425. One has (————), large size, no one in particular to play it, don't keep the music up. Other has just installed a (————), $6,500. I hardly think he will have a regular man with it all the time.

At both schools, of course, they are used to good music and have Lyceum courses of the best talent in the country. So from that you can draw your own conclusion.

We are putting in every thing new and as I have been reading your articles with much interest in the NEWS, and think you are doing a great and much needed good, I would like your advice and assistance in selecting my music and my instrument.

The one already here seems to be to have too much volume for the biulding. Wouldn't a smaller size do better?

You see, in a town this size and seating capacity considered, I must be careful about costs, still I must put in something good musically as I intend to follow your articles and make ours a musical theatre.

Please send me your Musical Aids and other suggestions you are able to give.—GROVER S. CAMPBELL, Denton, Texas.

Music Editor:

I am thinking of installing an organ or photoplayer in a theatre with one thousand seats, perhaps there will be only 900,—what would you recommend? Out here in a country town we can't afford a three-manual organ, especially because I only have a short term lease on the house. I thought of installing a (————) organ because it could easily be moved when my lease expires should I lose the house.

Or would you recommend a (————) organ or a regular (————). Kindly advise me and it will be confidential. Let me know what you think of the (————) organ and just what you would install if you leased the house under these conditions. Thanking you for reply.—H. R. WEBER, The Orpheum theatre, Chambersburg, Pa.

That noted New York writer known familiarly as "Round the Town," S. Jay Kaufman, owner of "Theatre World" and famed critic, recently had the following to say and in his usual manner hit the nail right on the head.

MOVIES WITHOUT MUSIC

Seeing a film without music impressed upon us the great part music plays in the showing of a film. So much so that the best of films would more than likely be a failure. We had occasion to see a "big film" at a Broadway theatre, where it was accompanied by a first-class orchestra. Later on we saw the same film at a ten-cent movie and accompanied by an organ only. The result was terrible. You would not have thought it was the same thing at all. Music, and good music, is necessary to the showing of a film. Music can mar or make a film.

Leo Feist Commends "News Music"

I have read your article "An Alliance with the Music Makers" in a recent issue of Motion Picture News, and want to compliment you on the thorough manner in which you have gone into the subject, and also thank you for advancing a new idea for the furthering of the love of music in this country.

Music publishers are striving to give the public better music than ever before, they are spending fortunes each year to create a demand for this music, a demand which increases enormously with the opening of each theatre where music is a feature.

Motion pictures with good music are a fine type of entertainment and I believe with others that the music is fully as important as the picture. If the exhibitor will combine with his picture music which in addition to being good is also timely, I am sure his entertainment will be vastly improved. Timely tunes are the ones that the publisher has decided will suit the public taste, the ones that he is spending a fortune every year to popularize. If the picture exhibitor will join the publisher in his campaign of exploitation, if he will let his public know that the reigning song hits of the moment are first heard in his theatre, that they have been started on the way to world wide popularity by his theatre orchestra or singers, he will I believe attract larger audiences to his theatre and build up a reputation of being far ahead of the times in his particular field.

Co-operation between publisher and theatre owner can result in but one thing—success.—Leo Feist, President, Leo Feist, Inc.

That the motion picture is doing its share for the development of music as well as finding a field for the musician, is attested in Washington by the fact that nearly $500,000 was expended on film music during the past year. This included salaries, instruments, scores, appointments for musical settings, etc. Something like 300 musicians were engaged to accompany the pictures. Competent directors are installed, seven handsome organs are now put in the largest theatres and orchestras ranging from ten to thirty men are giving the public excellent music. Even the smaller type of house finds it a paying proposition to advertise the augmenting of its musicians on Sundays. Tom Moore, Harry M. Crandall and Marcus Loew, who represent the biggest motion picture interests in Washington, place no limit on the money to be expended at the musical end of the films. Each of these men placed large libraries at the disposal of his orchestral directors, so that everything worth-while of old and new compositions is at their command. The uninformed might be surprised to see symphonies, concertos and grand opera scores in these collections; the works of Tchaikovsky, Debussy, Mendelssohn, Bach, MacDowell and hosts of others.

The artistic musician is entering more freely into this field. During the past year Washington has had a number of recruits from the Boston and Philadelphia Symphony orchestras, as well as some from Baltimore, New York and elsewhere. The salary is excellent and it is an all-year position at home. The variety, sudden changes and wide range of compositions develop the musician and test his mettle, while the changes, weekly and sometimes oftener, put the players on the plane of the stock company or of opera with a frequent change of bill.

Thomas J. Gannon is director at the Palace, and Comedio O. Vioni has an orchestra of 26 men at Crandall's Metropolitan. Loew's has Leon Brusiloff, Daniel Breeskin is at Moore's Rialto.

Big Chorus in Theatre

Mr. Isaacson:

"We have just done a most unusual thing for a moving picture theatre organization: we took the California Theatre Ensemble of forty people to San Diego and gave a series of concerts down there. Our announcements were fine and press notices excellent and we made a big hit. It was a wonderful advertising idea too, if we wanted to think of it as such, but we went over so well thep are anxious to have us in a return engagement for a week.

"Will enclose one of the programs, so you can get an idea of what we did. Mr. Charles Wakefield Cadman also made a personal appearance with us one evening. Am also sending you, under separate cover, a couple of our recent programs from the California. Am adding your name to our regular mailing list, as you might find something of interest occasionally."—W. G. Stewart, Producing Director, California Theatre, Los Angeles, Calif.

Wants Jazz Music

Music Editor:

"I am wondering, Mr. Isaacson, if you could help me with regard to keeping me posted with the newest numbers of Rags, Jazz Fox Trots, Blues, etc. We have a great difficulty on this side in getting anything up to date. I would be very glad to cable or forward in the usual way by post any sum you may spend on my behalf. —Victor Sheridan, Associated Cinematograph Theatres, 75 Shaftesbury Avenue, London.

Organist Seeks Position

Music Editor:

"I understand that you have an agency through which organists can get in touch with theatre managers. I would like to get a movie organ. Have played large two manual organs in church for twenty years. Can play both popular and standard music. I want to quit teaching, and church salaries are not enough without pupils to pay expenses. Besides, I am deeply interested in the movies. —L. T. Benjamine, Algona, Iowa.

Seattle Musician

Liborious Hauptmann, master pianist and leader of Clemmer's Augmented Orchestra, Seattle, is considered one of the greatest motion picture interpreters in the entire country. He is one of those rare combinations of artist performer and artist teacher. When only seventeen he was teacher in prominent music institutes in Vienna and later in the Academic of Music in Geneva, Switzerland. He appeared in many recitals in Europe and also concertized with Mme. Carreno.

He was born and educated in Vienna and is a college graduate as well as a graduate of the Vienna Conservatory of Music and master school of Piano Playing, completing his course and receiving his diploma under the personal instruction of Emil Sauer. He studied theory and harmony under Ludwig Crande and Richard Hemberger.

The Story of Carmen

It is the square in Seville.

And now comes the toreador, Escamillo. All hail the conquering hero comes. Escamillo comes with Carmen leaning on his arm. She is dressed in her gayest, in a shawl of magnificent colors. He leans to her. "Escamillo," swears Carmen, "I love only thee." Escamillo goes into the arena, the orchestra plays. Out of the crowd comes Jose, pale, thin maddened. He calls Carmen aside and they are left alone.

Says Carmen: "You are here," "I am."

"So I was warned, and told fear for your life."

"I do not threaten you, Carmen. I love you. I come to plead with you. Let us go to a new life under the skies."

"Why ask me that, Jose? I cannot lie. I do not love you; all is ended."

"Carmen, I would save you. Come, come."

"I do not love you, I cannot love you. If I must die, so be it."

In the midst of the conversation is heard: "If thou lovest me you will be proud of me." "Love thee, shouts are heard in the arena acclaiming Escamillo, the victor.

At these shouts, Carmen rushes to enter the arena, but Jose stops her. "Let me pass, I say, let me pass."

"To him, to him the victor. No."

"Well, you fool, I love him, him—and you may kill me if you like. Strike here, or let me pass."

Jose stabs her and Escamillo rushes to her and throws himself upon her body.

The End

Now how is the opera to be presented. Naturally no theatre will give it in entirety and very few will be as ambitious as the Capitol theatre (New York) and the California theatre (Los Angeles). Those two give big bits.

Mos ttheatres will give overtures—medleys of the best airs—some even will venture some vocal numbers—say the Habanera, the Flower Song and Micaela's Aria.

How much more effective it will be when this is done to surround the music with my story printed in the program in whole or a part—or sentences flashed on the screen.

Audiences want to know what it's all about. If you use this sort of a plan they will understand. And if there is one thing which is more important than any other in music for pictures I would say:

Make the music mean all it can.
Don't leave the listeners in a quandry!

(Watch next week's issue for a continuation of this idea.)

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last twenty weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to June 5, 1920.

PICTURE — BRAND — STAR — RELEASED — PLAN BOOK

ADORABLE SAVAGE, THE (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS.....AUG. 14
"Colorful picture on a time-worn formula."—M. P. News.

ALIAS MISS DODD (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS.....JUNE 19
"Little entertaining value in this slight story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"My patrons liked this one very much. A good picture to big business one day."

ARABIAN KNIGHT, AN (HAWORTH-ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA.....AUG. 28
"Japanese star versatile in good production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This picture interested them and it did big business for three days."

AWAY GOES PRUDENCE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) BILLIE BURKE.....JULY 17
"Good idea isn't made the most of here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture which pleased. Two days to big and average business." "A pleasing picture to fair business for one week." "A rather poor picture which did not appear to have much to it. The interest and entertaining qualities appear to be lacking." "Played it one week to average and big business." "Only moderately entertaining. Billie Burke, who starred in it, was good. Returns fair."

BAB'S CANDIDATE (VITAGRAPH) CORINNE GRIFFITH.....JULY 17
"Fairly interesting story which drags considerably at times."—M. P. News.

BELOW THE SURFACE (INCE-PARAMOUNT).....JUNE 19
"Bosworth's acting and graphic incidents make entertaining picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Great—very entertaining; just what the public wants. Everything about it good. A sure fire box office attraction" "A good picture with a novel and daring story. Played it one week to big business." "A splendid production to big business for three days." "Great business. Wonderful production." "An intensely gripping drama. Played it two days to extra big and big business."

BEST OF LUCK, THE (METRO-SCREEN CLASSICS) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 17
"Impressive production, but wild melodrama in plot."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Strongly melodramatic, well produced and it pleased. Two days to average business."

BIG HAPPINESS (ROBERTSON-COLE) DUSTIN FARNUM.....SEPT. 11
"Fair entertainment in Dustin Farnum's latest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—'Only average picture but drew fairly well."

BLINDNESS OF YOUTH, THE (FOUNDATION) SPECIAL CAST (FEB. 1).....JAN. 17
"This love story has pictorial appeal."—M. P. News.

BLUE STREAK McCOY (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....AUG. 7
"Enjoyable western melodrama with star in likable role."—M. P. News.

BRANDED WOMAN, THE (FIRST NATIONAL).....SEPT. 18
"Plenty of melodramatic fireworks in this sob-sister story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Picture not up to the previous high standard of the star, Norma Talmadge."

BREATH OF THE GODS, THE (UNIVERSAL-JEWEL).....AUG. 7
"Artistic production, and star's ability raise Japanese story."—M. P. News.

BROADWAY COWBOY, A (HAMPTON-PATHE) WILLIAM DESMOND.....JULY 17
"William Desmond has an entertainment comedy here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture, playing to big audiences." "They didn't quite 'get' this one. My audience like Westerns, but they were not quite sure that they were not being 'kidded' in this. The comedy went over, however, and was well received. Think Desmond very interesting and promising star if he sticks with one company long enough to become well known."

BUBBLES (PIONEER) MARY ANDERSON.....JUNE 26
"As light and transparent as a bubble itself."—M. P. News.

CHEATER, THE (METRO) MAY ALLISON.....AUG. 7
"Fair entertainment on a "Miracle Man" sort of theme."—M. P. News.

CHORUS GIRL'S ROMANCE, THE (METRO-SPECIAL) VIOLA DANA.....AUG. 28
"The best light comedy of the year."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew well all week. Excellent picture. Viola Dana is an especial favorite." "Fair picture. Drew average audience." "Fair picture to average business." "Picture fair; business no better." "Good picture. Lots of interesting situations well done by star and capable company. Opened to nice business and held public interest all week." "Big box-office attraction, a good title, pleasing picture and a well liked star who shakes a good 'shimmy.'"

CINEMA MURDER, THE (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT) MARION DAVIES (DEC. 14).....JAN. 31
"Conventional story lifted through sumptuous production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture to average business for two days." "Newspaper publicity helped us to a wonderful Sunday business with a record-breaking Monday. The balance of the week took a gradual slump until Saturday, which closed with attendance not quite up to average. Influenza may have had a little to do with the drop. Just an ordinary production. Some spots looked weak in the direction, but the photography was excellent. Cast good and star fair." "My patrons liked this one. Played it two days to average business."
Consensus—"Good picture, average puller."

CITY OF MASKS, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ROBERT WARWICK.....JULY 24
"Warwick's latest is well fortified to please the most exacting patron."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture which pleased. Two days to average and poor business." "Average picture to average business three days."

CIVILIAN CLOTHES (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT).....SEPT. 18
"Entertaining picture with Meighan as a star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The public here is mad on the subject of Thomas Meighan, and have been eagerly awaiting his first starring picture. It's an excellent picture, and played to capacity business." "Star, picture and box-office returns all ditto, the word 'good.'" "Has met with much favor. Good money maker."

CLOTHES (METRO) OLIVE TELL.....OCT. 2
"Talky picture made from stage satire."—M. P. News.

COURAGE OF MARGE O'DOONE, THE (VITAGRAPH) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 12
"Curwood's story makes vivid and vital picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average feature which played my house three days to big business." "Well liked by my audiences and went big. Played it one week to big business." "My patrons did not think much of this one because it seemed to take up too much time with minor details, neglecting the good parts. The direction and acting did not appear to be up to standard." "Good—pulled big business during hot spell." "Not a bad picture with quite some favorable comments. Played it three days to average business." "Pleased in an average way. Average business for three days."

CRADLE OF COURAGE, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) WILLIAM S. HART.....OCT. 2
"Has plenty of action and should please."—M. P. News.

CROOKED STREETS (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ETHEL CLAYTON.....AUG. 7
"Melodrama is long on atmosphere, short on plot and suspense."—M. P. News.

CUMBERLAND ROMANCE, A (REALART PICTURES) MARY MILES MINTER.....AUG. 21
"M. M. Minter's best—a real picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture which pleased and did good business for one week." "Played it two days to average business."
Consensus—"Good picture, good puller."

CUPID—THE COWPUNCHER (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....AUG. 7
"Great entertainment with star in ideal role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good Will Rogers picture which drew more than average audiences for seven days with exceptionally good Saturday and Sunday business."

CYCLONE, THE (FOX) TOM MIX (JAN. 24).....JAN. 31
"Familiar formula makes fair picture for Mix."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Not up to Mix standard. Average business one day." "Good action, but story was left unfinished. Average business three days." "A great Mix feature which went over big to good business." "A fair production which I played three days to average business." "Mix falls down badly in this one, due to the quality of the story. Business under average for Mix and patrons disappointed." "It's a whirlwind of a picture, fit for any theatre. Average business two days." "My audience did not like this one. Played it three days to average business."

CYNTHIA-OF-THE-MINUTE (GIBRALTA-HODKINSON) LEAH BAIRD.....JULY 24
"Novel crook story suffers from development."—M. P. News.

PICTURE — BRAND — STAR — RELEASED — PLAN BOOK

DARK LANTERN (REALART) ALICE BRADY.....AUG. 14
"Draggy picture develops to an evident conclusion."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just an average production. Played it four days to average business." "A good picture to big business for one week." "Patrons did not like this one. Just an average feature to average business for three days." "Very poor production but brought fair business." "Fair picture. The star is the drawing card." "Very poor picture, box-office receipts are terrible."

DEMOCRACY (DEMOCRACY PHOTOPLAY COMPANY) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 11
"Cost a lot of money but is doubtful as entertainment."—M. P. News.

DISCARDED WOMAN, THE (HALLMARK) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 10
"Hectic melodrama with familiar stock situations."—M. P. News.

DOLLARS AND SENSE (GOLDWYN) MADGE KENNEDY.....JULY 3
"Has rather lukewarm story but should interest."—M. P. News.

DOLLARS AND THE WOMAN (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE.....JUNE 12
"Character development emphasized in interesting picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture which played to a fair house but no overflow."

DOUBLE DYED DECEIVER (GOLDWYN) JACK PICKFORD.....JUNE 26
"Pickford acts as well as O. Henry writes."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good, the kind of picture that makes a genuine hit with all kinds of folks." "Neither my patrons nor myself liked this feature. Ran it one day to poor business." "Very good; audience seemed to like it." "While this was a poor picture it drew about the usual business."

DWELLING PLACE OF LIGHT, THE (HAMPTON-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 25
"Picture is heavy and morbid, though well acted."—M. P. News.

FELIX O'DAY (HAMPTON-HODKINSON) H. B. WARNER.....SEPT. 18
"A good production from all angles."—M. P. News.

FIGHTING CHANCE, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 31
"Robert W. Chambers' best-seller provides fair entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good all around picture, well directed, with splendid locations and good action. Should please most audiences. One week to big business every day." "Excellent business." "They liked this one and it played three days to big business." "A very good picture which pleased my patrons. Played it two days to big and average business." "Played this picture one week to big business; a good production." "Opened strong. Good picture of popular brand." "Very good film. The public agrees, for business has been very good." "This picture was very well liked and had a successful run."

FICKLE WOMEN (DAVID BUTLER PRODUCTION-STATE RIGHTS) DAVID BUTLER.....AUG. 21
"David Butler has real state rights attraction."—M. P. News.

FIREBRAND TREVISON (FOX) BUCK JONES.....JULY 31
"Buck Jones practically duplicates his last picture."—M. P. News.

FOR THE SOUL OF RAFAEL (GARSON-EQUITY) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.....JUNE 12
"Colorful production carries little entertainment value."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good to big business three days."

45 MINUTES FROM BROADWAY (KANE-FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY.....SEPT. 11
"Picture is entertaining, though Ray appears to be miscast."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Doing tremendous business. Combination of Charles Ray, who is very popular around here, and the play which is well known seems to be enough reason for seeing this show." "Went over good and drew usual Ray audience. Business about average for week. Some disappointed who like star in boob parts." "Corking picture. They like it. Title a good one, even without association of Cohan's name. A change for Charles Ray and a good one." "Just fair picture. Good box office returns."

FOURTEENTH MAN, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ROBERT WARWICK.....SEPT. 11
"Some entertaining moments in Warwick's comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture, splendid theme and well done. Went very big all week." "Exceptionally good for Warwick picture; well directed, well produced." "Robert Warwick is a star who does not draw big here. Featured Bebe Daniels with him in advertising and it helped some. Personally think Warwick is fine, but can't sell him to my audiences. Picture did only fair business."

FROM NOW ON (FOX) GEORGE WALSH.....OCT. 2
"Entertaining crook story, with George Walsh, well directed."—M. P. News.

FULL HOUSE, A (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT).....SEPT. 18
"Stage farce loses its punch on the screen."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very entertaining story which went over big."

GAUNTLET, THE (VITAGRAPH) HARRY T. MOREY.....AUG. 21
"Poor treatment puts this one in the mediocre class."—M. P. News.

GIRL IN THE RAIN, THE (UNIVERSAL) ANNE CORNWALL....JULY 3
"Picture has many traits of the old time melo."—M. P. News
Exhibitor Comment—"An average feature to three days of average business." "They liked this one and it went well. One day to big business."
Consensus—"Average picture, avrage puller."

GIRL IN THE WEB, THE (HAMPTON-PATHE) BLANCHE SWEET.....JULY 31
"A splendid production from all angles."—M. P. News

GO AND GET IT (NEILAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST. JULY 31
"Fast-moving melodrama furnishes thrills and excitement."—M. P. News.

GOING SOME (REX BEACH-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 31
"Very good entertainment but not much like the original."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played it five days to big business." "Just an average feature to average business three days." "Played it one week to good business." "Picture fairly good; business so-so."

GREAT ACCIDENT (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE.....JULY 3
"This would have hit the bull's eye had comedy been developed."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good all round picture with good plot and good acting. Something new in pictures."

GREAT REDEEMER, THE (TOURNEUR-METRO) SPECIAL CAST SEPT. 4
"Van Loan contributes another winner."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine picture but not the kind the public will pay money to see. It's too religious. Screen is for entertainment, not for preachment. Fair business, but not enough to justify longer than one week run."

GREEN FLAME, THE (BRUNTON-HODKINSON) J. WARREN KERRIGAN.....JULY 24
"Kerrigan has interesting detective story here."—M. P. News.

GUILTY OF LOVE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) DOROTHY DALTON.....OCT. 9
"Star gives splendid portrayal of mis-led girl."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This is an average picture but drew more than usual business."

HAIRPINS (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ENID BENNETT...AUG. 14
"Sullivan has taken a familiar idea and made it throb with lifelike touches."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Perhaps this is Miss Bennett's best effort. A good interesting story, well directed and splendidly acted by a good stock cast. Hairpins is the typical of pictures demanded today." "A pleasing picture to big business for three days." "Played it three days to average business." "A pleasing production to average business for one day." "Seemed to please. Week's audiences were about the average. Picture was fair." "Fine picture that is being thoroughly appreciated. It opened to nice business which grew daily, indicating that the public likes this type of entertainment." "Good picture. Business about usual." "Good picture but business about as usual."

HEADIN' HOME (YANKEE-KESSEL & BAUMAN-STATE RIGHTS) BABE RUTH.....OCT. 2
"Babe Ruth makes debut and scores a hit."—M. P. News.

HEART OF TWENTY, THE (BRENTWOOD-ROBERTSON-COLE) ZASU PITTS.....AUG. 28
"Zasu Pitts gives good performance."—M. P. News.

HELD BY THE ENEMY (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 9
"Civil war romance looks good as a picture."—M. P. News.

HELD IN TRUST (LOEW-METRO SPECIAL) MAY ALLISON.....AUG. 21
"Incongruity and sadness mars entertainment value.—M. P. News.

HELP WANTED—MALE (HAMPTON-PATHE) BLANCHE SWEET.....OCT. 2
"Too light and vapid for a five-reeler."—M. P. News.

HER HONOR THE MAYOR (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....SEPT. 4
"Impossible story overacted and hardly entertaining."—M. P. News.

HERITAGE (W. L. ROUBERT PRODUCTION-STATE RIGHTS) MATTY ROUBERT.....AUG. 28
"Worth a trial on strength of title."—M. P. News.

HIDDEN CODE, THE (SULMAC-PIONEER) GRACE DAVISON...JULY 31
"Frankly a thriller and nothing more."—M. P. News.

HITCHIN' POSTS (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....SEPT. 4
"Colorful story and splendid cooperation make praiseworthy picture."—M. P. News.

HOMER COMES HOME (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) CHARLES RAY.....JULY 10
"Charles Ray scores again in another home-spun story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A splendid picture to three days of big business." "A good picture although plot is not very strong." "They liked this one and it went over big." "Good—real fun from start to finish." "Business fairly good for one week." "This picture did not go very well in my house. Just an average production."

HOMESPUN FOLKS (INCE-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 11
"Rural drama is interesting despite a theatrical touch."—M. P. News.

HONEST HUTCH (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....SEPT. 25
"Rogers scores again in human, likeable role."—M. P. News.

HOPE, THE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 4
"Antiquated plot is given impressive production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—The plot of the picture is good. Good receipts."

HOUSE OF THE TOLLING BELL (J. STUART BLACKTON-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 11
"A weird story with plenty of action and excitement."—M. P. News.

HOUSE OF WHISPERS, THE (BRUNTON-HODKINSON) J. WARREN KERRIGAN.....OCT. 2
"Kerrigan has another interesting mystery story."—M. P. News.

HUMAN STUFF (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....JUNE 26

"Costume play with Farnum as a romantic actor."—M. P. News.

IN FOLLY'S TRAIL (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MEYERS.....AUG. 28
"Carmel Meyers attractive in mild, interesting story."—M. P. News.

IRON HEART, THE (FOX) MADLAINE TRAVERSE.....JUNE 12
"Conventional steel mill story does not convince."—M. P. News.

IT'S A GREAT LIFE (EMINENT AUTHORS-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 11
"Best ever if you went to boarding school."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine production which played to good business." "Fine production. Played to good business."
Consensus—"Good picture, good puller."

JACK-KNIFE MAN, THE (VIDOR-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 14
"Human interest story rich in characterization, humor and atmosphere."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine picture. Exhibitors say so. Critics say so, but the public is slow to appreciate it. So unusual, so different from what is generally seen on the screen. A picture that is ahead of the times. Did only fair both downtown and in neighborhood section."

JAILBIRD, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....OCT. 9
"Rather obvious, but fairly diverting."—M. P. News.

JOYOUS TROUBLE MAKER, THE (FOX) WILLIAM FARNUM....JULY 3
"William Farnum scores in light role, though entertaining value is rather weak."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture with Farnum in a misplaced role. Fair box-office attraction." "Hot weather accounted for the poor business which accompanied this picture as feature was good." "An average picture which brought fair business."

KENTUCKY COLONEL, THE (NATIONAL-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 25
"Old time favorite makes moss covered picture."—M. P. News.

LADDER OF LIES, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ETHEL CLAYTON.....JULY 17
"Story of woman's self-sacrifice is interestingly told."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture. Played it two days to average and poor business." "Did very fair business for one week considering the very hot weather." "Fair—nothing to create a sensation." "A competent star with a small cast in a well handled and interesting story. Pleasing to women. Average business one day." "Although this feature seemed to be average in production it played three days to big business."

LADY ROSE'S DAUGHTER (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ELSIE FERGUSON.....SEPT. 11
"Mediocre picture made from best seller."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Opened to medium business, which kept up steadily all week in face of rainy weather. The picture has nothing startling to recommend it, but seemed to have a strong pull with the patrons by reason of the popularity of the book." "Story criticized by newspapers. Audiences appeared to like it. Large attendance." "Elsie Ferguson draws certain class, but class is limited. Each of her pictures does just about the same." "Fair business. Story not much, but star carried it over."

LAHOMA (EDGAR LEWIS-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 4
"A good production from all angles."—M. P. News.

LA LA LUCILLE (UNIVERSAL) LYONS AND MORAN.....JULY 24
"Lyons and Moran produce a good comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This is excellent in spots—but there were only a few spots. Played it on the same program with the Pathe release 'Sherry' to big business for two days."

LAW OF THE YUKON, THE (REALART) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 2
"This picture proves a disappointment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture which drew the usual business."

LET'S BE FASHIONABLE (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) MACLEAN-MAY.....JUNE 26
"Mild but pleasing picture with Ince's co-stars."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good production. Stars well liked. Two days to average and poor business." "Fair to average business three days." "An average picture to average business for three days."

LIFE'S TWIST (ROBERTSON-COLE) BESSIE BARRISCALE.....JULY 31

"Heavier-than-usual story does not suit Shirley Mason."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture which played my house three days to big business."

LOVE FLOWER, THE (GRIFFITH-UNITED ARTISTS) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 4
"Not Griffith's best, but has audience appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Exotic picture that is so cleverly done as to get right under the skin. Opened to average business, but gained daily." "A beautiful picture produced with the attention to detail and artistic environment which has made Griffith famous. Played to splendid business for two weeks."

LOVE, HONOR AND OBEY (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 11
"Too-familiar story causes interest to lag."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture. Better houses last two days than when picture opened."

LOVE MADNESS (J. PARKER READ-HODKINSON) LOUISE GLAUM.....AUG. 21
"Excellent crook story; finely acted and produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew good-sized audiences for seven day run. More sex stuff which appeals to some, but is 'passed by' by most patrons."

MADAM X (GOLDWYN) PAULINE FREDERICK.....OCT. 9
"Tremendous drama faultlessly acted and skillfully produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This is a fair picture, its only value being the fact that it was made before."

MADONNAS AND MEN (B. A. ROLFE-JANS) SPECIAL CAST....JUNE 26
"If you want a spectacular production, here it is."—M. P. News.

MAN AND HIS WOMAN (BLACKTON-PATHE) HERBERT RAWLINSON.....JULY 24
"Resembles an old-time melodrama with all the favorite hokum intact."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"While this seems to be a big picture, its drawing power was very poor."

MAN WHO DARED, THE (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL.....AUG. 14
"Probably Russell's best work to date."—M. P. News.

MASTER MIND, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) LIONEL BARRYMORE.....OCT. 9

"Drama lost amidst family squabbles and omnipresent dream ending."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Big picture which drew more than usual business." "A good picture which drew well."

MILESTONES (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 18
"Atmosphere and scenic stuff, but short on screen drama."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture but brought about the average business."

MISFIT WIFE, THE (METRO) ALICE LAKE.....JULY 31
"Often told story is fairly well done."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fair picture which played my house one week to average business."

MISS HOBBS (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY.....JUNE 26
"Frail story with a single-track idea, presents Wanda Hawley as a star"—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very pleasant—exceedingly good warm weather entertainment." "Very good. One week to big and average business." "Fair. Three days to average business." "Well liked on star's initial picture. Played it four days to average business."

MODERN SALOME, A (HOPE-HAMPTON-METRO) HOPE HAMPTON (FEB. 1).....JAN. 31
"Satisfied from all angles."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture which did big business for three days." "My patrons did not like this one at all."
Consensus—"Average picture, average puller."

MOLLYCODDLE, THE (UNITED ARTISTS) DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS.....JUNE 26
"Action, adventure and thrills are packed in Fairbanks' latest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Great—best picture Fairbanks ever made. A wonderful entertainment from start to finish." "Douglas Fairbanks has come back with a vengeance in this one. It is one of his most pleasing productions. It has a good story, good photography, good direction and was universally well received. Played it one week to extra big business every day." "A splendid production with good acting. Something new in film line." "Did good business on second week's run."
Consensus—"Excellent picture, big puller."

"Good production of mechanical and unreal plot."—M. P. News.

PERFECT WOMAN, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) CONSTANCE TALMADGE.....AUG. 7
"Constance Talmadge has had better ones than this naive and single-track story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture. Played to average business for two days. Pleased the admirers of Constance Talmadge." "Fine picture. Drew average crowds." "This is a good picture and well liked. Drew more than average crowds." "Good business. Usual Talmadge type. Rather clever."

PHANTOM MELODY, THE (UNIVERSAL) MONROE SALISBURY (JAN. 26).....JAN. 31
"Fantastic story of love and vengeance."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture to average business three days."

PREY, THE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE.....OCT. 9
"Alice Joyce has highly involved story here."—M. P. News

PINK TIGHTS (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....SEPT. 25
"Slight story, but entertaining incident, in circus picture."—M. P. News.

PRICE OF REDEMPTION, THE (METRO) BERT LYTELL.....OCT. 2
"Lytell has hectic melodrama and acting opportunity here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Big houses first two days. Rest of week fair." "Fine picture which brought good box-office receipts."

PRINCE CHAP, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST.JULY 24
"Sentimental story has few interesting moments."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played this one a week to big and average business. A good picture and they liked it." "One of the best pictures of the season." "Exceptionally pleasing to all, especially the women folks. Good business for one week." "Played it three days to big business. It pleased and they liked it." "An excellent production which drew well." "Good business. Pleasing picture."

RED LANE, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....JULY 17
"A pleasing picture which should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture to big business for one day."

REMODELING HER HUSBAND (NEW ART-PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY GISH.....JUNE 19
"Moth-eaten story lifted by Dorothy Gish's inimitable humor."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played this feature one week to big and average business. An average picture."

RESTLESS SEX, THE (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT).....JUNE 26
"Lavish production given Chambers' story which carries interesting moments."—M. P. News.

RETURN OF TARZAN, THE (NUMA-GOLDWYN) GENE POLLAR).....JUNE 12
"Fantastic picture fails to meet expectations."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine picture which did good business during its two weeks' run." "Good—appeals to all who like excitement." "Very ordinary picture. Poor box office attraction."

RIGHT TO LOVE, THE (FITZMAURICE PRODUCTION-PARAMOUNT) MAE MURRAY-DAVID POWELL.....SEPT. 4
"Worthy successor to "On With the Dance."—M. P. News
Exhibitor Comment—"Broke all house records on opening day, maintaining this standard during the week. House packed for every performance. The tremendous success of 'On With the Dance' seems to be a buarantee with patrons that they are not gambling on 'The Right to Love.' Interesting to biggest percentage of patrons." "Pleasing picture which did splendid business." "Big and costly production but not so much as entertainment. Drew well three days and fair last four." "An artistic production that packs the necessary punch. Fourth day of week and every promise of breaking all records. Universally liked and talked about." "So magnificent as to take the breath away. And still so unnatural that it fails to awaken any responsive chord in audience. Too much like acting and too little like life. People like picture in which they can insert their own personality in place of the characters in the play."

ROSE OF NOME (FOX) GLADYS BROCKWELL.....AUG. 7
"Alaskan picture holds the interest, but is not big."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pleasing picture. Box office returns fair."

ROUND UP, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT).....SEPT. 18
"Colorful western with Fatty Arbuckle as feature star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fatty Arbuckle does good work in 'The Round Up' and the reputation of the stage play helped advertise this picture and brought in more than average crowds at every matinee and evening."

SAND (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) WILLIAM S. HART.....JULY 3
"William S. Hart and his pinto score in characteristic picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very entertaining. Has a good cast and is well produced. Railroad-holdup stories seem to always fascinate my audiences. Hart does good work and more acting than heretofore. One week to big business every day." "This is a very good production. My patrons liked it very much and were pleased with Hart. Played it two days to big and average business." "Drew good audiences for three days' run. Box-office receipts good." "Just a fair picture. Not much to plot, although the acting was good." "Played this feature one week to better than summer business usually is."

SCRATCH MY BACK (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 19
"Scintillating comedy is a sure-fire hit."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A remarkably fine picture, especially for high class trade. Played it one day to extra big business." "Very good from box-office and artistic standpoint." "A good picture to big business for three days." "This feature is great and certainly pulled in the crowds. My house was packed during its run."

SECRET GIFT, THE (UNIVERSAL) KOHLMAR-CHRISTIANS....SEPT. 18
"A pretty story with appealing value."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Unusual picture, which brought more than usual business."

"Picture offers rich entertainment in every department."—M. P. News.

SHIPWRECKED AMONG CANNIBALS (UNIVERSAL) SOUTH SEA ISLANDERS.....JULY 10
"A good production which should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This picture was a riot and a fine box-office attraction." "Only average business. Cannibals do not appeal to women." "Monotonous stuff. Plainly evident most of it staged. Ran week to fair business."

SILENT BARRIER, THE (TRACY-GIBRALTAR-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 7
"Obvious story has a good climax and scenic backgrounds."—M. P. News.

SICK ABED (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) WALLACE REID.....JULY 3
"This lively comedy is a sure laugh-provoker."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good; went over with a bang, to big business for three days. "This feature pleased my patrons and it furnished splendid enjoyment for all. Two days to extra big and average business." "Played to good business despite extreme heat. Reid regaining popularity and Miss Daniels almost as big a favorite as Reid." "An excellent picture which pleased my patrons and gave splendid satisfaction. Played it one week to extra big business every day." "Feature offers Reid one of his best roles this season, and he takes advantage of the many opportunities for funmaking. Bebe Daniels shows real star qualities in the principal supporting role. The picture is well staged and acted and the patrons liked it." "Good—crowded houses all opening day with hot weather." "A regular standard feature. Three days to good business." "This picture pleased in an average way. It did big business for three days, however."

SISTER TO SALOME, A (FOX) GLADYS BROCKWELL.....JULY 31
"Dream ending does not save it from being hopelessly tragic."—M. P. News.

SKYWAYMAN, THE (FOX) LIEUT. LOCKLEAR.....SEPT. 11
"Slight story is excuse for average 'plane stunts."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Box office returns big on opening days. Too early to get entertainment angle." "Business fell down after the opening and on Saturday Tom Mix in "The Untamed" replaced it. Killing of aviator at State Fair is believed to have affected business."

SLIM PRINCESS, THE (GOLDWYN) MABEL NORMAND.....JULY 10
"Normand in kind of role which made her famous."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just a fair picture to average business for three days." "A good picture to excellent business for one week." "This one was only a fair picture and a fair box-office attraction." "Great picture. Went big." "Good picture. The crowds apparently agree, for they certainly made the box office thermometer mount."

SOUL OF YOUTH, THE (REALART) LEWIS SARGENT.....AUG. 28
"Lewis Sargent duplicates success of 'Huckleberry Finn'"—M. P. News.

SPIRIT OF GOOD, THE (FOX) MADLAINE TRAVERSE.....JULY 24
"Wishy-washy, trite story, with star miscast."—M. P. News.

SPLENDID HAZARD, A (DWAN-FIRST NATIONAL) HENRY B. WALTHALL.....OCT. 2
"Good production and acting save this one."—M. P. News.

SQUARE SHOOTER, THE (FOX) BUCK JONES.....AUG 14
"A familiar story in average western."—M. P. News.

STEALERS, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 2
"Exceptional from both directional and technical angles."—M. P. News.

STOP THIEF (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE.....AUG. 28
"Faithful and intelligent adaptation of famous stage success."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Nothing extra either in business or quality of picture."

SUDS (UNITED ARTISTS) MARY PICKFORD.....JULY 10
"Unique characterization and artistic lightings lift slender and commonplace story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pickford's latest appears to be a rather poor production. Played it one week to poor business." "Pretty good but not a knockout by any means." "Did not go well at all. They did not like it." "Played it one week." "Poor picture. Played to average ences." "Excellent picture. Holding it for second week."

SUNDOWN SLIM (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....OCT. 2
"Carey in unattractive role in complex story."—M. P. News.

SUNSET SPRAGUE (FOX) BUCK JONES.....OCT. 9
"Having enough thrills, it makes a good western."—M. P. News.

THIRD GENERATION, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST (JAN. 24).....JAN. 31
"Fairly interesting picture on a domestic theme."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture to average business one week."

39 EAST (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY.....SEPT. 25
"Entertaining picture made from stage success."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture. Brought good business." "Great picture. A sure fire money getter. Drew large crowds with large box-office results." "Not very well liked. No box-office value."

THOU ART THE MAN (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ROBERT WARWICK.....JUNE 12
"Warwick starred in average romantic drama."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture to average business three days." "A very good picture which was praised by many of our patrons. Warwick's acting very good. Held interest every minute." "Very absorbing. Has sustaining interest which pleased my patrons and brought them back strong. Big to average business two days."

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

"An Elephant's Nightmare"

(Sunshine Comedy—Fox—Two Reels)

THIS Sunshine seems to be a combination of all the points that have made these comedies popular. There are a troupe of chorus girls, lions, a well-trained monkey and an intelligent elephant and plenty of action taking place in elaborate sets. Jack Cooper is the leading comedian, but his place of honor is somewhat usurped by the elephant, who tosses the principals about, chases them upstairs and down, pushes his way through the walls into hotel bedrooms and ambles along Hollywood boulevards. The lions are less important. They merely show their teeth and growl at a baby who is left in the room with them. This scene will appear to an audience as too reckless to be funny. The monkey will win some laughs by a few clever tricks, the best of which is, rescuing a fair maiden from a toy mouse. The monk grabs the mouse by the tail and tosses him aside.

There are scenes in a hotel lobby with the wandering elephant creating chaos, that are very well done. Another burlesque of old-time melo-drama is worked in, but does not last long. Jack Cooper gets in some good work as does Larry Bowes.

Because it presents fifty-seven varieties of slapstick, has plenty of feminine beauty and has fast action, this comedy will make a hit. Vin Moore was the director.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"The Scarecrow"

(Buster Keaton Comedy—Metro)

SCORE another one for Buster Keaton! Collaborating with Eddie Kline in the fashioning and direction, the effort is capably done. "The Scarecrow" is not so funny as it is ingenious. A kitchen cabinet manufacturer or a real estate agent or an inventor of mechanical appliances which save hard work can glean a lot of information from Buster's one-room house which has all the modern conveniences—and then some. A bathtub doubles as a sofa and is converted by simply turning it over, letting the water run out into a duck pool behind the house. And the ducks and Buster use it to good advantage. The table utensils, such as the salt and pepper shakers, cream pitcher, ketchup bottle, sugar bowl, and eating implements are manipulated by ropes which hang from the ceiling. This is batting 1,000 per cent in digging up new tricks. The funniest contraption is the fake talking machine which is really a gas stove. Underneath the record is the grate and the compartment is the oven. There are so many inventions present that it is hard to enumerate them.

The comedy from this point is—well—not so good. Mostly a chase between Buster, a bulldog, a "hick" father and his flirtatious daughter. Keaton, in attempting to flee the ugly jaws of the canine, finds himself pitched through the funnel of a threshing machine. The "scarecrow" of the title finds its place when Buster poses as one in the old man's cornfield. All things considered the comedy is a live one. The new "business," the tomfoolery of the principals, and the speed which carries it—these are the values which bring it into the better class of slapsticks.—Length 2 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"Pathe Review—No. 72"

THE strips which compose this Pathe Review carry enough variety and novelty to make it an acceptable filler for any program. The different subjects cover a wide range, the first of them presenting a beautifully tinted background of Dinan, one of the famous cities of France. Its feudal castles and picturesque stream lend an atmosphere which is truly Old World. The ultra-rapid camera, still living up to its policy of slowing the action to eight times less than its normal speed, shows the "professor" juggling a tea-cup and saucer and spoon on his head.

Dr. Ditmars offers the first line of defense for science. If a new germ is discovered, the white mice are lugged out for experimenting purposes. A close-up shows them having a good time before being called to the supreme sacrifice. If you want to know what the national dance of Siam is—take it from this Review that it resembles the Egyptian. The reel winds up with the harvesting of green peas and presenting them fully canned for winter. It is an interesting shot to see the peas sorted, washed, and graded and cooked by machinery. The Review keeps to the same high standard of its forerunners. One Reel.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Poor Simp"

(Selznick—Five Reels)

ENTER Owen Moore in a mixture of farce and comedy-drama, somewhat crude in regard to the logic of its story and exceedingly funny in several incidents. The story is that of a young man who has fallen in love. It shows, in an exaggerated and humorous fashion, the depths of foolishness to which a sane young man can descend when in the above condition; his extreme mental anguish, and his mellow, self-pitying tendencies. "The Simp" is about to propose to his heart's desire, when a third party intrudes. The blinded lover mistakes his casual friendship with the girl for deep, mutual love, and wends his way to an underworld cafe to drown his sorrow. Then comes some good incident, action, and acting. The star becomes temporarily insane because of continual worry over his heart affairs and also because of a severe crack on the head. So the doctor decides to divert his mind. He "frames up" a gang to scare him to death by threatening his life. Here is more good comedy. He escapes the gang and squares himself with his sweetheart, who listens to his ravings and decides he is violently insane. The doctor finally explains and there is a happy ending.

There is even a touch of slapstick. Moore is hit on the head with a bottle, and blinks his eyes with a vapid expression before tumbling over. But it is funny, as is the incident of his drinking a bottle of water labeled "poison" and rushing to his bed to die comfortably. The star is best when acting in a dazed condition after the blow on the head. The cast is capable and the direction and detail quite faultless.

"The Poor Simp" is a whole lot funnier than it is silly, and should make a good program attraction.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"A Blue Ribbon Mutt"

(Century Comedy-Universal)

THERE is enough highfalutin comedy packed away in "A Blue Ribbon Mutt" to make up a dozen of its kind. A few dogs, a monkey, a parrot, and a genuinely funny comedian—these furnish the props which make the piece enjoyable. Universal once produced a comedy which was acted entirely by canines. This release runs it a good second because there are bits which are taken care of by the animals alone. Around a story of a "blue ribbon mutt" who is stolen off the bench by a bigger dog who substitutes himself so that his master may walk off with the money, revolves a series of new tricks and some old ones.

There isn't much continuity about it. But since it keeps moving there should be no grumbling from the observer. A few concrete culverts of huge size with Charles Dorety playing hide and seek through them in his effort to dodge his pursuers build a background of sure-fire incident. Another bit which should raise a chuckle is when the parrot jumps on the monkey's tail and proceeds to eat it. Dorety is funny without stressing his points. He doesn't work hard. There is no mugging. He has as keen a sense of burlesque as any comedian before the camera. A pair of crooks who work in unison in gesture and expression are also in the picture and they furnish some amusing moments. The dog stuff is good. "A Blue Ribbon Mutt" is snappy comedy all the way. Dorety and the hounds see to that.—Length 2 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"Brownie the Peace-Maker"

(Century Comedy—Two Reels—Universal)

WITH a farcical idea as a basis and several comedy situations, "Brownie the Peacemaker," starring that very intelligent dog of the same name, is somewhat different from ordinary slapsick. The director has avoided senseless rough and tumble action, despite the temptation of having a very large female, built along slapstick lines, for his heroine. Brownie, of course, is the main attraction. He is fully as clever as usual and in one scene, when he wakes a man sleeping at a lecture, he has an almost human expression. He also drives a tiny automobile to the rescue of the heroine with all the earnestness of a cup-racer.

The idea of transmigration of souls is used. The rotund lady, believing her husband dead, and seeing Brownie walk in with his hat on, decides that her spouse's soul has returned to earth in the body of the dog. So she holds a reception in honor of Brownie. The picture ends with the auto chase and downfall of the villain.

The action is kept up along comedy lines in fine style, and there are some good bits of business in a butcher shop. The comedy was well directed by Dan Taylor.—J. T. DICKERSON.

"The Fighting Kentuckians"

(Released Through Sterling Feature Pictures, Inc.—State Rights)

ALTHOUGH this feature has a splendid title, it is lacking in many ways when we compare it with our regular program pictures. It has a trite story, a weak cast and ordinary direction.

The scenes, which are mostly exteriors, show plenty of "shootings" and "killings" and bring to mind again the old melo-dramatic two reelers we used to witness in bygone days.

The plot of the story revives the Kentucky feud again, showing the hatred and jealousies of two powerful factions.

The heroine is in love with a young man who joins the colors and goes to France. The villain, a braggart, is drafted and, returning, brings the news of hero's death. Opportunity presenting itself, the braggart makes love to the girl and is about to win her when hero returns and rescues him from a dangerous plight.

The latter shows his gratitude by shooting his rescuer from ambush and then attacks him but is knocked senseless by the heroine. And thus the lovers are united. The cast includes Thornton Bastin, Ira Harrison, Tom Burroughs, Peter Raymond, Adel Kelly and Myra Brooks. Length 5 Reels.—FRANK LEONARD.

"The Politicians"

(Mutt and Jeff Cartoon--Fox--Two Reels)

This reel's greatest asset is the fact that it is timely in these campaign days. It contains nothing new, and merely shows the two pals going about electioneering for a candidate for mayor. Mutt has little success by legitimate means, so he steals the dog-catcher's wagon and lassos the passers-by with the idea of carrying them to the polls. The whole feminine population turns out for Jeff's support, however, and the little fellow is elected mayor.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Bulletin 70"

(Produced by Bray Pictures for New York Central Railroad)

THIS three reeler was produced especially for the employes of the New York Central Railroad. Its principal aim is instruction in the proper methods of handling freight cars and trains and the terrible results that befall those who do not "obey orders."

The scenes are taken in and around the railroad yards, a pretty little story being interwoven showing how prosperity follows those who are always "on the job" and who save their money. —FRANK LEONARD.

"The Cloud"

(Post-Paramount—Scenic)

THIS nature study transports one through the sheer beauty of its tones and tints. Tranquil waters are seen reflected with the moon and cloud effects and the spectator hardly has time to feast his eyes upon this particular shot when another view is presented which is equally as enchanting. Cloud formations follow in rapid succession. Then a view of a shore line or the branches with the moon casting glamour with its silvery rays shining through them. The offering is a series of vivid impressions. It will be all the more appreciated if the exhibitor interprets it with such a melody as MacDowell's "To a Water Lily," or "To a Wild Rose." The latter selection was used at the New York Strand in addition to a solo number by a feminine voice. Thus the audience is placed in the proper atmosphere.—Length One Reel.—LAURENCE REID.

"Everybody's Sweetheart"

(Selznick Production, Featuring Olive Thomas)

PATRONS who have enjoyed Olive Thomas' work in the past will certainly like "Everybody's Sweetheart." It has a pleasing story, a good cast and is directed in a most interesting manner.

The story is of the comedy-drama variety and resembles somewhat the "Pollyanna" variety, although the star is not injured in any way.

Had Miss Thomas lived her great success would have been achieved in stories of this kind because in them she would have "played" herself.

Although she handles the dramatic moments in this production in a convincing manner, never over acting, it is in the comedy relief that she excells.

The writer witnessed the picture at a prominent Broadway house and was surprised at the amount of enjoyment the audience, especially the women folks got out of the comedy antics of Miss Thomas. It was spontaneous.

The star is seen as a poor orphan living in an orphanage where she meets her sweetheart John. When dissatisfaction arises among the inmates over the discharge of the matron and the domineering ways of a new comer, our hero and heroine become infected.

And when one of the old men decides to leave, they do not hesitate to join him. It is here that the comedy element starts, when Miss Thomas changes to boy's regalia.

The three travelers finally arrive at "The Generals" home where John proves to be the latter's grandson. Many pretty and touching scenes are introduced in the latter scenes.

The cast includes William Collier, Jr., Joseph Dowling, Aileen Manning, Martha Mattox, Hal Wilson and Bob Hick.—FRANK LEONARD.

"The Suitor"

(Two-Reel Comedy Featuring Larry Semon—Released by Vitagraph)

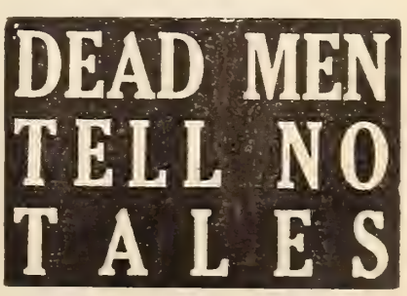
FOR unalloyed slapstick of the kind that made Sennett famous back in the early days of the oft quoted Triangle program, this two-reeler wins medals.

Fast action and novelty gags in which the cleverest kind of trick photography is used to advantage characterize the picture throughout.

Larry Semon as the star again apparently takes many chances of breaking his neck with his tumbling stunts and in this connection is ably supported by a good cast of "knockabout" comedians.

There is no story to the thing but none is needed. If they like low comedy this should please.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"Teacher's Pet"



(Two-Reel Western Featuring Hoot Gibson—Universal)

HOOT GIBSON is again seen as the handsome westerner in this two-reeler and it is through his efforts that the picture reaches an above-the-average standard.

His personality seems to reach out and dominate every scene in which he appears and this together with some dangerous stunt riding, in which he rescues the heroine, adds to the picture's attraction.

The star is in love with a pretty school teacher but through the machinations of the villain is led through two reels of exciting scenes, before he accomplishes his object—the winning of the heroine.

The cast is a good one and the director has not failed to inject plenty of action into the story. Many beautiful scenic shots of the western country are shown.—FRANK LEONARD.

"TRUMPET ISLAND"
(Vitagraph)

Spectacular Melodrama Is Rich in Action and Thrills

It doesn't take any great stretch of imagination to say that "Trumpet Island" is a spectacular melodrama which is modeled after a serial. In accepting it one must dismiss its improbabilities and look for entertainment in its fast-moving line of action—action which is punctuated with a series of highly colored thrills and bizarre incidents. Director Terriss certainly deserves credit in taking this Gouverneur Morris story and giving it a production which is marked with a clearly defined continuity. To read the synopsis in cold print the task looks well-nigh impossible. Yet here it is a picture which carries widely contrasted scenes and which holds the attention through compact sequences and the thrills and colorful backgrounds which accompany them.

It is a subject that might well have been told in twenty reels, yet Terriss has taken a flash here and there and compressed the action into feature length. The picture gets off to an excellent start and builds a deal of cumulative suspense before the lovers find ultimate happiness on the island far from civilization. It is melodramatic to the core, but it offers such a fascinating combination of thrills, convent life, society functions, jazz parties, aeroplane stunts and hair-breadth escapes that one hasn't time to hunt for flaws or recollect, that it is wildly improbable. The heroine is piloted through scenes of convent life into the mad whirl of society and eventually finds herself on a journey in the sky.

The aeroplane stunt is the big punch, for it shows the machine in an electric storm with the sudden dash to earth of the unwelcome bridegroom when lightning strikes. There is no let-down in any part of the action. Being an adventure story Terriss has developed it so that the high lights are ever dominant. The aeroplane stunt is a unique bit of camera work, even in this day when it behooves every director to fashion a story around exploits in the sky. The backgrounds are truly picturesque. There is enough variety in this offering to please every type of patron. One in search of daring action will find it in the jazz party; one who wants unadulterated thrills will find a plentiful assortment. Marguerite de la Motte, who enacts the part of the heroine, certainly has her hands full. It is her biggest part to date and she makes the most of it. Wallace MacDonald makes a vigorous hero. "Trumpet Island" has a kick in it like home-made brew. It provides a rattling good hour of entertainment. —Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

Directed by Tom Terriss.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Trumpet Island," the Vitagraph production of Gouverneur Morris' famous story of the same name, to be shown at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— is a picture full of action and play of emotion and which pilots its characters through an intense series of melodramatic scenes and situations. Indeed, it may be called spectacular because of its thrilling episodes. The element of suspense is sustained through extraordinary plays of circumstances. The action takes Eve from the convent and thrusts her into a situation where duty to her father forces her into a hateful marriage.

She is determined to seek release by a leap from the clouds during the airplane ride which follows the wedding.

The accident in the storm clouds is picturized with startling vividness. "Trumpet Island" carries many such scenes for the plot is an adventurous one. Color incident, pictorial beauty which is revealed in the cabaret scenes, and other features mark this attractive offering which is directed by Tom Terriss. A cast headed by Marguerite de la Motte and Wallace MacDonald contributes a splendid interpretation.

PROGRAM READER

When "Trumpet Island" appears at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— our patrons are certain to see one of the most graphic and colorful adventure stories that ever graced the screen. This is a Vitagraph production, adapted from Gouverneur Morris' story of the same name. It is a picture which is certain in its appeal, in its power to grip the spectator through the plentiful display of thrilling action. It is spectacular and carries the onlooker from one smashing situation to another with a rapidity which will keep him on the anxious seat. It is in a class by itself in point of scenic beauty, continued interest and dramatic climax. A cast headed by Marguerite de la Motte and Wallace MacDonald interpret the story. Tom Terriss directed.

SUGGESTIONS

Most every reader of popular fiction is acquainted with the name of Gouverneur Morris and what he stands for in the realm of literature. Make emphatic the point that his stories are always interesting. Bring out that "Trumpet Island" is as fascinating as anything he ever wrote. Mention that it is adapted by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester, both authors of distinction. Also play up Tom Terriss, the director, who has a number of high class productions to his credit. Exploit the picture as an exciting, adventurous romance which carries all the elements that build for popular appeal. Play up the scenic investiture. Mention the players. Bring out that the picture carries an aeroplane thrill which has never been equalled.

CATCH LINES

"Trumpet Island" is coming. The greatest adventure story of the year. Don't miss this offering of thrills, romance and fast-moving action.

"ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN"
(Holubar-Universal)

Absorbing Story, Well Produced and Acted

ONE expects much from Allen Holubar since he flashed across the film horizon with such excellent offerings as "The Heart of Humanity" and "The Right to Happiness." That he has duplicated these efforts is proof positive that he knows how to write stories and present them in terms of interesting screen drama. His "Once to Every Woman" may not be inspired in any sense, but he has so constructed it with the idea that situation and climax must be emphasized with full value placed upon the suspensive value, that there isn't a moment when it doesn't focus the attention. The theme is simplicity itself. It is woven around the curse of ambition and what it leads to in destroying a sense of humanity.

The central character is a country girl blessed with a remarkable voice and who is sponsored by a philanthropist that she may have an European education. Success comes to her in large measure and in her climb she suffers so from exaggerated ego that the folks back home are forgotten.

One instinctively feels that she must go through a purgatory of sorrows before she can regain her erstwhile faith and humanity. While the picture is primarily based upon character development, Mr. Holubar has given it drama by resorting to conflict. A hot-headed Italian admirer, disappointed at her inability to respond, stages a melodramatic scene which is the utmost in suspense. The heroine has climbed to the heights and is singing the stellar role in a new opera in New York when the crazed lover sends a bullet into her lungs and kills himself. And the world that bowed at her feet now has its turn to scoff.

This touch may be correct from the standpoint of adding an electrifying climax, but it doesn't convince. In the first place an artist wouldn't be forgotten so quickly. So with the populace looking elsewhere to fawn, the now voiceless girl returns to home and mother. Whether for the sake of creating a happy ending or emphasizing a note of pathos, Holubar has made the finale anti-climatic. The death-bed scene has its compensation only in giving the daughter her voice again—a voice she regains through faith. The picture is strongest in its human touches—its intimate details. Yet it carries a vigor and sweep in the dramatic scenes which is certainly caught by the spectator. Dorothy Phillips enacts the central figure with keen understanding, playing her part at all times with proper shading and feeling. The cast is entirely competent. The picture was made some time ago and was originally known as "Ambition." It certainly carries a box-office value.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Allen Holubar, the author and director of "Paid in Advance," and "The Heart of Humanity," has written and directed "Once To Every Woman," which will be presented at the ———— theatre next ———— with Dorothy Phillips as the star. Miss Phillips captivated audiences everywhere through her inspired performances in the above-mentioned subjects. And her portrayal in "Once To Every Woman" is such that it will earn her the highest praise. Mother love is the keynote of the theme and the picture shows the utter vanity of worldly ambition when not founded upon human affection.

Miss Phillips appears as a country girl, who because of her personality and voice is the pet of the family. An offer comes which will give her a musical education in Europe and she takes advantage of it. In fact she develops a case of exceptional ego, forgetting the humanity of her people. After many dramatic episodes she finally reaches the goal of her ambition—the creation of the star role in a new grand opera in New York. Then a tremendous shock causes the loss of her voice. Her new-found friends leave her. But she finds real happiness when she returns to her humble home. Allen Holubar has given the picture a fine production. Prominent in the star's support is Robert Anderson. The other players are entirely adequate.

PROGRAM READER

Allen Holubar, the author and director, and Dorothy Phillips, the star, who were responsible for such tremendous successes as "Paid in Advance," and "The Right to Happiness," form the same irresistible combination which spells a triumph for "Once To Every Woman," the Universal picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. Mr. Holubar has been called the Belasco of the screen and he again displays his rare artistry in the composition of his scenes and the manner in which he has developed his story. Miss Phillips has a role that permits her to exercise her skill and charm. The supporting cast includes Robert Anderson.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have the combination of Allen Holubar and Dorothy Phillips as a feature angle to exploit. Play up their past successes, naming them. Bring out that Holubar is the author and director of "Once To Every Woman."—that he has written a vital story of a woman's ambition and how she was compelled to suffer before her soul was purged. She had lost humanity and simplicity. Play up Miss Phillips and tell that she is one of the faw real emotional actresses of the screen. Play up the title. Your strongest bet is the combination of names. All patrons who saw "Paid in Advance," "The Heart of Humanity," and "The Right to Happiness," will remember that the Holubar-Phillips combination cannot be excelled.

"FORBIDDEN VALLEY"
(Blackton-Pathe)

An Exciting Story Concerning a Kentucky Feud

KENTUCKY life, especially mountain life, with its well known feuds, seems to have its ever enticing appeal to many of our present day authors, principally when they are seeking for atmosphere in which to develop stories with strong heart interest, thrills and dramatic moments.

The latest to enter the field is Randolph Lewis, author of "Forbidden Valley." In writing this story Mr. Lewis has been careful in the development of his plot, swinging away from the old paths which lead to so many killings and disclosing a rather new angle.

Hence we have to be satisfied with two shootings which occur in the first reel and around which the author has built his scenario.

In a peculiar way a half wit is made the central character and it is his "doings" which influence the story. His hatred and jealousy of the hero, who is a surveyor, gives him opportunity to play many dastardly tricks.

Many times the half wit is seen with gun in hand ready to pull the trigger on his rival. When courage fails him he unearths the stump of a tree and hurls it down a steep embankment nearly causing his enemy's death.

Then like the devil himself he resorts to cunning when his object is unattained, inveigling the heroine and her grandfather into the plot. And so successful is he in the art of deception that the young girl takes up her gun, enters the woods and shoots her lover. She does not kill him, however, and the picture attains the happy ending.

J. Stuart Blackton has carefully produced the feature, May McAvoy and Bruce Gordon being likable in the principal roles. William Dunn plays the villain to perfection.

Although the picture could have been developed along stronger lines, it has a good punch and should hold its own on any program.—Length, 6 reels.—Frank Leonard.

THE CAST

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

J. Stuart Blackton's latest production, "Forbidden Valley" with May McAvoy and Bruce Gordon in the principal roles, will appear at the ———— theatre on ———— of next ————.

The story is by Randolph Lewis, who is known as one of our best modern authors. Mr. Lewis has gone to the Kentucky mountains for locale in this feature and has drawn a picture of the life of these people with a trueness that should interest and excite wherever it is shown.

In the Kentucky hills lived old Ben Lee, his granddaughter Morning Glory and Dave, a half-wit, who was Ben's devoted handy man. Ben and Glory were the last of the Lees, their family having been reduced by their enemies, the Mitchells.

The feud has wiped out all the Mitchells, except one. He had been adopted when a child and taken away from the mountains, that he might never know his crimson heritage.

Jack Winslow, a government surveyor comes to the Valley and falls in love with Morning Glory. Dave becomes jealous and through artful deception inveigles the girl and her grandfather into a plot to kill the young surveyor.

The heroine picks up her gun and shoots her lover but her shot does not prove fatal. In the end the wounded hero comes to his remorseful sweetheart, making a very touching climax.

The picture is well produced, has a splendid cast and shows some beautiful views of the rugged scenery.

PROGRAM READER

If you care for stories with strong dramatic moments, thrills, suspense and plenty of heart interest, do not fail to see J. Stuart Blackton's production "Forbidden Valley," which will appear at this theatre on ———— with May McAvoy and Bruce Gordon as stars.

Randolph Lewis, who has written many interesting stories for the screen is the author and he has injected a "punch" into this feature that takes it away from the usual variety of productions which have dealt with the same plot.

Kentucky mountain life is featured with its deadly feuds as a basis. The central figure is a half-wit whose dastardly tricks are bound to excite any audience, especially when he takes advantage of a situation and through artfulness succeeds in getting the heroine to shoot her lover. The shot does not prove fatal and it is a touching moment indeed when the wounded hero meets his remorseful sweetheart.

The picture is well directed, shows some beautiful scenes of the rugged country and has a splendid cast.

SUGGESTIONS

Although this picture isn't a world beater by any means, it has a well produced, interesting story and should hold your patrons in their seats throughout.

Doubtless you have seen many pictures with the Kentucky feud element used as a basic plot.

Some of them have been entirely too dramatic, the authors' ideas principally being a development of a series of shootings throughout. In this feature a half-wit is relied upon to furnish most of the excitement.

The name of J. Stuart Blackton and the author, Randolph Lewis, together with the stars and a good cast should furnish you with good exploitation values. And don't forget the name of William Dunn who plays the half-wit.

"PASSION'S PLAYGROUND"
(First National)

An Artificial Story Holds It Back

KATHERINE MACDONALD is as pleasing to the eye as heretofore in this production, but she has been given a story, adapted from the novel by C. N. and M. A. Williamson that is too artificial to be thoroughly entertaining. It has been well directed and with the popular star and a good supporting cast it will give average entertainment.

The story hinges about the similarity of names of two girls, and it is upon this "trick" premise that all the drama flows. This, and the fact that the end becomes quite obvious after a time creates an irritable feeling.

The star plays Mary Grant, a convent girl, who runs away to Monte Carlo, where she starts gambling. Here she meets Prince Vanno and falls in love with him, and he with her. The Prince's brother has married another Mary Grant, who has a shady past and the inevitable misunderstandings result. The climax is a rescue of the heroine Mary from the clutches of a gang of crooks by the Prince.

The sub-titles at times tend to be too laborious and stilted. But the foreign atmosphere is very faithfully kept up throughout, thanks to J. M. Barry who directed. The star is thoroughly satisfactory at all times. She is supported by Morman Kerry as the Prince, who is quite capable, while others in the cast are Nell Graig as the other Mary and Rudolph de Valentine as her husband. Edwin Stevens and Virginia Ainsworth, who play the crooks, get over some good comedy bits.

Despite the good atmosphere and the cast, "Passion's Playground" has a plot so patently "cooked-up" for the occasion, that it is only good for average entertainment. The star is especially good in her emotional scenes.—Length, 6 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Katherine MacDonald, who has won for herself the title "the most beautiful woman on the screen," will play the stellar role in "Passion's Playground," which will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. This photoplay is an adaptation of the book, "The Guests of Hercules," a novel by C. M. and A. N. Williamson, which won high favor when it was first published.

"Passion's Playground" is said to give Miss MacDonald the most fascinating role of her screen career. She plays the part of Mary Grant, the daughter of a gambling father and a runaway mother. With such ancestry it is no wonder that she flees from her convent home, and with her small inheritance, proceeded to "break the bank" at Monte Carlo. From this point on the action centers about this beautiful, unknown girl and her adventures in the playground of Europe. Princes fall in love with her, gamblers fear her, and all admire her.

The picture works up to a thrilling and exciting climax. It is expected that there will be no vacant seats at the ———— during the run.

PROGRAM READER

Where is the most romantic spot on the earth? Where is it that there is romance every moment and spice and adventure every minute? What is that city of thrills and adventure that has a thousand suicides to her dishonor and the same number of quickly-made millionaires? Monte Carlo is the answer, and Monte Carlo is the playground of the world—the Mecca of gamblers from the four corners of the earth. It is in Monte Carlo that the story of "Passion's Playground" is laid. "Passion's Playground," which will be the feature attraction at this theatre on ————, stars the lovely Katherine MacDonald. It is adapted from the novel "The Guests of Hercules," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, and it is a story of gay Monte Carlo, with its sins and its happiness. It will be shown at the ———— theatre for ———— days. When you see it, decide whether you agree with some of the foremost picture critics. They have called Katherine MacDonald "the American beauty," and "the most beautiful woman on the screen."

SUGGESTIONS

The star and the story are the two best bets on this one. Katherine MacDonald has won a high reputation for her beauty. Do not forget her title as "the American beauty." "The Guests of Hercules" should be mentioned for it will certainly draw some patronage. Book store tie-ups are possible and should be profitable. Lobby photographs of the star should help. Create the Monte Carlo atmosphere as much as possible in your catch lines.

CATCH LINES

"BLACKMAIL"
(Metro)

Viola Dana Gives Color to Familiar Story

PATRONS who look in on this latest release of Viola Dana's will be reminded of its familiar design. The formula of the heroine who, raised in a life of crime, blocks the blackmailing tactics of one of her kind, and finds regeneration through the influence of love has often been done. Usually it gets over because of the wealth of sympathy extended to the downtrodden character regardless of the fact that the protagonist may revel in his or her life of crime. After a slow start, "Blackmail" picks up speed and finishes with plenty of strength, though there are lapses toward the conclusion which are a trifle draggy. Certain scenes are held too long. Which seems to be a fault with Metro directors.

One may be safe in saying that whatever interest the picture carries is centered in the dynamic personality of the star. She is the daughter of a successful criminal who, when he shuffles off, warns her to play the game as he played it. She is determined to blackmail a young millionaire out of his money, but her scheme fails through the designs of a certain lawyer. From this point the picture becomes wholly obvious. One knows in advance that it will be a battle of "give and take" between them with the girl losing ground through her lack of resourcefulness. Her former pal comes on the scene to blackmail her for going straight. The lawyer, whom she has married, sets a trap in which she unwittingly falls. But she emerges with flying colors. The huge sum of money is there to be taken, but Flossie falters through love for the man who trusted her.

The action doesn't present any highly colorful melodramatic scenes. For the most part it travels in a single groove. It is to Miss Dana's credit that she interprets the heroine with so much animation. Certainly the excuse is there to give it a sob sister version, with much emphasis placed upon the ethics of right and wrong, and character development and what not. The star finds regeneration through coming into contact with the only decent influence of her life. Not through preaching advice. Technically the picture is not above the average. The lightings are often harsh and the sets are—well just sets. Wyndham Standing makes an interesting figure of the lawyer. "Blackmail" is an average entertainment which pleases after a fashion.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Viola Dana, the dainty and piquant Metro star, will appear at the ———— theatre beginning ———— in her latest photoplay entitled, "Blackmail." This is a crook story which carries an adventurous line of action and offers the spectator the utmost in suspense. It is quite a departure from the star's previous pictures, which is occasion to say that it provides her a chance to display her versatility. Miss Dana enacts the part of Flossie Golden, the daughter of a clever criminal—a criminal who is adept in avoiding arrest. A time comes when he is caught and Flossie is forced upon her own resources.

It happens that she meets a young man with a tremendous bank account and she is fully determined to blackmail him out of a goodly share of his fortune. But his lawyer comes to the rescue and frustrates her plan. Therefore Flossie is eager to revenge herself with him. But she falls in love—a love which is reciprocated. Thus through his influence the girl is regenerated. This picture in the mere telling does not do justice to its wealth of melodramatic incident and the charming by-play which expresses the action. Suffice to say that it is a worthy picture for Miss Dana's vital and vibrant personality. Wyndham Standing plays opposite and contributes a pleasing performance.

PROGRAM READER

That piquant and dainty star of Metro productions, Viola Dana, will make her appearance on the ———— screen next ———— and ———— in what is considered one of the most fascinating pictures of her career. The offering is entitled "Blackmail" and is adapted by A. S. Le Vino from Lucia Chamberlain's Saturday Evening Post story of the same name. The action pilots the star through a series of exciting and adventurous scenes with full emphasis laid upon the romantic element. While a different type of picture from "A Chorus Girl's Romance," it is a fitting companion piece to that excellent contribution. How the heroine is regenerated through love is told in five reels of most fascinating sequences. Wyndham Standing is the leading man.

SUGGESTIONS

Tell that this is a fitting companion picture to "A Chorus Girl's Romance," even though it is entirely different in theme and characterization. Mention that no star has had such a test of versatility as Viola Dana and that she has displayed time and again that she is a very capable actress. Play up the fact that this picture is a crook melodrama which revolves around a girl raised in crime, but who is determined to go straight through the influence of love. Mention that Wyndham Standing is in the cast. Many of your patrons are familiar with his work and enjoy it.

CATCH LINES

See the fascinating melodrama, "Blackmail," with the piquant and dainty Metro star, Viola Dana, in one of her most colorful characterizations.

Did she resolve to go straight when she met the attractive lawyer who intended to sue her for blackmail? See Viola Dana in the clever crook comedy-drama, "Blackmail."

"SWEET LAVENDER"
(Realart)

Ideal Vehicle for Star, Though It Lacks Substance

MARY MILES MINTER has become so accustomed to playing a certain type of character that the stories which carry it can be termed "vehicles" and not go wrong. "Sweet Lavender," an adaptation of Pinero's play of the same name, is strictly made to order in that it permits the star to express her charm and personality in a part with which she has long been identified. Again she is the adopted waif who radiates sunshine and brings good out of evil through her faith in humanity. Yet through five reels the play never gets beneath the surface, probably because of the arbitrary action. The characters and several scenes are so firmly planted that it never extracts any sympathy. This despite the fact that the young lovers are kept apart because of their widely separated stations in life.

Yet "Sweet Lavender" has something in its favor that was absent in many of its forerunners and that it is its note of dramatic conflict. But in revealing this note the story hearkens back to a time when it was the popular thing to distinguish between aristocracy and poverty. The heroine's father is also the guardian of her fiance, though he is unaware of the relationship. He had married far below his station and taunted his wife about it. She afterward left him and died in childbirth, the infant being adopted by a sister, who was careful to hide the news from the father. The picture depends for its action upon the efforts of the adopted mother and guardian to keep their charges apart.

When these scenes are shifted about for the sake of contrast, the incidents depict certain high jinks carried on by the undergraduates, of which the hero is a member. Finally heroine is packed off to boarding school and the climax comes when, in an attempt to reach the neighboring college town, where her beloved is supposed to be ill with small-pox, she falters by the wayside though rescued by her father, who repairs the injury by acknowledging his relationship and consenting to the marriage of the children. This climax is obviously planted and so fails to convince. The heroine has left the house at night in a pouring rainstorm, though the subsequent scene shows her miles distant—the sun shining radiantly and her clothes clean and dry. The good points of the picture are found in the appealing charm of the star and the comedy relief furnished by Theodore Roberts in the part of an absent-minded professor. Certain intimate touches compensate for the arbitrary action.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

Directed by Paul Powell.
Photographed by William Marshall.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Sweet Lavender," the Realart picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with Mary Miles Minter, is an adaptation by Beulah Marie Dix of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's play of the same name. On the stage it has had a long and honorable career. The reason for this may be found in the gentle humanity and genial humor of the play. As "Lavender" Miss Minter is given fresh opportunities to demonstrate her versatility. There is plenty of humor in the part of the girl who helps her foster-mother in the conduct of the college boarding house.

With Clem Hale she has a beautiful romance, almost wrecked when his stepfather forbids the match. It can be imagined what happens when the stern father finds that the girl he feels "beneath his stepson is really his own daughter. "Sweet Lavender" abounds in simple, homely scenes. Realart has preserved the full, wholesome character of the play and it certainly makes an ideal choice for Mary Miles Minter. Prominent in her company are Theodore Roberts, Milton Sills, J. M. Dumont, Sylvia Ashton and Harold Goodwin. Paul Powell directed the picture.

PROGRAM READER

With Mary Miles Minter as the star, supported by a cast of exceptional players, such as Theodore Roberts, Harold Goodwin, Sylvia Ashton, Milton Sills, and J. M. Dumont, Realart will present at the ———— theatre next ———— a film version of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's celebrated play, "Sweet Lavender." Upon the stage this subject has appeared in all English-speaking countries. It is a play filled with gentle humanity and homely humor. The producers have spared no pains to make "Sweet Lavender" a worth-while offering. Paul Powell, the director, will be remembered as the man in charge of Mary Pickford's production of "Pollyanna," while Beulah Marie Dix, who made the adaptation, has been successful with a multitude of photoplays.

SUGGESTIONS

The fact that this is an adaptation of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's celebrated play should be taken advantage of in exploitation. Bring forth that it has appeared in the four quarters of the globe upon the stage. Emphasize that it tells a story of sweet simplicity, gentle humanity, homely humor and charming sentiment. Tell that it makes an ideal choice for Mary Miles Minter. Feature the star and bring forth that she has as big a following as any actress on the screen. Feature the other members of the cast. Milton Sills and Theodore Roberts are well known to your patrons. You might decorate your lobby and interior in lavender. Artificial flowers of lavender color would help a great deal toward atmosphere.

"MADAME PEACOCK"
(Nazimova-Metro)

Picture Looks Artificial Through Poor Direction and Acting

THERE hasn't been the best co-operation in making this picture a "better than average" production. Whatever merits it possessed in its original "satevepost" version have been eliminated in its screen translation, so much so that one only recognizes its several faults. The author has written a story of the theatre in which the central character, in her mad passion for applause, lives to satiate it on and off the stage. This is a colorful drawing and as far as making it vivid and vital Nazimova succeeds. But she fails entirely in giving it a convincing quality. The star is responsible for the adaptation. In being the chief cook and bottle washer she has taken upon herself too great a burden. This may be a close adaptation or it may not, but one thing is certain, the characterization is faulty and the plot never leaves its single-track groove.

Scenes that are meant to be serious loom up as artificial or miss their mark entirely. Principally because the star and director have failed to catch the psychology of the character. In fact the interpretation almost borders upon burlesque and this effect is heightened through bad lighting. And there are times when the scenes are held too long, with the result that the action stops. There is scarcely a situation that rings true. Particularly faulty is the first night at the theatre, when the star is forced to play "second fiddle" to a minor figure. The scene shows the latter at a sewing machine and the leading critic starts a stampede in her favor after marking down notes on his cuff.

Nazimova, in making the adaptation, has awarded herself the acting opportunities, with the result the picture suffers from lack of contrasts. The figure of the playwright looks like a fledgling out of high school and he registers constant sadness over the star's flights of temperament. Nazimova enacts a dual role here, playing the title part and the lesser figure who usurps her place. Only in the interpretation of the latter does she reveal any of her talent for pantomime. The picture appears to be badly cut in places, for certain incidents are not unietd. There is no warmth about the title character. Nor can any sympathy be expressed for it. And because the full value is lost it doesn't hold the interest. Doubtless the star will draw them in, but they are apt to be disappointed.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Nazimova, who is considered the supreme artist of the screen, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Madame Peacock," an adaptation by the star herself of a story by Rita Weiman. This picture takes the actress through scenes which call for a deal of emotional stress. She is compelled to enact the arduous task of a dual role and her histrionic capabilities are taxed to the utmost. Yet she is artist enough to make her performance appear like the merest child's play. The story concerns an actress who is so wrapped up in her art and her position on the stage that her life is guided by an exaggerated ego.

She has played the peacock lady for so long that she finds herself playing it off the stage. The gist of the idea is to present the fate of too much adulation and success. For a time comes when the actress is forced to bow acknowledgement to a less publicized member of her profession. Not until then is Jane Goring able to see the humanity of everyday life. Intimate details of life behind the footlights are caught by the director and brought to the spectator's attention. There is plenty of dramatic conflict here. Nazimova has surrounded herself with capable players. The direction is adequate.

PROGRAM READER

She strutted and posed in the character of "Madame Peacock." The whole world paid her homage. She was the idol of the stage. Little did she care for the envy of the less fortunate. Applause was food to her. But a time came when the gods smiled coldly. Her day of power was ended. She had to give way to another. What was lost in tributes was compensated in the thought that she had found herself. See Nazimova, the incomparable star, in one of her most fascinating pictures. "Madame Peacock" is by Rita Weiman and offers the actress a role which tests her emotional capabilities. And she gives a performance which is rich in vitality and color. It is a picture of intimate life behind the footlights. Next ———— at the ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Just tell them that Nazimova is coming to the ———— and you will be certain of a healthy patronage. Emphasize, however, that the star appears in a new role—something entirely different from her previous assignments. Tell that the story is an adaptation of Rita Weiman's Saturday Evening Post story and that Nazimova scenarioized it. Make use of the title. Bill the picture as an interesting drama of a fascinating personality. Tell that it is a story of the theatre. Most patrons react to such stories. Play up the star's name, featuring her past successes. Bring out that the star enacts a dual role.

CATCH LINES

See the incomparable Nazimova in "Madame Peacock," a picture of the theatre. The magnetic star is at her best.

Pearl White Makes Thoroughly Interesting Alaskan Picture

PEARL WHITE certainly shows off her accomplishments as a finished screen actress in this production. It is she, together with Director Charles Giblyn, who make "Tiger's Cub" better than an average drama of Alaska and turn it into a gripping picture. The story, which is from the novel by George Goodchild, furnishes good action and tense situations that make suitable screen material, but in its denouement—when the principal characters are being brought safely out of their troubles—it is necessary to call upon a very unexpected and unsatisfying "repentant-on-his-deathbed" confession to clarify the atmosphere.

Pearl White plays an Alaskan girl—the supposed daughter of an unscrupulous character. She is introduced in a toboganning scene. It may be questioned whether Alaskan girls find such great pleasure in winter sports. We can't imagine a light-house keeper going rowing for exercise. But anyway, the star makes a hit in the very beginning by tumbling off the toboggan and shaking the snow out of her golden locks. Thus it is throughout. In the lighter moments and the romantic scenes, she is vivacious and pleasantly coquettish, and in the climax she is effectively dramatic.

The story is laid in the snowy North. "Tiger" (the star's father) and his pal cheat a man out of his mine at the gambling table and murder him. It is called suicide and the two make their getaway. Slark, the second of the murderers, insists upon marrying :: the Cub," and the star, fearing that her mother will suffer, complies. Then comes a thrilling, well acted, but somewhat frank, climax when Slark takes his bride to his cabin. The hero, a son of the man who has been robbed and murdered, comes to the rescue, and a woman who has been previously wronged by Slark ends that gentleman's career with a revolver. "The Tiger," who is discovered, by the cooked-up confession, to be no father to the star, is marched off to jail.

There are some unusually beautiful exteriors, and the stretches of unbroken snow create a real Alaskan atmosphere. Thomas Carrigan, J. Thornton Baston and Frank Evans are capable supports.—Length, 6 reels. —Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Screendom's greatest idol, Pearl White, will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— in her second feature production, "Tiger's Cub." Miss White first won renown as a serial actress. It was in "The Exploits of Elaine" and the "Perils of Pauline" that she gained thousands of admirers. Today, the mere mention of her name is enough to attract crowds to any theatre in the land.

Miss White has deserted serials and is now making feature productions. Her first was "The White Moll," and "Tiger's Cub," which follows this, is a gripping story of Alaska, filled with action and crammed with romance. Through it runs the spirit of that land of the Far North, a spirit of endless adventure. The story is from the pen of George Goodchild and Charles Giblyn directed.

The stretches of unbroken snow shown in the picture carry one into the depths of white Alaska, and form a fitting background for this story of primitive men and primitive passions. The supporting cast includes Thomas Carrigan, who plays opposite the star, J. Thornton Baston, John Davidson and Frank Evans. "Tiger's Cub" will be shown for ———— days.

PROGRAM READER

Pearl White, undoubtedly one of the greatest stars of the picture world, will be the attraction at this theatre on ————, in "Tiger's Cub," her second feature production. Miss White won her fame in the world-famous serials in which she first appeared. In "The White Moll," her first feature production, she showed herself to be a real dramatic actress, and she has followed this up with "Tiger's Cub," a gripping story of Alaska, which gives her a role that suits her admirably. The story is from the pen of George Goodchild and is one of the most thrilling variety. It deals with a young girl born and brought up in Alaska, the daughter of an unscrupulous gambler. Around her Fate weaves a net that seems to cut her off forever from love and happiness. The picture works up to a sweeping climax and eventual unraveling of the circumstances. "Tiger's Cub" is a feature you will regret having missed, if you do not see it on ————.

SUGGESTIONS

There are few stars better known than Pearl White, and this gives you the cue for your exploitation. If you have not run "The White Moll" you can use a teaser campaign of this style, "Did you know—Pearl White is back in feature productions?" "Tiger's Cub" was published as a novel and library circulation statistics can tell you its popularity in your particular section. Southern exhibitors can create the "snowy" atmosphere by lobby and stage decorations. This would be impractical in the North at the present season. Thomas Carrigan is worth a share of your copy.

CATCH LINES

Pearl White, the most beloved of all screen actresses, in a thrilling drama of the North.

Ice-bound Alaska sometimes breeds the hottest passions of hate, revenge and jealousy. "Tiger's Cub" is the most gripping drama of the year, with the most attractive star of all time.

"LOVE'S FLAME"

Story Has Distinctive Appeal

LEWIS REEVES HARRISON has written an interesting story in "Love's Flame," and one that should make an impression on any audience wherever it is played.

Although it contains no startling moments and ends abruptly, its interesting qualities lie in the fact that the plot is rather novel, with a few unexpected twists introduced to make the spectator set up and take notice.

The stars, Thomas Carrigan and Vivienne Osborne, not only play their roles in a thoroughly convincing manner, but add a sort of color to the picture, for they are splendid types of the characters they portray.

Discretion was also used in selecting the supporting cast, the members of which are splendid actors, typical in their roles.

Reginald Barlow stands out in the character of the father, giving a faithful performance.

Carl Gregory also lends his hand as director, building his scenes to striking climaxes.

The locale of the story is laid in France and shows the love of an American officer for a French girl. Although he discovers that there is a young child in the house and that his sweetheat has two suitors, he remains faithful, winning her in the end over her father's objection. The child proves to be her sister's.

This picture has a happy combination and a distinctive appeal.—Length, 5 reels.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Love's Flame," with the well known stars, Thomas Carrigan and Vivienne Osborne, will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— of next ————.

The story which is one of unusual development is by Louis Reeves Harrison, and shows the manner in which a beautiful young French girl solves the marriage problem.

She is loved by three officers, two of whom are Frenchmen and the other an American. It is during the world war period and an awkward moment arrives when the lovers discover that there is a young child in the home of the girl they love.

Suspicion seizes the minds of the French officers and they walk away in silence. The American remained and said, "I believe in you."

Her choice was made—body and soul and she gave herself to the American to have and to hold—but then the American had to fight to clear her name and restore the child to the absent mother for whose love it was yearning.

And then he had to fight parental objection, for her father, an officer of the old school, had set his face against the match.

Our heroine realizing that her father's uncompromising attitude will rob her life of its greatest experience, makes a determined stand and with her sister's aid succeeds in winning over the father.

The picture is well produced with a strong supporting cast.

PROGRAM READER

Louis Reeves Harrison has written a story in "Love's Flame," which will appear at this theatre on ———— of ————, that should make its appeal to every patron of this house.

The story has a strong theme, has plenty of love interest and heart interest and is directed in such a way that one cannot help but become intensely absorbed as the tale unfolds.

Capt. Clay, an American aviator, becomes enamored of a beautiful French girl. There is an awkward moment when he discovers that there is a young child in the house, a moment made more awkward by the appearance of not one but two of Adele's former suitors.

Believing that there is some scandal in the young girl's life the Frenchmen walk away in silence. The American remains and says, "I believe in you."

Her choice is made—she gives herself body and soul to the American. But then the American has to fight to clear her good name and restore the child to the absent mother for whose love it was yearning.

And then he had to fight parental objection, for her father, an officer of the old school, had set his face against the match.

See "Love's Flame" with Thomas Carrigan and Vivienne Osborne in the leading roles. It will interest you.

SUGGESTIONS

When you book this picture play up the stars as strongly as you can. Give them all the publicity you can get for they can stand it.

Also mention that the story is from the pen of Louis Reeves Harrison, a well known newspaper man, and run a synopsis of it in your town papers, for it certainly will interest.

Although the locale of this story is laid in France during the late war, it has nothing to do with "battles" and is a purely interestingly developed love story with enough incident injected to make it hold its own on any program.

And do not forget to play up the cast for they are splendid actors and typical in their roles. Special mention should be given to Reginald Barlow in the character of the father.

CATCH LINES

She had three lovers, two were Frenchmen and the other an American. Whom did she choose and why? See "Love's Flame."

How did the young French girl overcome her father's objection to the American officer? See "Love's Flame" with Thomas Carrigan and Vivienne Osborne in the principal roles.

There was a child in the house and it caused two of her lovers to doubt her honor. Whose child was it? See "Love's Flame."

"WANTED AT HEADQUARTERS"
(Universal)

Clever Night Scenes Provide the Interest Here

A SERIES of clever night scenes depicting the plotting of a group of criminals in their endeavor to hold up a train carrying gold provide moments of interest in this rather ordinary story. One sees flashes of locomotive headlights, the engineer silhouetted against the reflection, the tracks and switches and movements of the bandits, and the combination of these effects is certainly sure in its suspensive value. Not so much can be said for the introductory scenes nor the concluding ones. In fact the early sequences are rather confusing and this faulty continuity continues after the actual robbery itself. The robbers linger on the scene and credulity is stretched when a truckman is employed to lug the loot away, disguised as chemicals.

Why couldn't this character be identified with the bandits? Certainly they wouldn't be so naive as to employ a stranger. The action presents a good deal of a puzzle and the motive of the heroine, the master mind of the group, is never explained. Nor the reason why she should be double-crossed. The picture is based upon the formula of a girl destined to go straight because of sentimental feeling and the fact that she hasn't been trusted by her cohorts. The director has failed to catch the psychology of the characterization. Arbitrary planting of scenes destroy any convincing quality it might have possessed. The heroine is in the employ of a gold magnate and her scheme is to decipher the code of the moneyed train which will arrive on a certain schedule.

Disjointed scenes after the plot is revealed eliminate the suspense until the night photography is flashed. The picture stops dead after the robbery. One sees a series of arguments and fights between the bandits who are seemingly waiting for the police to come and capture them. The actors who interpret the bad men are not dressed correctly for the undertaking. One or two appear as if ready to take a canter through a park. There are several slips in the story which might be due to cutting. But the heroine reforms through the trust of an amateur detective. Eva Novak is attractive as the heroine, and L. C. Shumway gives the most convincing performance. George Chesebro plays with too much enthusiasm. A little editing here and there would make this a clever crook story. However, the camera work will carry it by.—Length, 5 reels.—Lawrence Reid.

THE CAST

Kate Westhanger.....Eva Novak
Moya Flanbaugh.....Agnes Emerson
Michael Pretherson.....L. C. Shumway
Geo. Flanbaugh.....William Marion
Ralph Sapson.....Lloyd Sedgwick
Col. Westhanger.....Howard Davis
Tommy Carter.....George Chesebro

Directed by Stuart Paton.
Photographed by Harold Janes.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Wanted at Headquarters" is the name of the Universal feature which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring Eva Novak, a star, heretofore identified with comedy-dramas. This offering is a crook melodrama which is marked by clever photography. Particularly effective are the night scenes which depict the criminals executing their plans for robbing the gold train. The heroine, Kate Westhanger, is the secretary to the financier who is expecting a gold shipment on a certain day. The arrival of this train and the details of the shipment are sent to him by code, but Kate being the master mind of the outfit, sees to it that the code is deciphered. And plans are made ready for the robbery.

The train is speeding on in the night and the reflection of the searchlights, the glare on the tracks and the figures silhouetted in the dark—these are scenes which build the utmost in suspense. The robbers are foiled by the resourceful girl, who feeling that she has been double-crossed by them and deeply in love with a young man who is as honorable as she is dishonest, determines to go straight. The picture presents a number of tense situations with the element of suspense being dominant in all of them. Miss Novak makes an attractive figure of the heroine and plays with a sure and effective touch.

PROGRAM READER

What would you do if you were wanted at headquarters? Would you evade the law and run away or would you stand your ground? This is the problem that confronted Eva Novak in the fascinating crook melodrama, "Wanted at Headquarters," which comes to the ———— next ———— and ————. She was the head of a band of desperate criminals who were determined to rob a gold train. They were all wanted at headquarters—even Eva. But the authorities could gather no evidence against them. Until——. But this remains for you to discover. You will see a most intersting picture—one that carries some splendid thrills.

SUGGESTIONS

This title is a winner and should be exploited in every way possible. Teasers and door-knob hangers with the title printed across them would excite curiosity. You might get out some twenty-four sheets for billboards with the title on them and nothing else. This will excite attention also, for people will wonder who is the criminal amongst them. Or whether the flash is for the job of catching some well known crook. Play up that it is an exciting crook melodrama which carries some wonderful night photography. Make use of Eva Novak's name. Tell that she is equally at home in melodrama as she is in comedies or farces. Feature stills of her. Bring out that she is a sister of Jane Novak.

CATCH LINES

She was wanted at headquarters, but she possessed a master mind and avoided arrest. How did she do it? By falling in love with a detective or evading the law? See Eva Novak in "Wanted at Headquarters."

"CURTAIN"
(First National)

Lifelike Story Suffers from Mechanical Development

HERE is a story of the theatre which retains its lifelike quality even with an uninspired and mechanical development. Written by Rita Weiman, it carries for its central idea the pattern of the successful stage star who gives up her profession for a domestic life only to return to it after she has suffered disillusionment. This is a sure-fire theme and the figures of the story are recognizably real, but they have been so mechanically treated that most of the situations miss their mark. It is such a simple story that Director Young may be excused in elaborating the introductory reels. Once over the planting of the characters and the frequent scenes of dinner parties, he has told it in a straightforward manner. Where he seems to have erred is in not giving it an adequate punch.

Surely one expected more from the climax when the philandering husband returns home to discover that his wife has returned to the stage. One anticipated a stormy scene between them, but it was dismissed with three pointless subtitles. She tells him, "The time is past when you can tell me how to conduct myself." He replies, "If that's your idea, I'll arrange a divorce and keep the boy." And she retorts with, "I'll get the divorce and keep the boy." The philanderer walks out of the dressing room while the love-sick playwright finds a chance to renew his affection.

The picture relies entirely upon padded interludes to keep it going. Close-ups of banquets, horses, stables and dress rehearsals occupy a good deal of the action. These same shots are really the highlights of the offering, since the dramatic moments have been subordinated. The heroine, whose name is in electric lights, might have displayed some of the spark which made her a star. But the figure is interpreted in an indifferent manner by Katherine MacDonald. Her beauty, however, is always compelling. The title editor puts words into her mouth which are flowery in the extreme. In fact much of this picture's shortcomings can be attributed to the captions. James Young is best with his atmosphere and technical details. His action doesn't carry much vitality, though it is arranged with a good continuity of scenes. Charles Richman returns to the screen after a long absence and plays his part effectively.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— is "Curtain," an adaptation of Rita Weiman's Saturday Evening Post story of the same name, with Katherine MacDonald as the star. This is a story of the theatre—a story of an actress who gives up her profession for a domestic life but who returns to the footlights when disillusionment casts its shadow in her heart. The role of Nancy Bradshaw permits the beautiful star the utmost expression—a role of which she is quick to take advantage. Nancy's name is in electric lights and Dick Cunningham, a man about town, is one of those who worships at her shrine. He is so convincing in his effort to win her that she readily consents to be his wife.

Three years of happy married life are her reward, until a time comes when her husband practices his old philandering game. Yet she trusts him implicitly until the evidence is overwhelming that he has violated the marriage vows. So she returns to the stage and stardom, finding ultimate happiness with the playwright who has never ceased to love her. The picture releases several dramatic scenes and colorful incidents and is appropriately staged. Miss MacDonald's company includes the dependable Charles Richman, who returns to the screen after a long absence. James Young directed.

PROGRAM READER

A story of the theatre—of an actress who had everything to live for behind the footlights. Fame was hers and fortune, too. She was a star. Yet she gave up these assets for domestic life. This is the sum and substance of "Curtain," the First National picture which comes to this theatre next ———— with the beautiful and talented Katherine MacDonald as the star. Rita Weiman wrote the story which originally appeared in the pages of the Saturday Evening Post, while James Young, one of the leading directors of the day, staged the offering. Does the actress find happiness away from the footlights? Does she return? These questions are answered for you in this absorbing story of the theatre. Be sure to see it.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have a story of the theatre—a story which is always fascinating. It is life-like in every particular. So you might give an inkling of what it is about. Bring forth that Rita Weiman is one of the leading playwrights and authors of the day. Tell that the story originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. Play up Katherine MacDonald. She is acknowledged to be one of the most beautiful actresses of the screen, if not the most beautiful. Use stills of her and if you employ an artist be sure to have him draw a likeness for your frames. Play up that Charles Richman returns to the screen after a long absence. Bring out that it is a human, intimate drama of the theatre. The title is a winner and should come in for some special exploitation.

CATCH LINES

See "Curtain," a fascinating story of the theatre. See the most beautiful star of the screen, Katherine MacDonald, in a gripping, human drama.

Was it final "curtain" for her when she gave up the footlights for a domestic life? See Katherine MacDonald in her greatest picture.

"THE LEOPARD WOMAN"

Melodramatic Romance Adapted from Adventure Story

"THE LEOPARD WOMAN" as published in the Saturday Evening Post was a stirring story of adventure, woven about a graphic description of the native tribes of the African Congo district, their habits and customs and possessed a considerable historic value.

The picture is an episodic and rather commonplace melodramatic romance in spite of the commendable effort to make the production truly big from a technical angle and to obtain the atmosphere of the country which Mr. White so vividly described in his novel.

The basic idea of the yarn has been retained, but the real climax, the race to the far distant native tribe whose friendship was so much desired by both England and Germany is almost lost sight of in depicting the romantic scenes between House Peters and Miss Glaum.

The picture can not fail to impress with its attention to detail, but there are few sequences, just two to be exact, which register as drama. The mystery part of the story is gone. The hunting episodes that were no small part of the original are pretty tame affairs. None of the unique native types of the book have been transferred to the screen with any sort of individuality.

Two things, however, do stand out even above the production part of the feature. Both Miss Glaum and Mr. Peters are dominant figures in their respective roles and are responsible for many scenes that may be called interesting.

The principal fault of the picture lies in the story. In an attempt to condense it and also give the star a major role, much that was of actual value has been left out. Also much that made Mr. White's story so interesting was not good screen material.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Madame—The Leopard Woman.....Louise Glaum
John Culbertson.....House Peters
(Miss Glaum, supported by Mr. Peters, heads a cast numbering more than 300, even the principal members of which are too numerous to mention.)
Directed by Wesley Ruggles from a story by Stewart Edward White. Supervised by J. Parker Read, Jr.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Leopard Woman," one of the most exciting serial stories ever published in The Saturday Evening Post, by Stewart Edward White, has been adapted to motion pictures with Louise Glaum in the title role and House Peters playing opposite in a part equally as prominent, will be the attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

The story of "The Leopard Woman" is the colorful tale of a race into the African Congo country by Miss Glaum and Mr. Peters, each representing a European country who desired the friendship of a far distant native tribe and the romance which develops on the trip between the two people who were enemies when they started.

The atmosphere of the Congo district with its unique negro characters has been faithfully reproduced and from a production standpoint alone the offering is one of the big film events of the year.

Miss Glaum as the leading character, in the diplomatic service of a country at odds with England, has a role which fits her like a glove while House Peters as the English sportsman and big game hunter, is quite as dominating a figure. The picture is unique in that after the opening sequences only two white persons are in the cast all the rest playing colored roles.

PROGRAM READER

Louise Glaum and House Peters are dominant figures in the screen adaptation of Stewart Edward White's great story of adventure, "The Leopard Woman," which comes to this theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

"The Leopard Woman" is the story of two people, a renowned big game hunter, House Peters, and a diplomatic agent, Miss Glaum, of another European country, who start on a mission in opposition to each other; into the heart of the great African desert to make friends with a far distant native tribe.

It is a great story of romance and adventure with much that is colorful and dramatic presented in the ever changing sequences before the end is reached. Miss Glaum has a role for which she is eminently fitted and Mr. Peters as the sportsman is equally as well cast. A large cast playing the roles of the natives are used in many scenes that are of such magnitude that the picture really deserves to be classified as a spectacle.

"The Leopard Woman" was a Saturday Evening Post story of unusual worth and has thrilled millions in fiction form. As a photoplay it retains all its real dramatic worth and is offered as a super-special production that should interest all those who like strong stories of adventure and romances of the unique type.

SUGGESTIONS

The box office angle of this production is the star's fame, with House Peters a close second and the fame of the novel. Next comes the magnitude of the production viewed from a technical angle. Ballyhoo stunts with "black boys" are also good stuff. Lobby displays similar to those used for "Shipwrecked Among the Cannibals" are suitable. Cut-outs of the star and stills showing the big scenes of the picture will get attention. For newspaper displays use good scene cuts, preferably those with plenty of action.

CATCH LINES

Stewart Edward White's greatest novel enacted in a way that will be a revelation. Louise Glaum in a role of unexcelled dramatic power; supporting her House Peters and a cast of players numbering half a thousand.

A story of darkest Africa, in which Miss Glaum plays the role of a mysterious woman who journeys into the desert at the command of the European government of whose secret service she was a member. Romance, intrigue, adventure and the atmosphere of the Congo artistically and effectively combined.

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

"VOICES"
(Victor Kremer-State Rights)

Crude Production of Familiar Story

IF "Voices" brings them into the theatre expecting another "Earthbound," and they will surely be disappointed. For the spiritualistic element plays only a negligible part in the production. It consists merely of the voice of a dead mother which comes to warn her son to protect his sister, and it takes the place of coincidence in bringing relief to the suffering heroine. The remainder of the picture is simply crude melodrama revolving about the dangers that befall an innocent little country girl when she comes to the big city to study music. She is lured into vicious society, and, after the impression has been given that she has been wronged, disappears. Then her brother learns of her danger through his mother's voice and sets out to find and revenge her. He punishes the roue by stealing his daughter. The girl is rescued by her lover from an underground dungeon where she has been brought by a gang of thugs in the hope of ransom.

Thus are the motives scattered at random and it is only in the end when the reason for everything is explained. Great credulity is demanded to be satisfied with this explanation. The sub-titles, in their efforts to be flowery, are pedantic, and a misspelled word is inexcusable. The cast is not above the average and no particular player stands out. There are supposed to be some elaborate society scenes showing the frolics of the "dry bathers." These are only mildly attractive.

"Voices" will certainly not appeal to a high class audience. The tale of the wicked city and the unsophisticated country lass must be very well done and artistically done to really impress in these days. The exaggeration of the millionaire villain, for instance, with his scantily clad black servants is far away from truth. These faults, however, will appeal to a certain class who want to see their millionaire villains painted in true movie style, and their heroine terribly abused.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

THE CAST

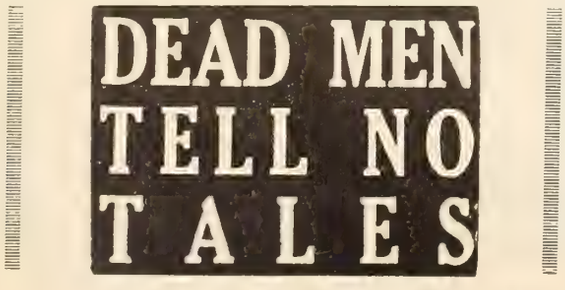
John Vance ..... Corliss Giles
Mary Vance ..... Diana Allen
Tom ..... Gilbert Rooney
Justin Lord ..... Henry Sedley
Marion ..... Gladys Coburn
Frank Mears ..... Harold Foshay

Story and direction by Chester DeVonde.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Voices," which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ————, is a motion picture that has already aroused considerable discussion. For it is a story built upon the absorbing theme of spiritism. Although it does not present any arguments for or against the cause, it will create interest among the patrons of the ———— theatre. It is satisfied with presenting the facts —the return of the dead to counsel their loved ones and to guide them on the correct road to happiness and contentment.

"Voices" is not a ghost story. It is an unusually interesting drama which hinges upon the return to earth of a dead mother in order to aid her children. The greater part of the picture is laid in New York city, where a country girl comes to take up the study of art and pit herself against the City, so reluctant to grant success. She learns, however, it is not always philanthropy that prompts men to aid her in her struggle for her ambition. Her brother hears the voice of his dead mother, urging him to go to her aid. From this point the dramatic situations come thick and fast, all leading up to a sweeping and thrilling climax.



The story and direction are the work of Chester DeVonde, and the all star cast includes Corliss Giles, Diana Allen, Gilbert Rooney and Henry Sedley.

PROGRAM READER

Is it possible that the dead return? Would a mother cease to love and protect her children when death overtakes her? Or would she, if it were possible, send her voice back to earth to warn them of their dangers, to comfort them in their sorrows, and to aid them to fulfill their ambitions? It is about this absorbing question that the photoplay "Voices" has been built. "Voices" will be shown at this theatre on ————. Although it deals with the question of spiritism, it is in no way an improbable ghost story. Instead, it is a gripping drama of life in New York City, filled with startling situations and developed in such a way that it is bound to hold the attention of the audience. The cast includes many well known film players among whom are Diana Allen, Gilbert Rooney, Henry Sedley and Corliss Giles. Both direction and story are the work of Chester DeVonde. It will be shown at the ———— theatre for ———— days.

SUGGESTIONS

The title offers the best exploitation angle that this picture possesses. Numerous teaser ads. are possible from the title, which is really a teaser in itself. Although the spiritualistic theme is only secondary in the production, you can say that it is a story of the return of the dead, and one which also does not call upon impossible supernaturalism to supply its drama.

"GOOD REFERENCES"
(First National)

Star's Popularity May Get It By

GOOD picture material must be scarce indeed when a star of Constance Talmadge's standing and a producer of Mr. Schenck's experience and reputation must needs use that of which "Good References" is builded.

"Good References" is a series of incidents, few of them at all original and many of them illogical and improbable when used as they have been in this, that present little of drama and less of comedy. The picture can hardly be termed a vehicle since Miss Talmadge is not given much opportunity for a display of her little tricks in acting that have been the foundation of her success. Her role is of even of less importance than that of Vincent Coleman.

However, the star looks nice in a one piece bathing suit, the technical part of the production is excellent in every way, a very good cast has been secured in her support even down to the bits, one of which is played by George Faucett, who doesn't get his name on the program and maybe the admirers of Constance, who are legion will be satisfied. If they are, take off your hat to her for she didn't have much to work with when she made "Good References."

The picture tells what happened to Mary Wayne, who got a job as social secretary to William Marshall, college cutup, whom his aunt is trying to educate into a lounge lizard. At the end of five reels William decides that Mary is the only girl, something that has been apparent from the beginning and the inference is they live happy ever after.

Ned Sparks, who could get some comedy out of a undertaker role, provides a few laughs. Constance wears a lot of nice clothes in some scenes and the abbreviated bathing suit we mentioned in others, looking charming, either with or without.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

William Marshall ..... Vincent Coleman
Peter Stearns ..... Ned Sparks
Miss Caroline Marshall ..... Nellie P. Spaulding
Nell Norcross ..... Mona Liza
Kid Whaley ..... Mathew L. Betts
The Bishop ..... Arnold Lucy
The Landlady ..... Dorothy Walters

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Pretty Constance Talmadge, the ingenue of them all, sister Norma's most dangerous rival in popularity, is to be presented in a new comedy drama, "Good References," at the ———— theatre, beginning ————.

Miss Talmadge is cast as the social secretary to a young New York aristocrat whom an aunt is trying to educate into a member of the social set, when that individual prefers prize fights and poker parties.

She doesn't succeed in making "Bill" a lounge lizard, but she does get a lifelong job with him as a wife and the match is one of true love on both sides to say nothing of aunty who had great plans for preserving and adding to the family name, but finally comes to think so much of Constance that she approves the match.

There isn't so much tense drama in "Good References" unless the scenes where "Bill" punches a prizefighter for not being nice to Constance are considered such, but there is plenty of the kind of comedy that the admirers of Miss Talmadge prefer lots of nice clothes, including a one-piece bathing suit that will interest both the feminine and male sexes and many pretty scenes of all descriptions

The cast in support of the star is unusually capable and includes Ned Sparks in a good role.

PROGRAM READER

Another Constance Talmadge vehicle under the title of "Good References" will be the attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

Miss Talmadge is cast in the role of a girl, forced to earn her own living when her father dies and who secures a position as social secretary for a young man, who prefers prize fights and poker parties to the life of a lounge lizard.

She doesn't make "Bill" take to social life and thereby, according to rich aunty's idea uphold and add to the family name, but she does grab off a job as "Bill's" wife, the match being love at first sight on both sides.

Even aunty who had other ideas at first is converted and approves of the "Mary."

In support of the star are such well known players as Vincent Coleman, Ned Sparks, George Faucett and others of equal importance.

Miss Talmadge wears some nice clothes, including a one-piece bathing suit that will appeal to the male as well as the feminine sex and the picture is unusually attractive in its stage settings and scenic locations.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill the star, calling attention to her popularity, other recent pictures that have pleased, giving some attention to the title which is attractive, then give a little outline of the plot, enough to get over the idea that Constance was selected to make a social lion out of a young man who preferred the company of prizefighters with mention of the romance that followed. Use plenty of stills of the star both in your lobby and in framing your newspaper displays. Give the supporting members of the cast some of your space, especially Ned Sparks, Vincent Coleman and George Faucett. This is not a good subject for prologue or lobby display and we would confine our advertising to the newspapers and bill boards. The good title makes the latter well worth while.

CATCH LINES

"Oh What a Girl Was Mary." She undertook to make a lounge lizard out of a chap who preferred prize fights and poker parties and lost her job as a social secretary. But she got another and better one. Wife to the man who liked to call himself a "roughneck" and be democratic rather than go in for pink tea parties just to uphold the family name.

In this Constance is a social secretary. A social secretary who wears, not large bone ribbed spectacles but a one-piece bathing suit. Yes, she lost the social secretary job but she got another one. Guess what? You win.

"THE MARRIAGE PIT"
(Universal)

Interesting Story of Big Business and Feminine Pride

FRANK MAYO'S latest picture makes fair entertainment throughout. He has been given a highly suitable role—a powerful, forceful, Wall street broker, who finds it easier to fight his way to the heights of business success than to win access into a woman's heart.

The production is not entirely a one-part production and upon the shoulders of Lillian Tucker falls a goodly bit of responsibility. She plays the wife, who marries Richard Strong because of the wishes of her parents. She is proud, however, and believes that she is above him socially. This is the one thing that does not ring true. There are sub-titles talking about "cast"—a something that is really not so paramount in American life as the picture would lead one to believe.

Strong (Mayo) of dominating personality refuses to allow her to leave his home, but, caring for her happiness, plans to set her free, provided that the man she really loves should meet with his approval. The man in question is the over-immaculate Ray Ripley, who of course is discovered to be already married. The young wife finally admits that she has been too proud and there is a happy ending.

The Wall street atmosphere has not been overdone, although they do talk of a million dollars without blinking an eye. There is not physical action, but the attention is held fairly well without it.

The supporting cast give a very good account of themselves. Besides those already mentioned, Dagmar Godowsky gives a commendable performance as the very Frenchy actress. Lillian Tucker and Frederick Vroom, both old-timers, are satisfactory in their smaller parts.

"The Marriage Pit" is built upon no very new material, nor is it particularly gripping, but it gives its star a fine part, and with smooth continuity and good incident, it will interest.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

THE CAST

Richard Strong	Frank Mayo
Elinor Rossiter	Lillian Tucker
Charles Dalton	Ray Ripley
Edwin Rossiter	Frederick Vroom
Tim Marsh	Hal Wilson
Zoldene	Dagmar Godowsky
Mrs. Rossiter	Belle Stoddard Johnson
Daniel Brewster	Boyd Irwin
Fiske	Robert Dunbar
Billings	Judson Vernon
Gordon	Will Herford

Story by Frederick Isham.
Scenario by Wallace Clifton.
Directed by Frederic A. Thomson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Marriage Pit," which will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————, is a story of Wall street brokers and a girl. Richard Strong, a part played by the popular Frank Mayo, "comes out of the West" and wins success in the great financial center of New York. Money he attains, but what he longs for most—the love of pretty Elinor Rossiter, is denied him. Through his sheer strength of will and masterful personality, he wins the girl's hand, but not her heart. Admitting that he is a failure in the marriage game, he is about to give her her freedom, when the feminine pride gives way to something more noble and more truly feminine—the love of a wife for her husband.

The cast in "The Marriage Pit" is an especially capable one. Lillian Tucker supports the star who has been hailed as giving his finest performance in this feature. Certainly it is a role that suits him perfectly. Others in the cast are Ray Ripley, Frederick Vroom and Dagmar Godowsky. Frederic Thomson directed the production.

PROGRAM READER

Another especially well liked star of filmdom, Frank Mayo, has the starring role in "The Marriage Pit" which will be the attraction at the ———— on ————. "The Marriage Pit" is a story of Wall street. Mayo plays Richard Strong, a young man who has risen to prominence in the financial world. But as a lover he has failed ignominiously.

Romance and the thrills of big business make up the greater part of the production. It makes a thoroughly interesting picture and one that you will never regret having seen. In the supporting cast are such favorites as Dagmar Godowsky, Ray Ripley and Lillian Tucker.

SUGGESTIONS

Appeal to the Frank Mayo following as strongly as possible. Insist that it gives him one of the best roels of his career. Work up the Wall street atmosphere and develop the romance that surrounds "big business." You can get a teaser campaign out of the title, such as "do not fall—into 'The Marriage Pit.' You will not, of course, if you see it in time." Another one would be "Success in business means failure in love. Thus it was in 'The Marriage Pit.'"

CATCH LINES

A story of a big man who played the big game of business and won. Then he played the big game of love and—almost lost.

Frank Mayo in one of the most attractive roles of his career. A story of Wall street and a woman's pride.

The greatest mistake in life is not to admit a mistake. It took Elinor Rossiter a long time to realize this. See "The Marriage Pit."

"YOU NEVER CAN TELL"
(Realart)

A Real Success from Every Angle

YOU can tell 'em that "You Never Can Tell" is about the best thing in light comedy to come through this season, also a perfect starring vehicle for Bebe Daniels, and still preserve your reputation for veracity.

True it is that if the producers had stuck consistently to sequences having to do with the plot, the picture would have lasted about two reels, but then the offering would not have been half as entertaining, for it is the semi-humorous incident, some of it plain "hokum," that is sandwiched about a sort of a modern Cinderella idea which lifts the picture out of the every-day class.

Author, star, director and supporting cast have all contributed in making the production what it is, a real hit. Bebe has a role which fits her like a glove, but she is not entitled to any greater credit than are Jack Mulhall, Harold Goodwin, Neely Edwards and a little girl who played the other check room girl role who doesn't get her name on the program. "You Never Can Tell" is virtually what every picture should be, an all star production, and this praise goes double for author, continuity writers and director. Such a display of intelligence as has been evidenced all around deserves recognition.

The story of "You Never Can Tell" concerns principally the love affair of Rowena Patricia Jones, a check room girl in a Metropolitan hotel, who would like to and does marry money, although she thinks she is getting a taxicab chauffeur. This not so new idea is given some good twists and every sequence provides its share of entertainment and a full measure of laughs.

The picture has exploitation opportunities galore, one of the biggest being a fashion show staged the same way as one used in the film, which by the way is not dragged in by the ears, but is an important part of the continuity.

The exhibitor who doesn't grab this picture is letting a golden opportunity slide by.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Rowena Patricia Jones	Bebe Daniels
Prince	Jack Mulhall
William Vaughn	Edward Martindel
Mrs. William Vaughn	Helen Dunbar
Jimmy Flannery	Harold Goodwin
Mysterious Sport	Neely Edwards
M. Brian	Leo White
Mrs. Jones	Mrs. Harry Davenport
Mr. Jones	Graham Petit

From a Saturday Evening Post story by Grace Lovell Bryan.
Scenario by Tom Geraghty and Helmar Walton Bergman.
Directed by Chester Franklin.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Bebe Daniels, whom everyone will remember as the dashing beauty who used to romp about in Harold Lloyd's comedies, a great idea from a Saturday Evening Post story and a fine cast of supporting players among whom are Harold Goodwin, who has been Mary Pickford's leading man, Jack Mulhall and Neely Edwards, are all responsible for the best comedy hit of the season in Realart's "You Never Can Tell," Miss Daniels' first starring vehicle.

The story of "You Never Can Tell" is about Rowena Patricia Jones, a check room girl in a big New York hotel who would like to marry a rich husband and does while all the time thinking she is getting hitched up to a chauffeur. It is another demonstration that clothes make the man or rather a man and a woman this time, for it is the fine feathers of a French he-dressmaker which gives Rowena her start toward a home and a husband on Fifth Av.

"You Never Can Tell" is just entertainment but it is as fine an example of intelligently produced photoplay entertainment as has ever been presented to the public. If you like pictures that are honestly funny, clean, wholesome and different then see "You Never Can Tell," at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

PROGRAM READER

Bebe Daniels, our old time favorite with Harold Lloyd, is now a full-fledged star and is to be offered in her first starring vehicle, "You Never Can Tell," at this theatre beginning ————.

In "You Never Can Tell" it is agreed that Miss Daniels has one of the most entertaining pictures of the season, one which ranks with "23½ Hours' Leave" in originality and real clean fun.

The star is cast as the check room girl of a New York hotel with whom a rich young chap falls in love but who masquerades as a taxicab driver during his wooing of the beautiful but poverty stricken Rowena Patricia Jones, guardian of his hat and gloves.

It is a sort of a modern Cinderella tale is "You Never Can Tell" but it has twists and surprises and much clean comedy and Bebe Daniels has a part which fits her like a glove. Also the production is one which might well be termed all star.

There is Harold Dunbar, formerly Mary Pickford's leading man, Jack Mulhall, Neely Edwards and a half dozen others of recognized ability.

SUGGESTIONS

If you play this picture in the near future, by all means use it for a fashion show tie-up, going to the scenes of the picture itself for your style of presentation. Bill Miss Daniels big, the story and the supporting cast, especially Jack Mulhall and Harold Dunbar. Call attention to the fact that it is Bebe's first starring vehicle and mention the Saturday Evening Post story from which it was adapted. Personal guarantee as to entertainment qualities are not to be overlooked if you go in for this sort of thing.

CATCH LINES

A story of a girl named Jones who wanted to marry money enough so she wouldn't have to worry about how the rent was going to be paid.

About Rowena Patricia Jones, who presided at the check room and longed for a home on Fifth Av.
